PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN KING CHARLES I. AND HIS SECRETARY OF STATE, SIR EDWARD NICHOLAS

CORRESPONDENCE OF SIR EDWARD NICHOLAS AND VARIOUS MEMBERS OF THE ROYAL FAMILY, DURING THE COMMONWEALTH AND PROTECTORATE

PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN SIR EDWARD HYDE (AFTERWARDS EARL OF CLARENDON) AND SIR RICHARD BROWNE, AMBASSADOR TO THE COURT OF FRANCE, IN THE TIME OF KING CHARLES I.

A SELECTION FROM THE CORRESPONDENCE OF SIR RICHARD BROWNE

GENERAL INDEX TO THE DIARY AND CORRESPONDENCE
LETTERS OF MRS. EVELYN.

WITH HER CHARACTER,

BY DR. BOHUN;

FROM THE ORIGINAL IN HIS HAND-WRITING.
CHARACTER OF MRS. EVELYN,

BY DR. BOHUN.*

I had lately occasion to review several letters to me from Mrs. Evelyn of Deptford. After reading them, I found they were much to be valued, because they contained not only a complete description of the private events in the family, but public transactions of the times, where are many curious and memorable things described in an easy and eloquent style.

Many forgotten circumstances by this means are recalled afresh to my memory; by so full and perfect a narration of them, they are again present to my thoughts, and I see them re-acted as it were before my eyes. This made strong impressions on my mind, so that I could not rest till I had recollected the substance of them, and from thence some general reflections thereon, and from thence drew a character of their author, so far only as by plain and natural inferences may be gathered from their contents. This was not performed in a manner worthy of the design, but hastily and incorrectly, which cost no more time than could be employed at one sitting in an afternoon; but in this short model, Mrs. Evelyn will appear to be the best daughter and wife, the most tender mother, and desirable neighbour and friend, in all parts of her life. The historical account of matters of fact sufficiently set forth her praises, wherein there could be no error or self-conceit; and declare her to be an exact pattern of many excellent virtues; but they are concealed in such modest expressions, that the most envious censurers can't fix upon her the least suspicion of vanity or pride. Though she had many advantages of birth and beauty, and wit, yet you may perceive in her writings an humble indifference to all worldly enjoyments, great charity, and compassion to those that had disoblige her, and no memory of past occurrences, unless it were a grateful acknowledgment of some friendly office; a vein of good-nature and resignation, and self-denial, runs through them all. There's nothing so despised in many of these letters as the fruitless and empty vanities of the town; and they seem to pity the misfortunes of those who are condemned by their greater quality or stations to squander away their precious time in unprofitable diversions, or bestow it in courtly visits and conversations. Where there happens to be any mention of children or friends, there is such an air of sincerity and benevolence for the one, and religious concern for the happiness of the other, as if she had no other design to live in the world than to perform her own duty, and promote the welfare of her relations and acquaintance.

* The Rev. Dr. Ralph Bohun, D.C.L., was a scholar at Winchester College, and was elected probationary fellow of New College, Oxford, at the early age of 19. In 1671 he wrote a Discourse on the History and Nature of Wind; and in 1685, he completed his Doctor's degree. His connection with Evelyn's family arose from his having superintended the education of his son.

There's another observation to be collected, not less remarkable than the rest, which is her indefatigable industry in employing herself, and more for the sake of others than her own: This she wrote, not out of vain glory, or to procure commendation, but to entertain them with whom she had a familiar correspondence by letters, with the relation of such accidents or business wherein she was engaged for the month or the week past.

This was a peculiar felicity in her way of writing, that though she often treated of vulgar and domestic subjects, she never suffered her style to languish or flag, but by some new remark or pleasant digression kept it up to its usual pitch.
The reproofs in any of these numerous letters were so softly insinuated, that the greatest punishment to be inflicted upon any disobligation was only to have the contrary virtue to the fault they had been guilty of, highly applauded in the next correspondence, which was ever so managed as to please and improve.

Scarce an harsh expression, much less any evil surmise or suspicion, could be admitted where every line was devoted to charity and goodness. This is no effect of partiality, but appears in the particular instances, so that the same judgment must be made by all unprejudiced persons who shall have a sight of them.

Any misfortune or disappointment was not mournfully lamented, but related in such a manner as became a mind that had laid in a sufficient provision of courage and patience beforehand to support it under afflictions. All unfortunate accidents are allayed by some consolatory argument taken from solid principles. No kind of trouble, but one, seems to interrupt the constant intention to entertain and oblige; but that is dolorously represented in many of the letters; which is the loss of children or friends. That being an irreparable separation in this world, is deplored with the most affectionate tenderness which words can express. You may conclude that they who write in such a manner as this, must be supposed to have a just sense of religion, because there can scarce be assigned one act of a beneficent and charitable temper but has many texts of the Gospel to enforce it. So that all good Christians must be very useful and excellent neighbours and friends; which made this lady ever esteemed so. She was the delight of all the conversations where she appeared, she was loved and admired, yet never envied by any, not so much as by the women, who seldom allow the perfections of their own sex, lest they eclipse their own; but as this very manifestly and upon all occasions was her temper, the world was very grateful to her upon that account. This happiness was gained and preserved by one wise qualification; for though no person living had a closer insight into the humours or characters of persons, or could distinguish their merits more nicely, yet she never made any despising or censorious reflections: her great discernment and wit were never abused to sully the reputation of others, nor affected any applause that might be gained by satirical jests. Though she was extremely valued, and her friendship prized and sought for by them of the highest condition, yet she ever treated those of the lowest with great condescension and humanity.
The memory of her virtues and benefits made such deep impression on her neighbours of Deptford and Greenwich, that if any one should bring in another report from this, or what was generally received among them, they would condemn it as false, and the effect of a slanderous calumny:
either they would never yield that any change should happen to this excellent lady, or they'd impute it to sickness, or time, or chance, or the unavoidable frailties of human nature. But I have somewhat digressed from my subject, which was to describe her person or perfections no otherwise than may be gathered from the letters I received;* they contain historical passages and accounts of any more or less considerable action or accident that came to her knowledge, with diverting or serious reflections as the subject required, but generally in an equal and chaste style, supported by a constant gravity, never descending to affected sallies of ludicrous wit.

It's to be further observed, that though she recites and speaks French exactly, and understands Italian, yet she confines herself with such strictness to the purity of the English tongue, that she never introduces foreign or adopted words. That there's a great steadiness and equality in her thoughts, and that her sense and expressions have a mutual dependence on each other, may be inferred from hence—you shall never perceive one perplexed sentence, or blot, or recalling a word in more than twenty letters.

Many persons with whom she conversed or were related to her, or had any public part in the world, were honoured by very lively characters conferred on them, always just and full of discernment, rather inclining to the charitable side, yet no otherwise than as skilful masters who paint like, yet know how to give some graces and advantages to them whose pictures they draw. The expressions are

* Copies of many letters to Dr. Bohun were found at Wotton, but not to other correspondents, as specimens of her manner and great good sense.

clear and unaffected, the sentences frequent and grave, the remarks judicious, the periods flowing and long, after the Ciceronian way; yet though they launch out so far, they are strict to the rules of grammar, and ever come safe home at last without any obscurity or incoherence attending them.

I will only give one instance of a person who was characterised by her in a more favourable manner than he durst presume that he deserved; however, to show the method of her writing, I shall set it down. "I believe (such an one) to be a person of much wit, great knowledge, judicious and discerning, charitable, well natured, obliging in conversation, apt to forget and forgive injuries, eloquent in the pulpit, living according to known precepts, faithful to his friend, generous to his enemy, and in every respect accomplished; this in our vulgar way is a desirable character, but you'll excuse if I judge unrefinedly who have the care of cakes and stilling, and sweetmeats and such useful things."

Mrs. Evelyn has been often heard to say concerning the death of her admirable and beloved daughter, that though she had lost her for ever in this world yet she would not but that she had been, because many pleasing ideas occur to her thoughts that she had conversed with her so long, and been made happy by her for so many years.

Oxon, 1695, Sept. 20.

[This character of Mrs. Evelyn would appear to have been written thirteen years before her death. She outlived her husband nearly three years, and, by her will dated in February 1708-9 (the year and month of her death), desired to be buried in a stone coffin near that of "my dear husband, whose love and friendship I was happy in, fifty-eight years nine months; but by God's providence left a disconsolate widow, the 27th day of February, 1705, in the 71st year of my age. His care of my education was such as might become a father, a lover, a friend, and husband; for instruction, tenderness, affection, and fidelity to the last moment of his life; which obligation I mention with a gratitude to his memory, ever dear to me; and I must not omit to own the sense I have of my parent's care and goodness, in placing me in such worthy hands.
To Mr. Bohun.*

Sir,

I am concerned you should be absent when you might confirm the suffrages of your fellow collegiots, and see the mistress both Universities court; a person who has not her equal possibly in the world, so extraordinary a woman she is in all things. I acknowledge, though I remember her some years since and have not been a stranger to her fame, I was surprised to find so much extravagancy and vanity in any person not confined within four walls. Her habit particular, fantastical, not unbecoming a good shape, which she may truly boast of. Her face discovers the facility of the sex, in being yet persuaded it deserves the esteem years forbid, by the infinite care she takes to place her curls and patches. Her mien surpasses the imagination of poets, or the descriptions of a romance heroine’s greatness; her gracious bows, seasonable nods, courteous stretching out of her hands, twinkling of her eyes, and various gestures of approbation, show what may be expected from her discourse, which is as airy, empty, whimsical, and rambling as her books, aiming at science, difficulties, high notions,

* This letter appears to describe the impression produced on the writer by that interview with Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle, to which reference is made in the Diary, vol. ii. p. 23: “Went again with my wife to the Duchess of Newcastle, who received her in a kind of transport, suitable to her extravagant humour and dress, which was very singular.” The date therefore will be 1667.
terminating commonly in nonsense, oaths, and obscenity. Her way of address to people, more than necessarily submissive; a certain general form to all, obliging, by repeating affected, generous, kind expressions; endeavouring to show humility by calling back things past, still to improve her present greatness and favour to her friends. I found Doctor Charlton with her, complimenting her wit and learning in a high manner; which she took to be so much her due that she swore if the schools did not banish Aristotle and read Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle, they did her wrong, and deserved to be utterly abolished. My part was not yet to speak, but admire; especially hearing her go on magnifying her own generous actions, stately buildings, noble fortune, her lord's prodigious losses in the war, his power, valour, wit, learning, and industry,—what did she not mention to his or her own advantage? Sometimes, to give her breath, came in a fresh admirer; then she took occasion to justify her faith, to give an account of her religion, as new and unintelligible as her philosophy, to cite her own pieces line and page in such a book, and to tell the adventures of some of her nymphs. At last I grew weary, and concluded that the creature called a chimera which I had heard speak of, was now to be seen, and that it was time to retire for fear of infection; yet I hope, as she is an original, she may never have a copy. Never did I see a woman so full of herself, so amazingly vain and ambitious. What contrary miracles does this age produce. This lady and Mrs. Philips! The one transported with the shadow of reason, the other possessed of the substance and insensible of her treasure; and yet men who are esteemed wise and learned, not only put them in equal balance, but suffer the greatness of the one to weigh down the certain real worth of the other. This is all I can requite your rare verses with; which as much surpass the merit of the person you endeavour to represent, as I can assure you this description falls short of the lady I would make you acquainted with: but she is not of mortal race, and therefore cannot be defined.

* The once "matchless Orinda;" now forgotten. An edition of her poems had come out during the present year.
To Mr. Bohun.

If it be true that we are generally inclined to covet what we admire, I can assure you my ambition aspires not to the fame of Balzac, and therefore must not thank you for entitling me to that great name. I do not admire his style, nor emulate the spirit of discontent which runs through all his letters. There is a lucky hit in reputation, which some obtain by the defect in their judges, rather than from the greatness of their merit: the contrary may be instanced in Doctor Donne, who, had he not been really a learned man, a libertine in wit and a courtier, might have been allowed to write well; but I confess in my opinion, with these qualifications he falls short in his letters of the praises some give him.

Voiture seems to excel both in quickness of fancy, easiness of expression, and in a facile way of insinuating that he was not ignorant of letters, an advantage the Court air gives persons who converse with the world as books.

I wonder at nothing more than at the ambition of printing letters; since, if the design be to produce wit and learning, there is too little scope for the one; and the other may be reduced to a less compass than a sheet of gilt paper, unless truth were more communicative. Business, love, accidents, secret displeasure, family intrigues, generally make up the body of letters; and can signify very little to any besides the persons they are addressed to, and therefore must lose infinitely by being exposed to the unconcerned. Without this declaration, I hope I am sufficiently secure never to run the hazard of being censured that way; since I cannot suspect my friends of so much unkindness, nor myself of the vanity to wish fame on so doubtful a foundation as the caprice of mankind. Do not impute my silence to neglect. Had you seen me these ten days continually entertaining persons of different humour, age, and sense, not only at meals, or afternoon, or the time of a civil visit, but from morning till night, you will be assured it was impossible for me to finish these few lines sooner; so often have I set pen to paper and been taken off again, that I almost despaired to let you know my satisfaction that Jack * complies so well with your desires, and that I am your friend and servant,

M. Evelyn.

To Sir Samuel Tuke.

Sir,

I think myself obliged, since this is the day designed for your happiness, to express the part I take in your joy, and join my wishes for the continuance of it. The favour you intend me on Monday I receive with much satisfaction, but fear you will not afford it us long, when you find the many inconveniences of a little house, a disordered family, and the difference in judgments; all which may be dispensed with, whilst health, the discretion of servants, and other accidents, permit; but should there be a miscarriage in any of these, the end of our joining families ceases, and I, who am sensible of my own defects and tender of my friends' contentment, cannot entertain the hopes you will be sufferers many days. Let not this surprise you, since it proceeds from a cautiousness in my nature, which will not suffer me to engage, where I have any part to act, with that assurance some are more happy in; therefore prepare your lady with the nicety of my temper, and the truth of this, that I may not pass in either opinions for a person that promises more than can be performed by,

Sir, your humble servant,

M. E.

To Mr. Bohun.

Sir,

July 17, 1668.

By honest John and my last to Jack, you have learnt Sir Samuel is entered into the state of matrimony. I do assure you, if marriage were the happy establishment in his opinion, he has made choice of a wife every way worthy of him, for person, quality, wit, good mien, and severe virtue; her piety cannot be questioned after living seven years a canoness, which includes all the strictness

* Her son, then at College under Mr. Bohun's care. of a nun, the vow only excepted. They are both here at present, and will remain some time till they can fit themselves for housekeeping; I am generally well pleased with such favours from my friends, and I am extremely satisfied with the conversation of this fair lady. I am apt, I confess, to enlarge the characters of them I esteem, but to be just to the merit of this person I ought to say much more. I will suppose your college affairs take up much of your time, and that your diversions in Oxford are very charming; yet neither should make you so absolutely forget Deptford and those in it, as not to impart some of your pleasant thoughts, at spare moments especially, knowing how well we receive your letters, and how naturally our sex loves novelty, that I cannot but accuse you of unkindness; however, I am, Your friend and servant,

M. E.

To my Brother Glanville* in France.

Sir,

I have received your kind letter, and am not astonished Mr. Fuller finds so great a difference between a French pension and Woodcott table. Let him know eating is the least design of travellers; that particular waived, I still persevere in the defence of France; and will believe, when you have overcome the difficulties of the language, and gained some acquaintance amongst the better sort, visited the Court, seen the noble buildings and pleasant seats in and about Paris, you will render to what has been related to you, that it is an excellent country, wherein indeed riches are partially distributed, yet employed to great use and ornament. The people are a little various in their tempers, for which blame the several nations from which they are descended; but all agreeing in the desire to enlarge their bounds, and augment the glory of the prince under whom the most of them do but breathe. I am sorry it was not my good fortune to stay till you came, or your lot to come when I was there, that I might have been

* See Diary, vol. ii. p. 367, for a character of Mr. Glanville, who had married Evelyn's sister. The letter is undated, but the mention of Lord Arlington's influence seems to fix the year as that immediately following Clarendon's disgrace, and the triumph of the Cabal; namely 1668-9.
assisting to your conversation. An ambassador is daily threatened to be sent from hence; but it is not yet decided which of the two able statesmen shall carry it—the Lord Buchan, or Mr. R. Montagu; since it does not depend on their abilities for the employment, but their being disposed to marry my Lord Arlington's wife's sister, as the necessary article to arrive to that dignity. When either is declared, you shall not fail of the address you desire. In the meantime any English gentleman must be well received by my Lord of St. Alban's. Though your eye be continually over my cousin your son, and your care as great as a tender and knowing parent's can be, yet I am persuaded you will find the breeding in an academy the likeliest way to answer all ends except that of expense, which must be greater there than elsewhere; but not to be valued, considering the advantages of good conversation, the emulation which young persons of good birth raise in one another, the learning all manly exercises in community, and the gaining a good air and assurance best acquired by example, which works most with such ingenious and observing tempers as my cousin seems to be. The orders are generally good, the discipline strict, and, I am informed, the chief master in our time has left a nephew that not only equals but excels him; and is also of the religion.* If you are inclined to take this course with my nephew this winter, you will find him out in the Faubourg St. Germain, so pleasant a part of the town I admire you can live out of it. When you walk to the Charity, if you inquire for the Rue Farrere you may see how pleasantly our house was situated. I fear you will judge I mention Paris with that affection persons in age remember the satisfaction of their youth, to which happiness was the nearest, at least in their opinion, and so past that there is no hopes of a return. Such, I confess, in part are my thoughts of that place, but must not flatter myself you will confirm me in them, who arrive there in a more discerning age, and carry with you a little prejudice against the people; yet something is to be expected from the justice of your nature in their behalf, and from the goodness of your nature in mine. Excuse the liberty of,

Your affectionate sister,

M. E.

* A Protestant, Mrs. Evelyn means.
To Mr. Terryll in Ireland.*

SIR,

I have received yours with the enclosed to Mr. Bohun, which shall be conveyed to him with care. I am not to doubt of your good reception where your merit is well understood; I am rather to wish you may not meet with engagements to keep you long out of this country, which, if so unhappy as to impart vices to its neighbours, cannot boast of many virtues to spare. This may truly be esteemed an admiring age, if distance from what is worthy define it well; and what leads me to this opinion is the strange veneration paid to the ruins of ancient structures, greater than the entire edifices ever could pretend to; a sort of justice virtue challenges in our time, and leaves the practice to the choice of the succeeding age. To inform you of what passes here cannot be acceptable, since I suppose you are, not without the usual curiosity of travellers, desirous to collect foreign novelties; which, should you be exempt from, little is worth communicating to you from hence. The censure of our plays comes to me at the second hand. There has not been any new lately revived and reformed, as Catiline, well set out with clothes and scenes; Horace, with a farce and dances between every act, composed by Lacy and played by him and Nell, which takes; † one of my Lord of Newcastle's, for which printed apologies are scattered in the assembly by Briden's order, either for himself who had some hand in it, or for the author most; I think both had right to them. ‡ State affairs I am not likely to give you an account of, if Mr. B.'s character be taken of me, who

* Mr. Terryll was the son of Sir Timothy (variously called by Evelyn, Tirrill, Tyrell, and Tyrill), as to whom see vol. i. 275 and 383; vol. ii. 99; and vol. iii. 308.

† See Pepys' Diary, last edition, vol. v. p. 89. "Horace" was a poor translation of Corneille's tragedy by Mrs. Philips. See Evelyn's Diary, vol. i. p. 32, where Evelyn contrasts the virtue of the authoress with that of the ladies (Castlemaine and others) before whom he saw it performed.

‡ An entry in the Diary of Pepys (vol. v. pp. 100, 101) will probably explain this allusion.
fancies I know nothing of the Dutch war till the guns went off at Chatham; and in my own concerns the most important good-fortune which has befallen me of late is the honour I have had to kiss my lady your mother's hands, with two of your sisters, whose stay in town being short as well as mine deprived me of the satisfaction I rejoiced much in. My father and Mr. Evelyn are infinitely your servants, and I am,

Sir, your humble, &c.

Sir,

Had I not been assured by some of your friends that you were upon your return into England about Easter, I should not have omitted my acknowledgments for your obliging letter; but since finding, upon better information, that good fortune is not so near, give me leave to beg your excuse for an undesigned fault, and inquire farther what can be the charms of a place which has not only invited but detained persons of so much wit and merit in it? Can it be the natives' fame for learning of late years which is the powerful attraction? or the Irish beauties above those of other countries, which engages through such dangerous seas? It cannot be judged by Mr. Terryll that interest only should be the motive; there must be something more reasonable than rich fields and herds to souls so much raised above the vulgar. But I will give a stop to my curiosity, and satisfy myself that the same prudence which was our guide here accompanies you everywhere, and will maintain your choice of every thing but friends, which admits of no objection except the permission you give me to be of the number; yet I am certainly as much as any,

Sir, your most, &c.

To my Brother Glanville in France.

Sir,

I have received yours of the 25th May, and will hope mine in answer to your first came safe to you, since it passed under your niece's cover. Of any person I know, you had the least reason to visit France, either to improve mien, wit, or style, since all necessary accomplishments were ever granted you; but I acknowledge a nicer way of raillery is practised where you live than is used amongst us, or you would never address yourself to me for lessons in an art too well understood by you already. All I pretend to is, to keep myself on the defensive; plainness and sincerity are my best guards; I confess beauty and youth sometimes stand in need of subtlety and stratagems to evade and rescue them from the surprises of men, but persons wanting those charms are sufficiently secured from any attacks that may exercise the invention. Your return hither will be very pleasing to your friends. I imagine you so furnished with such critical and pleasant remarks of the countries, people, and customs, that, should you oppose former characters of France, your relation would be rendered to, as being latest and made with most judgment. Yet let not curiosity pass in your opinion for the only inducement which makes me desire your return, since your merit challenges my best wishes, which shall accompany you till I can assure you in a better manner how much I am,

Sir, &c.

To my Brother Glanville at Wotton.

Sir,

I will not study much or long to excuse those weak tears you so slight and condemn in women, as believing they are always at our command, but I can assure you neither the flesh-pots nor the onions caused them in me. I have often been as nobly and as civilly entertained at Wotton,* and yet have I parted with dry eyes. It is reality and kindness which gains upon my spirit. I will not deny but a confusion of thoughts proceeding from gratitude, a sense of my own want of

* The reader may be reminded that Evelyn did not succeed to the paternal estate of Wotton till after his elder brother George's death; nearly thirty years after the date of this letter.
merit, an apprehension I should make unequal returns, with the approaching loss of so much happiness, produced those unusual and unseasonable effects in me, though common in others, without the least mixture of pride or emulation. This your severity will hardly allow of, but when you shall learn more of my nature and the secrets of my heart, which I wish you already knew, so I might be spared the telling them, because advantageous to me, and which are not concealed from you out of the least distrust of your discretion or friendship, but from niceness I cannot very well justify. Sometimes philosophical reflections have been of use to me, but I was surprised with abundance of kindness, of which you may justly claim a large share, since

I am, &c.

To Mrs. Evelyn of Woodcot.

Sept. 26, 1670.

Dear Sister,

The indisposition which you carried out of town, and the solitude you live in, gives me a desire to inquire after your health, and a title to interrupt your melancholy thoughts,* though it be but with the assurance of our wishes for your perfect recovery. One who is of so judicious a temper as you are, cannot, if you give your reason leave to act, but be armed against all accidents which may disturb your quiet in a great measure. I confess to be wholly insensible of sorrow or misfortune is as little to be wished, as it is seldom to be found; since the inequalities of human life contribute much to the happiness of it, so that the variety of ills prove not the greater share; which hitherto your condition seems to have exempted you from. It is true you have newly lost a friend and a guide, but you have it now more absolutely in your own power to be whatever prudence and generosity dictates to you. And as you have it in your power, so I am confident it is in your will to oblige and gratify a friend, especially one who may challenge your kindness in some sort upon the account of avowed services and much worth, one who has pursued your satisfaction preferably to his own interest, which shows he has a true sense of honour,—and not to keep you longer in suspense with the character of a person, better known to you by his actions than by any description I can make of him, it can be no other than my brother Glanvil; who certainly, being named, tells you wherein you may acknowledge past obligations and engage him for the future, by advancing his pretensions to my Lady Lewtner. Possibly you may think it early to propose anything of that nature to a discreet widow and your own sister, who it may be you could wish might never have any thoughts of changing her condition, upon like resolutions of your own; but be assured, persons so considerable for beauty, virtue, and fortune, will never enjoy that calm of those thoughts long; attempts will be made; persons of all degrees of merit and sufficient quality will make addresses, and value themselves by breaking through those rules of decency that they may be the first discoverers of their extreme; therefore you ought not to blame my brother if he has already given marks of his, who from a long knowledge of my Lady’s great merit and obliging nature, has taken courage to lay himself at her feet; from whence he must not hope to be raised if she were of a haughty mind, that could allow of no happiness but in great titles and vast riches (in which certainly it is not wholly to be placed); but did it consist in either, she is so secured by a large provision of both, that she need not require an addition from a husband; all that seems to be required is, her choice in a man that can value her perfections, be a friend to her interests, and make her happiness his own; which qualifications may assuredly be allowed my brother, who protests with all imaginable zeal and sincerity that he has no other design but her satisfaction and advantage, and to live with honour the rest of his days, towards which who would not that could assist, and who better can than yourself; an endeavour which acquits your obligations to a sister that you love, and a friend that you value; which that you will do cannot be thought strange, but that I should concern myself in my Lady Lewtner’s affairs may appear so, being neither solicited by my brother, who knows nothing of my presumption in his behalf, nor called to council by you who need no advice to do well; however let me beg of you to give a favourable construction to this freedom, and believe it proceeds from the kindest intentions I can express, since I am, Dear sister, your, &c.

To Mrs. Evelyn of Woodcot.

Dear Sister,

I very much rejoice in the improvement of your health, and do still persist in my opinion that you may owe much of your happiness and quiet to your own prudence. I also continue to believe that my brother Glanvil deserves very much from you; and you have rightly guessed my meaning by the intrigue between my cousin Will and my niece, which would have proved no dishonour to him had he resolved to succeed in it, since we judge of things of that nature commonly by the event, and not from the means, but he being tender of your satisfaction made honour a very nice point. Give me leave to rectify a little mistake in Mr. Evelyn’s behalf, who though he might often wish one of the name worthy of my niece, never declared for my cousin Will more than that, if she should think him sufficiently deserving, with my brother and your consent, it was not a choice to be contemned and deplored, since he is likely to make a very good man; and farther than such a reply I believe he never made to several discourses on that subject, urged at several times by many of our relations and acquaintance. As to my Lady Lewtner’s concern, I do acknowledge I ought not to have gone so far had I not flattered myself with the hopes of your embracing any proposition so much to my brother’s advantage; but possibly you have reasons in reserve more powerful than those which are visible to the world against him; and it is not my single opinion, but the belief of many others, that my Lady, your sister, though never so prudent and cautious, may not injure herself in marrying such a person as he is; yet I will not importune you to be his advocate since you declare so positive a dislike to second marriages in general, the only excuse you can make for not being his friend in this

To my Cousin Mary Evelyn.

Dear Cousin,

I have had often cause to acknowledge the noble entertainment and great civilities I have received at Wotton, but I never was more sensible of my obligations to my brother and yourself, than at present, from a full persuasion I was never treated with more reality and kindness, which gains infinitely upon such a temper as mine is: I wish you were as well inclined to believe as I am that passage in Scripture reasonable, which advises a woman not only to leave, but to forget her father’s house for a husband, and as well assured you should meet with as worthy and deserving a family as I have done. Some part of this you will think strange doctrine, but I seriously beg of you not to persist in your opinions concerning marriage, and that you will conform to so good a father’s desires as you have in this particular, and endeavour to establish your happiness beyond his life, which, that you may long enjoy, with all other blessings I heartily wish, being

Dear Cousin,

I am so well persuaded of your good nature and merit, and so sensible of your best civility, that I wish for a more important occasion to express the desire I have to serve you. I have endeavoured to perform your commands in fitting my little niece with a mantle coat, bodice coat, petticoat, narrow shoes and stockings, which I bespake two sizes less than any that are made for a child of a year old. If they prove to nurse’s mind, or have any fault, let me know it that the next may be the same or more exact. I was not willing to send all, believing it some difficulty to fit the lady by guess. Though you never want very good company, I cannot but wish myself sometimes two or three hours in a day with you, to be a witness of the pleasant conversation I fancy such wits as Mr. Duncan and others of that strain afford you. I hope my cousin Mary is perfectly recovered; that your father, husband, uncle, and brother are in perfect health, to whom my father presents his most humble service and particularly to yourself; assure them of my humble service, and esteem me, Dearer Cousin,

Your humble servant,

M. E.

To her Son.

Jack,

I have received your letter and request for a supply of money; but none of those you mention which were bare effects of your duty. If you were so desirous to answer our expectations as you pretend to be, you would give those tutors and overseers you think so exact over you, less trouble than I fear they have with you. Much is to be wished in your behalf: that your temper were humble and tractable, your inclinations virtuous, and that from choice, not compulsion, you make an honest man. Whatever object of vice comes before you, should have the same effect in your mind of dislike and aversion that drunkenness had in the youth of Sparta when their slaves were presented to them in that brutish condition, not only from the deformity of such a sight, but from a motive beyond theirs—the hope of a future happiness, which those rigorous heathens in moral virtue had little prospect of, finding no reward for virtue but in virtue itself. You are not too young to know that lying, defrauding, swearing, disobedience to parents and persons in authority, are offences to God and man: that debauchery is injurious to growth, health, life, and indeed to the pleasures of life; therefore, now that you are turning from child to man, endeavour to follow the best precepts, and choose such ways as may render you worthy of praise and love. You are assured of your father's care and my tenderness; no mark of it shall be wanting at any time to confirm it to you, with this reserve only, that you strive to deserve kindness by a sincere honest proceeding, and not flatter yourself that you are good whilst you only appear to be so. Fallacies will only pass in schools. When you thoroughly weigh these considerations, I hope you will apply them to your own advantage, as well as to our infinite satisfaction. I pray daily God would inspire you with his grace, and bless you.

I am,

Your loving mother,

M. Evelyn.

To my Brother Glanville at West Dean.

December, 1670.

Sir,

Though I will not murmur that you prefer West Dean to Deptford to pass your Christmas in, since the attractive upon all accounts is so much more powerful, yet give me leave to lament the loss of so good conversation as I promised myself in yours: but to let you see I can prefer the satisfaction of a friend to my own, I will turn my complaints of you into good wishes for the success of so reasonable an address, as I am persuaded you are now making; and could I question any perfection in the ladies you so much admire, it would only be how one who deserves so well should so long dispute the merit of such a man as you are; do not imagine I pretend to compliment in return of those civilities you pass upon our sex, since, having the least title to your praises, I will have the least share in the acknowledgments; but to be just to you and serious in my opinion, I do repeat, what I have so often declared with sincerity in your concern, that might I, after such a loss as a good husband must be to a virtuous wife, hope to repair it by the choice of a second, I should not only hope, but think myself secure, when I had twenty years known and conversed with the freedom which honour and friendship permits, with a person of so much wit, good humour, generosity, prudence, and integrity as you possess; one of so entire a reputation in the world, so generally esteemed, and so fortunate in obliging others, and, to conclude, above all one resolved to love me disinterestedly, without which I confess the rest would prevail but little. This my Lady Lewtner cannot be ignorant of; and being convinced that it is true, how is it possible she can resist her own happiness in making yours? what scruple can remain in the breast of a worthy woman, who finds all that is desirable in her power? she may oblige you with her person and show her generosity too, since you will not pretend to equal her in fortune, though in nothing else inferior were articles to be drawn: I would take the liberty to own as much to the lady herself, were the acquaintance I have with her such as is requisite to recommend advice; but I dare not offer my sense to be the guide of another's actions, though I flatter myself I do not err in this opinion: but what discourages me chiefly is the slight reception my sister Evelyn gave a few lines I writ to her on this subject, who I thought might have endeavoured more to your satisfaction than I find she is inclined to do, since not inconsistent with her own interest and the value she has for such a sister. Pardon the liberty I take to tell you my thoughts plainly, and the interruption I give those happy moments you now enjoy, to which I wish to bring increase.

To my Lady Tuke after the death of Sir Samuel Tuke.

January 28, 1670-1.

Madam,

I acknowledge these are trials which make Christian philosophy useful, not only by a resignation to the Divine decree, but by that hope which encourages us to expect a more lasting happiness than any this world can give: without which we were extremely wretched, since no felicity here has any duration. We are solicitous to obtain, we fear whilst we possess, and we are inconsolable when we lose. The greatest conquerors themselves are subject to this unsteady state of human nature; let us not murmur then, for we offend; and though in compliance to your present sense of things I could join with you in grieving, having made as particular a loss as ever any did in a friend, I dare not indulge your sorrow, especially when I consider how prejudicial it will prove to yourself and those dear pledges that are left to your care; but I do rather beg of you cease grieving, and owe that to reason and prudence which time will overcome. Were I in so good health that I could quit my chamber, I would be daily with you and assure you how really I am concerned for you. You cannot doubt the affection of your, &c.

To Mr. Bohun.

Sayes-court, Jan. 29, 1670-1.

Sir,

If a friend be of infinite value living, how much cause have we to lament him dead! Such a friend was Sir Samuel Tuke, who retired out of this life on St. Paul's day [25 Jan.] at midnight, and has changed the scene to him and us, and left occasion to all that knew him to bewail the loss. You need not to be made sensible by a character of a person you knew so well, and you can enumerate virtues enough to lament and shed some tears justly; therefore spare me the sorrow of repeating what effect it has wrought on such a mind as mine, who think no misfortune worth regretting besides the loss of those I love. Do not blame me if I believe it almost impossible to meet with a person so worthy in himself, and so disposed to esteem me again; and yet that is not the chiefest cause of my affliction. I might waive much of my own interest, had I not so many partners that will suffer equally. These are the trials which make Christian philosophy useful, not only by a resignation to the Divine decree, but by that hope which encourages us to expect a more lasting happiness than any this world can give, without which we were extremely wretched, since no felicity here has any duration. The greatest conquerors themselves are subject to this unsteady state of human nature, therefore well may I submit, whose concerns are trivial in respect of others. Yet this I conclude, that we die by degrees when our friends go before us. But whilst I discourse thus with you, I should consider what effects melancholy reflections may have on a splenetic person, one who needs not cherish that temper. I will only add that I am now able to quit my chamber, which is more than I could do these fourteen days, and that

I am, Sir,
Your servant,

To Mr. Bohun.

Sir,

I must believe you are very busy, hearing so seldom from you, and that you are much in the esteem of Dr. Bathurst,* since he judges so favourably of your friends. It cannot be the effect of his discernment which makes him give sentence in my behalf, being so great a master of reason as he is; but it is certainly a mark of his great kindness to you that he defers to your judgment in opposition to his own. I should not question yours in other things, but the wisest may be allowed some grains, and I conclude you no less a courtier than a philosopher.
Since my last to you I have seen "The Siege of Grenada," a play so full of ideas that the most refined romance I ever read is not to compare with it: love is made so pure, and valour so nice, that one would imagine it designed for an Utopia rather than our stage. I do not quarrel with the poet, but admire one born in the decline of morality should be able to feign such exact virtue; and as poetic fiction has been instructive in former ages, I wish this the same event in ours. As to the strict law of comedy I dare not pretend to judge: some think the division of the story not so well as if it could all have been comprehended in the day's actions: truth of history, exactness of time, possibilities of adventures, are niceties the ancient critics might require; but those who have outdone them in fine notions may be allowed the liberty to express them their own way, and the present world is so enlightened that the old dramatic must bear no sway. This account perhaps is not enough to do Mr. Dryden right, yet is as much as you can expect from the leisure of one who has the care of a nursery.

I am, Sir, &c.

M. Evelyn.

To Mr. Bohun.

May, 1671.

Sir,

I wish you had remembered my answer to some discourses you held before your departure concerning my cousin Glanville: it might have spared you the trouble, and my cousins the importunity, of a proposition not at all to their advantage or our satisfaction, since Jack is designed for the law in good earnest, in which he can make little progress, should marriage intervene; neither will his grandfather, father, and myself sacrifice him for a fortune, but shall rest satisfied with such a mediocrity as may be obtained with stratagem when his age and discretion will allow of that tie. Besides, having heard my cousin had intentions to bestow his daughter and fortune upon one of his name, it would not become us to select for ourselves to the prejudice of a relation we should willingly assist; therefore, upon the account of generosity or mistaken interest, let this design die as civilly as you can: when your time permits you to think of coming to town, you need not question your being welcome at Deptford: we are all well in health; all our relations are in town, your Deptford friends are well, and I am,

Sir, your servant,

M. E.

To my Brother Glanville.

Oct. 8, 1671.

Sir,

I have of late fancied myself very well established in your good opinion; I will not examine merit or the causes of things too strictly for fear I return to doubts again: your last confirms my belief, being a very obliging letter. Love cannot be the motive from a man pre-possessed, nor can interest in either of us be the inducement; it must then be concluded a mutual disposition to like one another's inclinations and tempers, which we will call friendship, and which, from this day forward, let neither piquant railery nor pleasant interrupt, let neither censure nor whisper destroy; and if you sign these articles you shall never complain of a breach on my side.
Well, what do you think of widows? are they not odd creatures? There is now a lady, newly a fine prize, near you. Who hovers about her yet? Can twenty years esteem of the Sussex lady change into a violent passion for the Dorking lady? If need were, cannot you imagine more probability in an address there, than the other way; were she as considerable, I would advise it: but when one goes to yoke oneself one would be glad it should be very easy; consideration of religion and fortune will come into one's head whether one will or no: and then, it may be, my friend Glanville is a happier man with liberty than so engaged; for marriage to such minds as yours and mine requires plenty and quiet, without which considerations, keep as you are, master of yourself; take heart, and, let fortune throw cross or pile, be merry, and always a friend to one that will ever be yours, since I am,

Dear Brother, your affectionate,

Oct. 9, 1671.

Dear Jack,
I do not question your being very happy in so fine a place and so good company, neither do I think you wholly pass your time in diversion. I wish you early wisdom; it may prevent late repentance. Your father is gone a little journey with Mr. Treasurer, to Newmarket, and to my Lord Arlington's upon his earnest invitation;* your grandfather is newly recovered of a fit of the gout; your sisters are all well except Moll, who, I fear, has taken a cold which may end in an ague. Mrs. Durfe comes down stairs after your sister Susan's fashion, she is yet so weak; we have been like to lose Mrs. Turner, but she is now passed danger; we shall certainly lose Madam Howard, and your spouse who is this night arrived, if the news hold that Sir Thomas Osborne brings his family this next summer to Deptford; Mr. Bohun sticks so close to his Spanish brother that we seldom see him; I have rare chocolate of his presenting for you. The foul weather and storms at sea have produced many shipwrecks and strange escapes. A seaman of this town, being the twentieth in a rotten ship boat, which sunk by their weight, and the only one amongst them that could swim, endeavoured to save the life of two of his companions that laid hold of an oar by driving them to the shore; but finding his skill and strength fail him he shook off one of the men, who gave him such a parting look so full of sorrow and pity, that though he came safe to land with his other companion, he cannot banish the thought of that dreadful farewell, nor almost forgive himself for not perishing with him. Another adventure of a Yarmouth fisherman, not less remarkable, who, being at sea when a great storm arose, alone in a little boat endeavoured to get to a bigger vessel which lay at anchor, but was loosened by the storm and set a drift, which he would have recovered, but in the attempt lost his oars, the waves dashing over him, so as he was almost overturned into the sea; when he saw a ship not far off, towards which he made, and by signs implored aid, which they speedily granted, and hauled him aboard. Few hours after, God gave him an occasion to show his gratitude; they being strangers, unacquainted with the coast, and in great danger of striking against the sands, which this old seaman perceiving, though he could not be understood by them in words, made them sensible by taking the rudder hastily from the steersman and turning another course, and so brought them safe to Yarmouth, where he saw his own abandoned barque returned safe also freighted with as many men as she could bring to harbour, which seemed to be a kind of providence for the safety of these men, who else had perished in a bigger vessel. To this accident it were desirable that some fine lady had made an escape to complete the adventure, which might have given you a subject for a copy of verses,—but what may not a poet add? Amongst the ships that made the late discovery of the new strait, one had the ill fortune to perish with most of her men, and those few which escaped were preserved by the generosity of a seaman that could swim, who ventured five times with success to the rescue of five of his companions which he brought safe to shore, but perished endeavouring to bring in the sixth; an attempt that merits a better fate, and not outdone in the Roman story, since more greatness of mind has not been often expressed. Were you here, there would be no end of these stories; but it is time I finished this discourse, to remember my obligations to my brother for his favours to you, and to wish my cousin joy of the little one, since I hope the sorrowful hour is past. My service to my cousin Joe, to my cousin John, and to my cousin Mary when she returns.

Oct. 9, 1671.

Since there has happened so much foul weather I have very much rejoiced that you did not make the Irish voyage, and do congratulate the safe arrival of your fair Ladies. Had you been very kind you would have passed some of your time at Deptford, but when I remember how little diversion there is here, and how ill you were treated, I forgive your long absence. I have sent your treasure, and approve of your generosity. Christian has left a small bundle for you, which Dubourg will deliver you. I hope it will not be long before I come to town, and if I can hear where to find you, I will endeavour to let you know it, that I may wait upon your Ladies, whose affections you cannot fail of as soon as you are known to them. I have many strange adventures and remarkable escapes at sea to relate for the encouragement of one that were ready to embark; but since you are not in any such hazard, I will reserve them till I see you, and do wish you established to your satisfaction: it is but what you merit, and it is what I would contribute to were I capable, since no person is more affectionately your friend, than is Sayes-court, March 2, 1671-2.

SIR,

When I have assured you that my usual indisposition has treated me so severely this winter, that I have had little leisure to think of anything but the means of gaining health and ease, I am persuaded you will excuse me if I have not decided in my thoughts which was the greatest captain, Cæsar or Pompey; whether M. De Rosny were not a great politician, a brave soldier, and the best servant that ever Prince had for capacity, fidelity, and steadiness, a man strangely disinterested, infinitely fortunate, and every way qualified to serve such a master as was Henry the Great, who, notwithstanding human frailties, was worthy to be faithfully dealt with, since he knew how to judge and to reward. But why do we always look back into times past? we may not reproach our own, since here is at this present a scene for gallantry and merit, and whilst we may hope, we must not condemn. Should I tell you how full of sorrow I have been for the loss of Dr. Bretton,† you only would blame me; after death flattery ceases, therefore you may believe there was some cause to lament, when thousands of weeping eyes witnessed the affliction their souls were in; one would have imagined every one in this parish had lost a father, brother, or husband, so great was the bewailing; and in earnest it does appear there never was a better nor a more worthy man. Such was his temper, prudence, charity, and good conduct, that he gained the weak and preserved the wise. The suddenness of his death was a surprise only to his friends; as for himself it might be looked upon as a deliverance from pain, the effect of sickness; and I am almost persuaded God snatched him from us, lest he might have been prevailed with by the number of petitions to have left him still amongst us. If you suspect kindness in me makes me speak too much, Dr. Parr* is a person against whom you cannot object; it was he who preached the funeral sermon, and as an effect of truth as well as eloquence he himself could not forbear weeping in the pulpit. It was his own expression that there were three for whom he had infinitely grieved, the martyred King, my Lord Primate, † and Dr. Bretton; and as a confirmation of the right that was done him in that oration, there was not a dry eye nor a dissenting person. But of this no more.

M. Evelyn.

To Mr. Bohun. January 4, 1672.

Sir,

Do not think my silence hitherto has proceeded from being taken up with the diversions of the town, the éclat of the Court gallantry, the entertainment of the wedding masquerades, which trebled their number the second night of the wedding that so there was great disorder and confusion caused by it, and with which the solemnity ended: neither can I charge the housewifery of the country after my return, or treating my neighbours this Christmas, since I never find any business or recreation that makes me forget my friends. Should I confess the real cause, it is your expectation of extraordinary notions of things wholly out of my way. Women were not born to read authors, and censure the learned, to compare lives and judge of virtues, to give rules of morality, and sacrifice to the Muses. We are willing to acknowledge all time borrowed from family duties is misspent; the care of children's education, observing a husband's commands, assisting the sick, relieving the poor, and being serviceable to our friends, are of sufficient weight to employ the most improved capacities amongst us; and if sometimes it happens by accident that one of a thousand aspires a little higher, her fate commonly exposes her to wonder, but adds little of esteem. The distaff will defend our quarrels as well as the sword, and the needle is as instructive as the pen. A heroine is a kind of prodigy; the influence of a blazing star is not more dangerous or more avoided. Though I have lived under the roof of the learned, and in the neighbourhood of science, it has had no other effect on such a temper as mine, but that of admiration, and that too but when it is reduced to practice. I confess I am infinitely delighted to meet in books with the achievements of the heroes, with the calmness of philosophers, and with the eloquence of orators; but what charms me irresistibly is to see perfect resignation in the minds of men, let whatever happen of adverse to them in their fortune: that is being knowing and truly wise; it confirms my belief of antiquity, and engages my persuasion of future perfection, without which it were in vain to live. Hope not for volumes or treatises; raillery may make me go beyond my bounds, but when serious, I esteem myself capable of very little, yet I am,

To my Lady Ann Carr.

March 26, 1672.

Madam,

I can assure you neither the cold weather nor the hilliness of the ways has kept me thus long from paying my respects to your Ladyship, but an indisposition to which I am subject, and which has treated me so severely this winter, that I have been confined to my chamber and house above three months without once venturing out so far as the church; a kind of weaning me from that sensible loss we have made by the death of Doctor Bretton; a more worthy man there never was, and one in whom there is so many things to be justly said in his praise, that should I but enter upon the discourse you might fear the length of my letter. I know not how to acknowledge your Ladyship's last favour by any return of news from hence. Madam Howard has almost quitted this place, with whose concerns I am as little acquainted as during her last long absence; yet I wish all imaginable happiness to that family. The marriage of Betty Turner with a citizen of London is the latest joy has been in this parish, the fame of which has not reached your Ladyship yet, at which fine clothes, fine company, and great feasting could not be wanting. My father has been so happy as to be free from the gout this winter. Mr. Evelyn is at present taking care of those that fall by the hands of the Dutch, being gone to visit Chatham and Dover, and the rest of those places where sick and prisoners put in; Jack is with him. My little flock of girls are all well, and I promise myself so much health as may give me leave to wait upon my Lady Vere and your Ladyship very suddenly. I keep the portrait of the Duchess of Richmond with care, that I may return if you should desire it; I am so out of the way of such kind of wits that I dare not pretend to judge of it, yet I fancy the Duchess deserves all that is said of her; and did the author pass for lover, much more might have been expected from him, but he has now another kind of gallantry in chase, which I wish may prove successful to him and those other brave men that daily hazard themselves in the war. I am so near the guns that your Ladyship will not wonder that I should be solicitous for a happy event, and I am not less concerned to be esteemed,

Madam, your most humble servant,

and wits, and these so refined that the charm of that splendour has no power on their spirits; persons whose ideas are of a higher nature, whose minds are pure and actions innocent; these, if I could be capable of envy, I should make the subject, but I am so far from failing in that kind that I rejoice in your happiness. I acknowledge you a better judge of such perfections, and to merit the honour of being an admirer of the calm, prudent, and beautiful Alecone, the friendship of the sprightly saint, and to be allowed the liberty of a playfellow to Ornethia, whose excellencies unite your admiration and esteem, since you have qualifications which may entitle you to as much good fortune as any man. If knowledge and discernment in curious and choice speculations, joined with virtues not common though desirable in your sex, may obtain return of friendship from persons who cannot be unjust, and therefore must allow you a share of their esteem, you may pretend; but should I hope for a part, it must be upon no other account, but as I have a little interest in you, and possibly a kindly thought of by you, which happiness produces many advantages to January, 1672-3.

Sir,

I find the slight cares of a family are great hindrances to the study of philosophy, and that one grows less and less capable of improvements by books, as one grows more acquainted with the world; yet amongst those fine experiments which fall in my way, could I meet with any one equally curious with those of the Greshamites, though as usefull and trifling, I might hope in time to be in something famous; learning is become so easy of access by the late industry of some who have removed the bar language put to the illiterate, and make women pretenders to judge of Alexander's valour and conduct, and determine whether the effeminacy and imbecility of the Persians did not abate of the miracles of such a conquest; that it was suddenly and unjustly gained, and as precipitously lost; and yet allow the man heathen worth who made all that stir till prosperity made him forget himself. He might have expected a better fate; but this subject has been in so many boys' mouths and themes, that it is reasonable for me to give it over and fall upon Dr. Pierce's sermons, which is a great step from Homer's admirer. Not to dispute the eloquence of the person who appears more like a Grecian orator than a Christian preacher for three parts of each sermon,—which how necessary, now whole countries are under the Christian profession, I know not,—one would imagine 26 hundred years had worn out the remembrance of idolising insensible orators; that there were no more need of drawing instances from the moral men to encourage virtue, where light and joyful truth have had such influences. But for the selections of young students whose first compositions are far-fetched, and keep alive the stories of the ancients by succession in the pulpit, one should hardly know who Socrates and Zeno were; and of what importance to the congregation, few in it understand. The great example should be Christ, His doctrine, and the effects of it in the first ages of the church, when innocency and purity filled the minds of men; when the sincerity of their words appeared by the manifestation of good works; when the leaders and people lived in mutual charity and love. If this could be brought into fashion again it were a happy effect of men's labours. And since I have seen that piece of the primitive christianity, I fancy we are strangely out of the way to heaven; self-denial is a kind of by-path, and many necessary circumstances of a true believer are wholly out of use. Do not wonder I treat with you in this style, since I am assured you own it as the greatest honour that could have happened to you to serve at God's altar, and therefore cannot be displeased when anything is suggested to His glory. Your last to Mr. Evelyn gave us hope of seeing you suddenly.

To Mrs. Saul.

Mrs. Saul,

The esteem I have had for you as a neighbour and a deserving person, makes me more concerned for the general censure upon your late quitting your husband and family: had you consulted real friends with your design, they never would have advised a separation without equal consent of both parties; there is something so strict and binding in the marriage vow, that but upon extraordinary causes (the examples of which are rare) any divorce can be lawful: women especially being very tender how they violate that obligation, choosing rather to bear with infirmities, to pray for and endeavour the reformation of an ill man, by all the ways respect and love can suggest, and to bear injuries patiently, valuing their mutual reputation above particular satisfaction, as the necessary duty of a good wife, and the common effects of a good Christian, which qualification enables persons to overcome their own inclinations for a better end yet than present or worldly advantages, and secures their future and more lasting happiness. There is no state of life unattended with cares and troubles, afflictions are common and fall to every one's share more or less, therefore we should not without great presumption expect to run the course of this life so smoothly as to meet with no rub by the way. I take the more freedom to enlarge upon this subject with you, because I am really sorry one who appeared so sensible of what became her upon all accounts, as I have often observed you were, should take such ill measures in this last action as you have done; you cannot be ignorant how many there are who rejoice at peoples' misfortunes, and think they excuse their own errors by publishing others' failings; and I wish, and wish it heartily, you had not justified your husband by hurting yourself. I do remember some occasional discourse of yours to me in confidence, concerning some of his miscarriages, which obliged me to lament for you both, that a couple so likely by the agreeableness of person, quality, fortune, and age, should meet with any interruption to their happiness; but do now infinitely bewail it is come to so wide a breach. I was in hopes you had convinced Mr. S. that it was both reasonable as well as convenient to reform the ill habits company might have engaged him in, and that he had wholly designed to take off your suspicion of a relapse; which disposition to virtue and kindness should have been complied with, and cherished by welcome at home, and all endeavours used to confirm him in so good a resolution. I know not what the real cause of dislike is on your part at present, neither will I judge. But were I recommend Mr. S. to a wife in the temper I find him, I should pronounce in his behalf that he is likely to make a wife as happy as any man I know, if good humour, generous inclinations, industry, and many other good qualities, you have yourself done him the right to acknowledge him possessed of, can contribute towards it. Pray be so kind to yourself and him to return to all the duties of a wife; to forgive past faults like a Christian, to forget them like a friend; to begin your friendship upon a new account; and as caution for him, give me leave to be the person; your word is sufficient for yourself. Since he desires so earnestly to make you happy, banish all obstacles; do not entertain a thought that may check a blessing offered to you both. You will oblige me infinitely by a ready consent to so just a request, you will overcome by it the prejudicial reports concerning you, recover your friends, make an experiment which if successful will prove worth your while. Who would not try it, and submit to harder conditions than any I hope you will find? I beg of you to consider well what is offered you, and assure yourself that my zeal proceeds from a perfect belief of your innocency and merit, and a desire to reunite persons who have both deserved so well the esteem of

Your friend and servant,

Sir,

I acknowledge the receipt of two of your letters unanswered: That of the 20th this day came to my hands,

* The address of this letter is lost. It was probably written to one of her relatives at Wotton.
with a note to Will. Hayes, which I have given him. He will punctually observe your orders concerning your horse; for the beer, according to his judgment of things, he believes, since it is left undisturbed to which cellar it should go, it most properly belongs to his, as being worst furnished of any in Deptford; yet upon second orders it shall be bestowed where you please. You need not fear a long comment upon the lady's censure of my indulgence to children, since I confess myself too much inclined to that failing; but I have a maxim never to disturb the company with my own affairs, in showing dislike to servants' mistakes and children's faults; so that sometimes, I believe, I pass for a very fond mother and remiss mistress; yet it may be, in a convenient place, both are reproved; and amongst those who understand civility very well, this method is not unacceptable. Were I willing to entertain grief, I could answer to every particular of your first letter; but since there is no recalling of the dead, let us not mingle past sorrows with the present; every moment produces new occasions to exercise our morality. To comply with Mrs. Palmer's request it is impossible, till I am as much convinced of the excellency of my style as Mr. Alderson is of his preaching, who assured me his last funeral sermon was an elaborate, judicious, well-timed piece; and then all the scraps I have written shall be at her service. And in the meantime advise her, since she is a person of wit, bred under Doctor Bathurst's wing, and lives in the air of the university, to hazard some of her own lines abroad, and try what justice may be in the world. If I do not enlarge at this time, impute it to Easter-Eve; and excuse this character, scarce legible.

I am, Sir,

Your servant.

To my Brother Glanville.

Decem. the last, 1673.

Sir,

I am not naturally suspicious, especially where I have an esteem. I was, I acknowledge, a little thoughtful what the cause of your silence might be, yet never doubted your friendship; and since it was on so reasonable an account, I am not only pacified for the loss of those kind expressions which I am always sure of from you, but would have added many good wishes to your endeavours for the success in the Captain's concern, which, by this time, I hope is out of question. Pray assure him and his lady I am their humble servant. When you are disposed to make us happy with your conversation, you cannot fail of welcome in a family that rejoice in the hopes of seeing you. You have conversed so much in the world, that you cannot be ignorant either of your own merit, or how kindly you will be received by those that have a real value for you. Be assured neither care nor industry would be wanting if an occasion would offer. Whatever else is unequal to you must be forgiven. The unsteadiness of the times is such, that a great man's favour is no sooner gained, but one is to begin again; and the difficulty is to know where a new endeavour may be made. The next lesson will try how fast some of them sit. If you were one of the house, you have a talent that might improve what interest you please. I suppose your correspondent is so good, I need not entertain you with news. The satisfaction I had in a week's stay in town was not so great that I should trouble you with the relation of it, besides the honour to have the Duchess's hand, visit the Duchess of Modena, &c. Only this particular I cannot omit concerning Sir George Lane, who is married to a daughter of my Lord of Dorset, a young, handsome person, who has 5000l. to her portion. The son desires to go into Ireland; to oblige him perfectly, the father settles 3000l. a year on his son, and reserves as much for a second venture: makes her a thousand a year jointure, and all the advantages in Ireland. I have had the honour to wait on the lady, and to give them both joy. My father has had his turn in town—proceeds as vigorously as he can in his affair, but they stand it out, which forces him to issue out an arrest against them. What that course may produce is yet to learn. He seemed desirous to finish it himself, as being best able to dispute their right, or defend his own; but the gout seizes him so often, though with less violence, that he is the more solicitous to end it. He is at present in bed, but not very ill. We have our workmen still, but hope a little time will finish all. Your brother watches and prays still. Jack studies and ruminates; the girls make a noise; and I lend a little of my time to any one that seems to want it. How well I pass the hours in which I am not serviceable to others, I am no good judge. The conclusion of this year with this day, puts me in mind to wish you happiness with all imaginable joy the next.

I am, &c.

To Lady Tuke.

April, 1685.

How to express the sorrow for parting with so dear a child is a difficult task. She was welcome to me from the first moment God gave her, acceptable through the whole course of her life by a thousand endearments, by the gifts of nature, by acquired parts, by the tender love she ever showed her father and me: a thread of piety accompanied all her actions, and now proves our greatest consolation. The patience, resignation, humility of her carriage in so severe and fatal a disease, discovered more than an ordinary assistance of the Divine goodness, never expressing fear of death, or a desire to live, but for her friends' sake. The seventh day of her illness she discoursed to me in particular as calmly as in health, desired to confess, and receive the blessed Sacrament, which she performed with great devotion; after which, though in her perfect senses to the last, she never signified the least concern for the world, prayed often, and resigned her soul. What shall I say! She was too great a blessing for me, who never deserved anything, much less such a jewel. I am too well assured of your Ladyship's kindness to doubt the part you take in this loss; you have ever showed yourself a friend in so many instances, that I presume upon your compassion; nothing but this just occasion could have hindered me from welcoming you to town, and rejoicing with the best friend I have in the world—a friend by merit and inclination, one I must esteem as the wife of so worthy a relation and so sincere a friend as Sir Samuel was to me and mine. What is this world when we recall past things! what are the charms that keep our minds in suspense! without the conversation of those we love, what is life worth! How did I propose happiness this summer in the return of your Ladyship and my dear child—for she was absent almost all this winter!

She had much improved herself by the remarks she had made of the world and all its vanities—What shall I add! I could ever speak of her, and might I be just to her without suspicion of partiality, could tell you many things. The papers which are found in her cabinet discover she profited by her reading—such reflections, collections out of Scripture, confessions, meditations, and pious notions, evidence her time was not spent in the trifling way of most young women. I acknowledge, as a Christian, I ought not to murmur, and I should be infinitely sorry to incur God’s further displeasure. There are those yet remaining that challenge my care, and for their sakes I endeavour to submit all I can. I thank my poor Cousin a thousand times for her kind concern, and wish she may live to be the comfort you deserve in her, that God will continue the blessing of both, and make you happy—which is the prayer of her who is

Yours, most affectionately,

M. E.

[To these letters of Mrs. Evelyn, may be subjoined two letters which have come into the Editor’s possession since the volume containing her husband’s correspondence was printed, but which so agreeably illustrate Evelyn’s habits and intercourse with his neighbours and friends that it is worth including them in this collection.]

Mrs. Owen to John Evelyn.

Honoured Sir,

I am heartily sorry that I forced you to buy tulips for your fine garden. I must confess your guineas look more glorious than now these tulips do; but, when they come to blow, I hope you will be better pleased than now you are. I have sent you some of my ordinary sort, and, sir, when mine are blown, if you please to come and see them, Mr. Evelyn shall buy no more, but have what he pleases for nothing. I am so well pleased with those that I have, that I shall neither buy more, nor part with any, unless it be to yourself.

I cannot, sir, send my husband’s service to you, because I do not acquaint him with my trading for tulips. Sir John Shaw I cannot yet speak with (being taken up so much with visitors), as to know his mind about a gardener. Sir, I now beg your pardon for my rude lines, and desire you to assure yourself, that my husband and I, upon any occasion, shall be alway ready either to ride or go to serve you or yours. Thus having no more, but desiring to have my service to yourself, your lady, and Sir Richard Browne, and your beloved progeny, I shall take leave, and subscribe myself,

Your most humble servant, to command,

Amy Owen.

John Evelyn to Mrs. Owen.

June 26, 1680.

Mon Amy (that is, My Friend),

I am not so well pleased with Mrs. Owen’s letter as with her tulips, because I am assured there must needs be some mistake, and that my gardener (who, perhaps, does not care that I should purchase anything but through his hands and in the common manner), as was to tell you that I would come myself and make friends with you, did leave out that. Can you ever imagine that I looked on your kindness as an imposing on me? Sure, you know me better than to think so; and that when I told you flowers of less value would better become my poor garden, it was neither to save my money nor reproach your merchandise. But I assure you I not only thank you for [them], but shall condemn you for a very unwise woman if you should forbear to continue a traffic which is so innocent, so laudable, and so frequent even among very great persons. You and I, therefore, must come to a better understanding upon this chapter. In the meantime I had a good mind to have sent you your last present back again, till all this had been cleared; for I do not love to be overcome in point of generosity, though I see that for this present I must be. You seem to think I complained I had not full measure, and think now to make it up by overwhelming me with your kindness. This is a revenge that I cannot long endure, as you shall be sure to find, the first opportunity I can lay hold on. In the meantime I thank you most heartily for all your good intentions, and the kind offices which both you and the Doctor have ever been ready to do me. Sir Jo. Shaw did us the honour of a visit on Thursday last, when it was not my hap to be at home, for which I was very sorry. I met him since casually in London, and kissed him there unfeignedly. I chided myself that I was not there to receive him. Two of our coach-horses are still so lame, that we have not been able to stir out this fortnight; but so soon as they are in very tolerable condition, my wife and I will not fail of kissing your hands, and repaying this civility to Sir John; and so with our best respects to you and your Doctor,

We remain, &c.
PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE

KING CHARLES I.

AND HIS

SECRETARY OF STATE, SIR EDWARD NICHOLAS;

AND AT OTHER TIMES DURING THE CIVIL WAR.
Few more valuable or more interesting illustrations of English history have been at any time made public than the Private Correspondence between Charles I. and his secretary-of-state, Sir Edward Nicholas. These letters were found at Wotton, with the correspondence of Evelyn; his father-in-law, Sir Richard Browne, whose papers he inherited, having been connected by marriage with Mr. Secretary Nicholas; and since their publication they have been quoted and commented upon by every historian or critic of the period on which they throw so much curious and important light.

In no respect illustrating or forming part of Evelyn’s history, the reason which existed for modernising the spelling in the case of the “Diary and Letters” did not here apply. These papers are strictly historical documents, and, as such, are presented in all respects precisely as they were found; with the king’s apostils, by way of answer or remark to his secretary’s information, printed as written in the margin of the secretary’s dispatches; with the queen’s notes and messages appended; with the occasional ciphers as in the originals; and, throughout, whether in these particular letters or in the few additional ones of later date, with a strict adherence to the exact orthography of the individual writers.

The date of the commencement of the letters is one of the most critical in the life of the king. It was that of the journey to Scotland, which preceded the fatal attempt to arrest the five members. The king’s motives for this journey have been variously surmised and stated; but that, besides his hope of effecting a better understanding with the Scotch parliament by personal communication with its members, they also included an attempt by means of the new anticonvenanting Scotch party which had been secretly formed by Montrose, to obtain evidence available against the popular leaders in England, may be gathered from a study of the present correspondence. The feeling entertained in the House of Commons as to what was involved in the king’s departure became manifest as soon as it was ascertained.
to have actually taken place; commissioners being immediately named and appointed to proceed to Scotland, ostensibly to treat with the Scots concerning the satisfaction of the treaty under discussion, but really to thwart as far as possible the king's suspected intentions. The new secretary-of-state, Nicholas, appointed on the flight of Windebank, had it left to him in charge by his royal master to furnish diligent information, during his absence, of what was going on in London; and his letters, noted and answered in the margin by Charles, and posted back to the writer, form the bulk of the succeeding correspondence. They begin with the king's first letter from Edinburgh, written five days after he quitted London, and continue during the whole of the stay in Scotland. After Charles's return there is a considerable interval in the correspondence, but it is resumed at the period of the treaty of Uxbridge, for which Nicholas was appointed one of the commissioners; and is continued through the vicissitudes and disasters of the war, up to the king's detention by the army of the Scots, and his imprisonment at Holdenby and in the Isle of Wight.

Of Sir Edward Nicholas, who plays so prominent a part in this correspondence, and of whom Clarendon remarks that he was appointed secretary upon the king's observation of his virtue and fidelity, and without any other recommendation, some brief account may be expected by the reader. He was the eldest son of John Nicholas, Esq., of Winterbourne Earls, in the county of Wilts; was born in April, 1592-3, educated at Oxford, and entered of the Middle Temple; resided some time in France, and on his return to England, directed his thoughts to public business. His first official appointment was in the time of James I. He was named one of the six clerks in chancery; and afterwards became secretary to Lord Zouch, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, who surrendered that employment to please the king, by enabling him to confer it on the Duke of Buckingham. The duke continued Nicholas in his office, and advanced him to be secretary to the Admiralty. The commissioners appointed to administer the affairs of the Admiralty, on the duke's death, also continued Nicholas as their secretary; and he retained the office till 1636, when Algernon, Earl of Northumberland, being appointed Lord High Admiral, he was removed to the clerkship of the council. This brought him more within the personal view and knowledge of the king, from which resulted his selection for the office of secretary-of-state, when the flight of Windebank left it vacant in 1641. He received his knighthood at Whitehall, at the close of November, 1641, the day after the king's return from Scotland. For his activity and earnestness in the execution of his duties, he had meanwhile become obnoxious to the Parliament, and was one of those excepted in the terms which they offered to the king after he had raised his standard at Nottingham. Notwithstanding this exception, however, they did not refuse to receive him as one of the king's commissioners at the treaty of Uxbridge. He was at Oxford during the time it was besieged by the parliament forces. On the death of the king he went to France, and afterwards joined the exiled prince at Rouen, on his arrival there from Jersey.
In this service he remained, discharging it at various places in France and Holland, till the treaty of Breda, when Charles went to Scotland. On his return, Nicholas again joined him at Aix; and when the Restoration came, in 1660, he was continued as secretary. In October 1662, being then about seventy years of age, he finally resigned the secretaryship, in which he was succeeded by Bennet, afterwards Earl of Arlington. He refused a peerage offered him by the king; and retiring to his seat at West Horsley, in Surrey, an estate which he had purchased of Carew Raleigh, Esq. (son of Sir Walter), died there in September 1669. In the church of that parish are monuments erected to him and his descendants, who continued there till 1749. He left four sons. In 1641, it would appear from the letters now printed, he had a house at Thorpe, in Surrey.

The reader of these letters will scarcely need to be told that he was not only a devoted servant of Charles I., but a diligent and faithful adviser, never scrupling to offer his opinion, and that a conscientious and honest one. It is to the king’s credit that he allowed him to do so, commending his openness, though unhappily for himself he did not always attend to the advice so given. It was Charles’s greatest misfortune to have had few counsellors so judicious, industrious, and experienced as Nicholas; of such unimpeachable integrity, or of a temper so unambitious and averse to intrigue.

* This letter is evidently the first sent by Charles to Sir Edward Nicholas, in answer to his first communication respecting the proceedings subsequent to the King’s departure. The royal journey was by no means agreeable to the Parliament; for, so late as the 7th of August, the Commons desired the Lords to join with them in an attempt to delay the King’s departure for fourteen days. Charles, however, gave his assent on that day to several Bills both public and

In Sir E. N.'s writing:
“19° Aug. 1641. The QUEenes lerc to me.”

Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please yo*r most excellent Ma*tie,
Yesterday I receaved yo*r Ma*ties of the 17th of this month, & in it one to the Queene, & another to my Lo: Keeper: † I forthw* presented yo*r Ma*ties private, and then bade the Parliament farewell. The next day, Sunday, the Commons sat for the purpose of forming and presenting a petition on the subject. On the 9th, his Majesty again gave the royal assent to four Bills, and took leave a second time, telling the Parliament that he should return before Michaelmas, if possible. At two o'clock he set off, accompanied by the Elector Palatine and the Duke of Richmond.

* Oatlands at this time was the Queen’s property, having been granted to her some years before, by the King, for her life. In the preceding year, 1640, her son, Henry of Oatlands, was born there. Oatlands had long been a royal mansion; but the house, which then stood on low ground, was pulled down during the Protectorate, with the exception of a small part, which was again given up to the Queen upon the Restoration.

† Sir Edward Lyttelton, soon after created Lord Lyttelton. He succeeded Finch, and it was not inaptly said of him that he was a to the Queene, wch when she had read, her Maje comanded me to forbear to deliver that to my Lo. Keeper, & took it into her owne custody, for that her Maje said it was written att her entreaty, & that there is now noe occasion for ye delivery of it, as her Maje tells me she will by her next satisfy yo' Maje, & I hope I have donne nothing but my duty in obeying her Majes commaund touching that letter.

Satterday morning the Comittees did set forth towards Scotland,† & that day the Peers adiourned their House till too-morrow: it is conceaved there will not be much business done now in P'liam't ‡ untill they shall understand of the arrivall and recepcon of their Comittees by yo' Maje, whereon all their eyes are fixed.

The Constable of ye Tower is comanded by ye Lo's House forthw' to reside constantly in the Tower, & order is given (as I am credibly told) that there shall be 40 souldiers added to reinforce that garrison, wth new soldiers are to be contynued & paid by the P'liam't here during yo' Majes absence.

Upon a Conference had betweene both Houses, there is an order of P'liam't for ye present disarming good Englishman, a good subject, and learned in the laws; but, not having the same dexterity that his predecessor had, he was not so fitly qualified for his important trust in such perilous and critical times.

* What is apostyled by the King will be printed in the margin of the passages so noted.
† These Commissioners were appointed by both Houses on the 16th of August, with instructions to negotiate with the Scottish Parliament respecting the affairs of that kingdom. Their real mission was to counteract the anticipated effects of the King's presence in Scotland.
‡ Here the Secretary hardly shows his usual discernment. The Commons had been very busy since the King's departure: having brought fresh charges against the impeached Bishops; voted Perry, Jermyn, and Suckling, guilty of high treason; and established a complaint against the Queen's Capuchin Friars. Though the King was gone, yet Commissioners were left to exercise the royal functions in Parliament, and the assent was given to the Bill for Tonnage and Poundage on the 16th of August. Before adjournment also, they had made fresh orders against the Recusants, and also for raising money speedily for the use of the army.
of all Recusants,* and some Comittees of the Houses are appointed to see ye statutes on that behalf forthwith put in execucion.

Upon consideracon of ye great icelousies that are raysed here & spread abroade, as if there were some intencons to make use of some of ye armies to ye prejudice of ye Parliam*, and upon the apparent delay that hath been used in ye paying off, & disbanding ye English armye, w*th hath bene cleerely throughye ye negligence of those whom ye Parliam* hath implied in that service, I humbly beseech yo* Ma* to give me leave to offer to yo* Ma* to the presently to wryte yo* Tres to the Speaker of one or S* to both Houses, taking notice of ye delay & sloth that w*th have bene kept on foote here to ye great greevaunce of yo* sub*ts in ye North, & att a heavy charge to yo* kingdome in England in g*ral, notwithstanding yo* Ma* hath from tyme to tyme by frequent speeches to both Houses often called upon them to ease this yo* kingdome of that greevous burthen. Yo* Ma* now understanding, that (when by ye agreem* w*th the Scots all the Englishe forces are to be disbanded) ye Lo. G*ral hath advertised ye* Houses that there wants 140. thousand pounds to finishe that worke, therefore yo* Ma* may be pleased to quicken the Parliam* here, & to let them know how sensible yo* Ma* is of ye* long sufferings of yo* people of England, & to comand the Houses, (all other matters set apart,) forthwith to apply themselves to free this yo* kingdome of soe heavy & dayly a charge. Such a letter would let yo* people here see yo* care & affect'on to them, & make appeare cleerely to the world that there is noe intenc'on on yo* Ma* to make use of the army here, as may be otherwise insinuated.

* This originated in a complaint from the Commons to the Lords on the 17th of August, that the laws for disarming them were neglected, and that many of them were even screened by members of the Upper House.
I humbly beg yo'r Maties p'don for this bold & tedious discourse, w'h is noe other than an effect of the dutifull affecccon of Yo'r Maties most humble & most obedient servaunt,

Edw. Nicholas.

This morning about 6 o'clock I receaved by ye hands of Mr. Murray yo' Ma'ties of the 22th, & have acquainted my Lo. Keeper, that yo' Ma'ties is well satisfyed w'th his lett't, whereof his Lo'^p is very glad, & acknowledgeth yo' Ma'ties great goodnes to him in it.

Before my receipt of yo' Ma'ties last letter I had acquainted my Lo. Keeper (in ye absence of my Lo. Ch. * Don Alonzo de Cardenas. This is noticed in the preceding letter.
† On the 28th of August when the House of Commons again took this affair into consideration, Sir Benjamin Rudyard spoke loudly against it, founding his objections principally upon the points here stated by Sir Edward Nicholas. The Commons then refused assent to the measure, in which the Lords agreed with them; and a letter, expressing their refusal, was sent to the King.
it crosseth with your Majesty & your House Declaration against ye Spaniard on behalf of your Prince Elector; & therefore my Lord. Keeper thinkes not fitt to hasten ye report of that conference: As soone as there shall be any order or resolucyon in it by ye Parliament, I shall advertise it to your Majesty. I sent your Majesty's letter to Sir Ph. Maynewaring by an express messenger into Northamptonsh: whither Sir Phillip was gone 2 dayes before my receipt of your Majesty to him.

Since Satterday last there hath beene noe business done in Parliament of any publique nature; that I can hear of; but only the order made by the Lordes touching ye election of ye present Sheriffs of London, whereof I gave advertisement to Mr. Thre'r§ by mync of ye 23rd.|| This day ye Lo. Mayor was at the Upper House to get an alteration of that their Lords' order, but the House would not recede from it in any p'ticular, whereat ye Lo. Mayor and cheif citizens seeme to be much troubled.

* Charles Louis, Elector of Bavaria, Prince Palatine of the Rhine, and nephew to Charles I., being the son of his sister Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia.

† He was of Over Peover, in Cheshire, and father to the first Baronet of that name, so created after the Restoration. He was Sheriff of Cheshire in 1639, and Captain in the Cheshire light horse. Collins do not mention his knighthood.

‡ Again the Secretary is remiss, or at fault. Public business was certainly going forward. On the 25th of August the Lords sequestered the temporalities of Dr. Roger Manwaring, Bishop of St. David's, for his contumacy to an order of the House; and, on the day on which Sir Edward wrote his letter, both Houses had a conference respecting a proposed recess of Parliament.

§ "Mr. Treasurer," that is, Sir Henry Vane the elder.

|| This evidently relates to the dispute then existing between the Lord Mayor and the Commons of London; the former laying claim to the choice of one of the Sheriffs, by a prescription of three hundred years. The Livery refusing to abide by this, the Court of Aldermen petitioned the King to decide upon the affair; but the King referred it to the House of Lords, who, after some delay, ordered that the Commonalty should proceed to the choice of the two Sheriffs, at the same time recommending that they would have those who had already been nominated by the Mayor. The Sheriffs chosen were George Garret and George Clark. Sir William Acton, Bart., was the then Lord Mayor; but he was superseded by the Parliament, and replaced by Sir Edmund Wright.
They came beere yesterday.

There is here great expectation what recepecon yo'r Ma^tie will give to y^e Comitees sent hence. I wishe yo'r Ma^tie could have soo tymely expedited yo'r affairs there, as that you might have bene reddy to come away before their arrivall there.*

* The names of the Commissioners were Lords Bedford and Howard of Esricke, Hampden, Fiennes, Sir Philip Stapleton, and Sir William Armyne. The Secretary seems to entertain a reasonable fear of the King's being brought into collision with such Commissioners.

† Not recorded in the Parliamentary Debates.

‡ Jermyn had been especially implicated, by the confession of Colonel Goring, in the alleged plot contrived by certain officers of the army to secure Strafford's escape, and overawe and dissolve the Parliament, by marching the army on London and making the King absolute. Balfour, the Lieutenant of the Tower, baffled that part of it relating to Strafford; and, a quarrel arising between the leaders of the design, Goring and Wilmot ("Gorrein et Hailmot," as Madame de Motteville calls them in her account of the affair), which Jermyn had in vain done his best to reconcile, Goring made a quasi discovery of the plot to Lord Newark, from whom, through Lords Bedford and Kimbolton, it reached Pym. Goring subsequently asserted that for his own part he had refused concurrence with the proposals to put the army into a posture to serve the King, and send a Declaration to Parliament that Episcopacy should not be infringed upon, and that the King's revenue should be established; for he said that he thought it belonged to an army to maintain, not to contrive, acts of state. At the same time he professed that his particular object, in joining in the proposed measures, was to solicit "a redresse for the miseries of the soildiers."

Yo’r Ma\textsuperscript{ies} of the 25th of this moneth founde me at Oatlands on Sunday last, as I was attending the Queenes com’aunds, where I p’sently p’ented to her Royall hand yo’ Ma\textsuperscript{ies} I\textsuperscript{er}, & acquainted her Ma\textsuperscript{ie} what you had written to me concerning a Declarac’on; her Ma\textsuperscript{ie} saith that she now vnderstands that y’ Com’ons will not suddainly refuse yo’ Ma\textsuperscript{ies} Pardon; but howsoever she com’aunded me to speake wth my Lo. Keeper about it according to yo’ Ma\textsuperscript{ies} le\textsuperscript{ter}, & to wishe him to consider of a fitting Declarac’on

* This will be found fully explained in a subsequent letter. The King appears to have wished to secure Percy, Wilmot, Ashburnham, and the others engaged with them, from the wrath of the Parliament, but, unwilling to pardon them expressly by name, he issued this General Pardon in order to include them, without appearing to confirm the charges brought against them as acting under his privity and directions.
agreeable to yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} direc\textsuperscript{e}ons, that it may be red\textsuperscript{y} in case the G\textsuperscript{r}al Pardon shall be refused, & this to be done w\textsuperscript{h} all possible secrecy. My Lo. Keeper promiseth to p\textsuperscript{e}pare such a Declarac\textsuperscript{e}on against too-morrow, & hath wished me then to attend his Lo\textsuperscript{p} to Oatlands, there to shew it to her Ma\textsuperscript{tie}, & as soon as it shall be perfected to send it for yo\textsuperscript{r} royal approbac\textsuperscript{e}on. The busines will well be\textsuperscript{e} this delay, for that y\textsuperscript{e} Peers have this day adiourned their House till Munday next; & y\textsuperscript{e} Com\textsuperscript{\textquotesingle}ons (I heare) intend to adiourne too-morrow, also till Munday; & it is resolv\textsuperscript{d} that both Houses shall adiourne on Wensday se\textsuperscript{\textquotesingle}night till y\textsuperscript{e} 26th of Octob\textsuperscript{r}. I humbly desire to know yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} pleasure whether when this Declarac\textsuperscript{e}on shall be printed, it may not be fit to shew y\textsuperscript{e} same to my Lo. I have bene to\textsuperscript{u}ld that some take excepc\textsuperscript{\textquotesingle}ons to yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} Pardon, for that it excepts all matters of eccl\textsuperscript{\textquotesingle}all cognisaunce, albeit y\textsuperscript{e} same exception is in y\textsuperscript{e} Pardon of 21\degree Jacobi, but I beleive that this excepc\textsuperscript{\textquotesingle}on of theirs is but a pretence, & that y\textsuperscript{e} mayne thing that they dislike in it is, that Mr. Percy & y\textsuperscript{e} rest of his company are comprehended in it. Queen Mother from England, where she had arrived in 1633, had been strongly urged forward by the Parliament party. In a curious reprint of Grebner's astrological book, with its observations on the life and death of Charles, it is said that on her coming, "all men were against her, for it was observed that wherever or unto whatever Country this miserable old Queen came, there followed immediately after her either the plague, war, famine, or one misfortune or another."—Yet the same writer, when speaking of her departure, says, "a sad spectacle it was, and produced tears from mine eyes and many other beholders, to see an aged leane decrepit poore Queen, ready for her grave, necessitated to depart hence, having no place of residence in this world left her, but where the curtesie of her hard fortune assigned it. She had beene the onely statelie and magnificent woman in Europe."—She had, whilst in England, an allowance of 100l. per day; and the Parliament gave her 10,000l. for travelling expences on her departure.

* Up to this period, notwithstanding the affair of Strafford, the king appears to have put perfect trust in the elder Vane, to whom his indulgence and favour had at all times been remarkable. Sir Philip Warwick, in his Memoirs, states a curious instance of it; where, speaking of the economy of Charles's Court, he says that "besides the women who attended on his beloved Queen and Consort, he scarce admitted any great officer to have his wife in the family. Sir Henry Vane was the first that I knew in that kind, who, having a good diet as Comptroller of the Household, and a tenuity of fortune, was winked at; so as the Court was filled, not crammed."

† Sir John Pennington was a distinguished naval officer of the copp'y whereof I send inclosed, but whether there be any such ships in yᵉ Downes, I cannot learne yᵉ cer'teynty. The Queenes Ma'te tells me she will not wryte till Munday by Mr. Murray.

period, and was appointed by the King, a few months afterwards, to the command of the fleet; but against this the Parliament remon-strated in favour of the Earl of Warwick, and Sir John was obliged to resign. There was another Pennington, at this time, extremely active; but his name was Isaac, and he is very harshly spoken of by the royalist writers, as a man who had enriched himself most flagi-tiously in the service, or rather through the influence and power, of the Parliament. May it please yo* most excell* Matie,

According to my advertisem* yesterday, both Houses of Parliam* have this day adiourned till 20°

* This was against all superstition rites and observances in public worship; amongst which were enumerated crucifixes, images of the Virgin Mary, bowing at the name of Jesus, &c. They also ordered the Communion Tables to be moved from the east end of all churches and chapels; and all sports and pastimes to be prevented on Sunday.

VOL. IV.
Octo\textsuperscript{br} next. They have appointed Committees to meet during the recesses,* & their first day of meeting is to be Tuesday next, & then they are to adjourn from time to time as they shall think good. Their principal business is to receive & annul care all letters from Scotland, according to instructions already given to the Committees there, whom they have power to call home if they see cause. They have also power to send down money to the army, & to do what they shall think requisite for the disbanding of it, & to dispose of the cannons and artillery in the North, & they are to make report of the whole business at the next meeting of both Houses.

There was not at parting a very perfect agreement (as I hear) between the two Houses in all things, for the Peers declining to join with the Commons in orders touching innovations in the Church, the Commons notwithstanding ordered the same to be printed, the particulars of which orders are here included.† I hear that the Lords & Commons have intimated that none of the disbanded soldiers, either horse & foot, English or Irish, shall be permitted to serve either the French or Spanish King, but that they may serve the States.‡ Upon a report that the Spanish and French § Ambassadors had treated with diverse of the horse & foot to serve their masters, * Lists of those Committees may be found in the ninth volume of the Parliamentary History, p. 536.

† The Lords did not quarrel with the spirit of the resolutions of the House of Commons; but they made some slight alterations in the details. The Commons, however, went further on the day before adjournment than they had previously done; for it was ordered that a lecture might be set up, and an orthodox minister maintained, at the expense of any parishioners, to preach on various occasions throughout the week, and also on the Sabbath where there was no sermon.

‡ This leave to serve the States does not appear on the Parliamentary Records.

§ Popular prejudice had arisen to a great height against these diplomatic personages; the House of Lords having found it necessary on the 30th of August to issue an order for the punishment of some rioters who had insulted the French Ambassador and his servants.
the Co'mons House sent 2 of their members to each of their Amb'dors, to know by what warr they did goe about to levy any soldiers here, & by whose procurement they obteyned such warrs, but (it seemes) they could discover nothing att all.

As soone this day as the Lds House was adiourned, I receuied from Withering's deputy 2 packetts of lers, ye one directed to yo' Maitie and ye whole P'liam; the other to ye Lds in P'liam; both wch I have sent now to Mr. Th'rer & for yo' Maitie. I humbly beseech yo' Maitie that this le may be scene by noe other eye than yo' owne, for I assure you the houses are very inquisitive after these that advertise yo' Maitie of any parliament busines. I hope yo' Maitie will now hasten for England, to put yo' affaires here in good order, the armies being all disbanded but 4 regimts. I humbly beg your Maities pardon for this tedies discourse from,

* This is the order formerly alluded to. Previous to adjournment, on the 9th, the Lords desired a conference on the subject of orders respecting Divine Service: but the Commons, without noticing that desire, instantly passed a resolution “that this House doth not consent to these orders, or to any of them.” The Lords who protested against the proceedings of the Upper House were Bedford, Warwick, Clare, Newport, Wharton, and Kimbolton.

"His wit, his courage, and his affection for the King, made him worthy the esteem and favour of the Court. But two qualities which he had, prevented his being serviceable to the King, who loved him: the one was, his too great diffidence of himself; and the other (quite opposite) too great a haughtiness in point of honour. Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please yo’ most excel’ Ma’tie,

Yesterday I sent by packet a le’t to yo’ Ma’tie from the Lo. Keeper, & should not now have troubled yo’ Ma’tie, but that the opportunity of safe conveyance by this gent. doth prompt me humbly to minde yo’ Ma’tie of some things in my poore opinion worthy yo’ Royall considerac’on.

I am confident yo’ Ma’tie doth by this time cleerly perceave, how it is here insinuated upon all occasions, that Popery (w’th is generally exceeding distastefull to yo’ su’pts of this kingdome) is too much favoured by yo’ clergy here, & in yo’ owne Court, & that this opinion (how vnjustly soever laid by Brownists* on yo’ Ma’ties governm’t) hath & doth (more than any thing) preuidice yo’ Ma’tie in ye esteeme & affeccion of yo’ people, whose love I humbly conceive to be soe much yo’ Ma’ties interest, as that it ought to be preserved & retyed by yo^r Ma^tie by all possible means: wherefore I humbly offer to yo^r Ma^ties considerac'on, whether it be not requisite, that yo^r Ma^tie should now (during this recessse) give some publique assurance to the contrary: w^ch I humbly conceive may be done by yo^r p^sent conferring of such Bp^ricks and eccles^call dignities as are now voyde vpon persons, of whom there is not the least suspic'on of favouring the Popish partie, such as may be Dr. Prideaux,* Bromwich, Gouge, Mr. Shute, & ye like, if they will in these tymes accept of such p^ferm^ts, for I assure ye^- Ma^tie I am vknowne to all and every one of them. Such men thus p^ferred, would not only give assurance of yo^r Ma^ties firme resoluc'on to maynteyne the Protestant religion here professed, but by filling vpp of ye^- vacant Bp^ricks w^th such persons, yo^- Ma^tie would gayne not only their votes for Episcopacy, &c. but many more, who seeing such divines p^fered, would rest confident that there is noe intenc'on to introduce or connive at Popery.

Also concerning the booke of Co'mon Prayer, (to partes whereof ye^- late Declarac'on of ye^- Co'mons House shewes there is some exceptac'on), yo^- Ma^tie having constituted such B^pps, may be pleased to declare yo^- reddines to reforme what shalbe thought amisse in it by yo^- clergy & Parliam^t, w^ch will prevent those that (in a zeale w^thout knowledge) seek to overthrow ye^- good government & order wisely established in this Church: & thus by yo^- Ma^ties tymely moderac'on, you will put a bitt in their mouthes, who (vpon a popular pretence of ye^- reliques of Popery) cry downe all that is of good order or decency in the Church.

And for a further assurance of yo^- Ma^ties integrity in this reformac'on, I humbly offer it to yo^- Ma^ties considerac'on whether it may not be necessary (before ye-

And now I humbly beg yo' Ma'tie pardon for my presumc'on in tendering to yo' great wisdome these my undigested thoughts, wh I assure yo' Ma'tie have beene comunicated to noe other person in the world, but are (with out any p'tic'lar designe) meerely the yssues of my weake iudgem' & indulgent care of yo' Ma'ies honor, p'servac'on & service, wh I preferre before any thing in this world that can concerne

Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please your most excellent Majesty,

Being yesterday at Oatlands to attend the Queen's command, her Majesty gave me this paper inclos'd, with command to send it this day to your Majesty: it was brought to your Queen by the Lady Carlile,* who saith she had it from the Lo. Mandeville.† I confess it were not amiss to have it published, but I had rather it should be done by any other hand than your Majesty's or your Queen's, & therefore I could wish your Majesty would conceal it for a day or 2, by which time I know there will be other copies of it sent into Scotland.

The late crosse orders, & unusual passages in Parliament a little before your Recesse, are so distastfull to your wiser sorte, as it hath taken off your edge of their confidence in parliamentary proceedings, & I verily believe, that if your Houses (when they next meete)

* This was the Dowager Carlisle, Lady Lucy Percy, second wife, and, at this date, widow of James Hay, first Earl of Carlisle; a famous woman in her time, celebrated by Waller and others, and supposed to have become as intimate with Pym as she had previously been with Strafford. Clarendon accuses her of perplexing the King's affairs, and what Nicholas states of her above seems to exhibit an equal readiness to perplex the affairs of Parliament. But, being upwards of forty, she had now perhaps wholly given up amatory for political intrigues.

† Son to the first Earl of Manchester of the Montague family, and formerly a personal friend of the King, having accompanied him on his romantic journey to Spain. The nature of the paper here alluded to, may be surmised from the fact that Lord Mandeville was at this time an active member of the Parliament party, and deep in the counsels and confidence of Pym. In the preceding year he had been one of the Commissioners to arrange all causes of dispute with Scotland. He was now best known, however, as the Lord Kimbolton, having at this period been called to the Upper House for his father's barony, though retaining the title of Viscount Mandeville by courtesy. A little later he was impeached with the five members. His brother, Walter Montague, was a bigoted Catholic priest, Abbot of Pontoise, in France, and Confessor to the Queen after the death of Father Phillips: he is further noticed in subsequent letters.

I heare there are divers meetings att Chelsey att yᵉ Lo. Mandevilles house & elsewhere by Pym* and others, to consult what is best to be done at their next meeting in P'liamᵗ: & I beleev they will in yᵉ first place fall on some plausible thing, that may redintegrate them in yᵉ people's good opinion, wᵉḥ is their anchor-hold & only interest; & (if I am not much misinformed) that wilbe either vpon Papists, or vpon some Act for expunging of Officers and Counsellors here according to yᵉ Scottish pᵉcedent, or on both together, & therefore it will import yo' Maᵗie, by some serious and faithfull advise, to doe some thing to antipicate or prevent them before their next meeting.

* This was a very short time previous to the City riots, and the affair of the London apprentices. Subsequently the City found it necessary to check those riots, and Venn, one of their members, having exerted himself to keep the peace, a party pamphlet observed that the rioters would have proceeded to the Mansion House, "but by the providence of God, and the great wisdom of Captain Ven, they were prevented."

† O'Neale was deeply implicated in what was called the Army Plot; the conspiracy for bringing up the English army against the Parliament, before referred to (ante, p. 56), in which Percy, Wilmot, Goring, Ashburnham, and several others were engaged. May, in his History of the Parliament, p. 65 (Mason's edition), calls O'Neale an Irishman and a Papist; and states that he was committed to the Tower, but escaped before trial. Berkeley was an officer of high rank, always active in the King's service, and is repeatedly mentioned by Clarendon, particularly as Governor of Exeter, which he was obliged to surrender to the Parliamentary forces.
I believe take order that notice may be given to them of ye danger of it, but her Matie for ye present said she knew not where they were.

The Queene being now every day in expectation of le ters from yo' Matie (having receaved non since tuesday last) doth forbear to write by this dispatch.

Wee know not ye importance of ye affaires there that deteyne yo' Matie soe long, but it is by those that wishe best to yo' service here, thought very necessary that yo' Matie should hasten to be here as soone as may be possible before ye 20th of 8ber; and if yo' Matie leave behinde you some Councellors that you carryed hence, it is thought yo' Councells here will not prosper the worse, nor be the lesse secreat, only it may be yo' Matie may thereby deprive some menconed in ye paper inclosed of their wonted intelligence.* I beseech yo' Matie to vouchsafe to advertise me whether this come safe to yo' Royall hands, & to burne it, that it may never rise in judgement against,

* This report was not true, as the King observes. Argyle was not Chancellor of Scotland; though Charles had been induced to grant him a Marquisate. In connection with the fact that he was afterwards beheaded for high treason (in the year after the Restoration), it is remarkable that in 1651 he had actually put the crown upon the head of Charles the Second at Edinburgh.

† From this, and the similar covert threats in the margin of the letter preceding, as well as in others that follow, it is obvious that the King now believed himself in possession of facts involving the probable overthrow of the popular leaders.

* This was Levingston, Lord Almont, who had the first command under Lesley in the Scottish army, and was afterwards created Earl of Callendar. Charles had certainly intended to give him the office of Lord Treasurer, but was obliged to put it into commission, naming the Earls of Argyle, Glencairn, Lothian, and Lindsey, as Commissioners.

† Montrose, it is hardly necessary to remind the reader, had very recently quitted the Covenanting party, and joined the King.
This may be true that you say, but I am sure that I miss something in point of honor, if they all be not relieved before I go hence.

I am credibly assured, that ye City of London growes very weary of ye insolent carriage of ye Schismaticks, finding their way of governm' to be wholly arbitrary, Alderman Gourney (according to his right and place) is elected Lo. Mayor notwithstanding ye opposic'on of ye factious party, through ye stoutnes and good affecc'on of one of ye new Sheriffs (called Clerck), who while ye factious persons were making a noyse, & would not proceede to ye elecc'on, proposed Ald'mau Gourney (who I heare is very well affected & stout), & carry'd it, & ye Schismaticks (who cryed noe elecc'on) were silenced with hisses, & thereupon ye Sheriff dismissed ye Court.

Yo' Ma'tie will herewith receave from my Lo. of London ye notes yo' Ma'tie sent for to him; his Lo'n is soe lame in his hand & shoulder, as he was not able to write to yo' Ma'tie, for w'ch he beggeth yo' Ma'ties pardon. His Lo'n desired me to signify that he hath sent yo' Ma'tie ye same individuall papers & notes w'ch yo' Ma'tie hath formerly seene, because yo' Ma'tie is best acquainted w'th them: & he saith that

* The Peers here meant may be easily understood, notwithstanding her Majesty's royal grant of new names. The last, which has suffered the most, is evidently intended for the Lord Cottington.
† This most probably was Sir Orlando Bridgeman, then Master of the Court of Wards, and Attorney to the Prince of Wales; or it may have been one of his brothers, sons of the Bishop, two of whom were married into Lancashire families.

May it please yo' most excellent Ma'tie,
Since my last of ye 7th present, I receaved yo' Ma'ties comaunds apostiled ye 2nd of this moneth, & have presented yo' Ma'ties letr to ye Queene, whereof I have herewith sent an aunsweare from her Ma'tie, w'ch came this day to my hands. I have acquainted her Ma'tie (as you were pleased to comaund) that yo' Ma'tie wished that some of yo' servaunts here would meeete to countermyne ye plots here, but ye Queene saith, that cannot be done in yo' Ma'ties absence. I have written letr to all such Lo'ds, as I have had direc'ons to send unto, to attend att ye downe sitting of ye Parliam'. Touching yo' Ma'ties Collar of Rubies, ye Queene wishes that nothing be done in it till ye next weeke, when Sr Job Harby saith he shall receave answere to his letr sent into ye Low Coun'tries, & in ye mean'e tyme I am privatly to informe myself by what warrant that iewell was put into Sr Job Harbyes or any other hands.
Yo' Ma'tie will herewith receave a letr from my Lo: Lieutenant of Ireland.* The insolency & disorders of ye disbanded soul'diers in & neer this towne is soo great, as ye Lo'ds of ye Councell (who met this day at Whitehall) have thought fit that some course should be forth'w taken to disperse & send them away, & to that purpose their Lo'ps humbly desire to know yo' Ma'ties pleasure whether a proclamac' on shall be issued by ye Lo'ds Com'issioners (whome yo' Ma'tie did authorise to set forth proclamac'ons upon certeyne occasions in yo' Ma'ties absence) to ye effect of ye inclosed printed order of ye Com'ittees of both Houses, (whereof yo' Ma'tie had formerly a copy sent); but this their Lo'ps intend should be without taking any notice of that order, unlesse yo' Ma'tie shall expressly direct that menc'on be made of it; in this partic'lar their Lo'ps pray yo' Ma'ties speedy resoluc' on & order.

* The Earl of Leicester had received the appointment, but he never went over to take possession of his Government.
The principall cause ye Lo\textsuperscript{ds} meeting this day in Councell was to consider of some let\textsuperscript{rs} from Irland concerning Londonderry, whereupon they have sent to ye Lo\textsuperscript{ds} Justices for further informacion before they can doe any thing in it. I pray for yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} happy dispatch of yo\textsuperscript{r} great affaires there, & safe returne for England, as being

May it please yo\textsuperscript{r} most excellent Ma\textsuperscript{tie},

I receaved (by young S' Rob: Pye *) on Satterday last yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} com'auds by apostile of ye 5\textsuperscript{th} p\textsuperscript{sent,} & am much ioyed, that there is hope of yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} returne sooner then is generally reported here, where it is confidently said (amongst ye most authentique intelligencers in Scottish affaires), that yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} will not be here till Christmas, & I assure yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} they give forth, as if yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} were likely to receaue but an ill harvest of all ye paynes yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} hath taken: But I hope ye happy conclusion of yo\textsuperscript{r} businesses there, shall now very shortly, by good effects, contradict and falsify their stories.

I humbly conceave that it may be for yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} honour & advantage, that ye Lo: Mayor of London wayte on yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} att yo\textsuperscript{r} returne, that you may have thereby opportunity to shew yo' self gra'cous to yo\textsuperscript{r} people, by speaking a short word now & then to them as you passe amongst them, to cheere & encourage them in their dutifull affecc'ons to yo\textsuperscript{r} Royall person; & therefore I beseech yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie}, that by yo\textsuperscript{r} next I may receave yo\textsuperscript{r} pleasure, whither I shall intimat to ye Lo. Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please yo" most excellent Matie,

Yesterday I sent to yo" Matie in myne a let'r from my Lo" Keeper by packet: and this is to give yo" Matie advertisem', that ye Lo"s of yo" Maties Privy Councell met here this morning, to consider of some Irishe businesses, when they agreed upon a let'r to be forthw'th sent to yo" Matie w'th their Lo's advise, for divers reasons expressed in their said let'r (a copy whereof for better expedic'on is here inclosed), to giue order to yo" Maties Justices in Irdland to prorogue ye' parliam' there (wch is to meete ye' 9th of No'ber) till ffebruary next: the originall under ye' Lo's hands shalbe sent to yo" Matie as soone as it can be got signed, if yo" Matie shall approve of their Lo's advise, you may be pleased for better expedic'on to send one let' under yo" Maties hand imediately from Edenburg into Irdland by an expresse messenger to ye' Lo's Justices, forthw'th to set forth a proclamacion to that purpose: & another by the way of West Chester or thereabouts, least ye' former should miscarry or receave delay. The Lo's of yo" Maties Privy Councell here have also this day giuen order to the Justices of Peace (in & neere London) to take a course, that a more effectuall and strict order be taken for present sending away all ye' disbanded souldiers (wch still pester this city): & for shutting up of all houses infected, for that yᵉ sicknes disperseth very much & dangerously hereabouts.

There was this day nothing donne by the Comittees of either House worthy yoʳ Maᵗⁱᵉ notice. There is a strong report (spred by persons of best creddit here for intelligence & knowledge of yᵉ proceedings in Scotl:) that yoʳ Maᵗⁱᵉ will not be here these 2 moneths, but what ground they have for it, I cannot learne.

There is a whispering here, as if yoʳ Parliamᵗ (when it meetes) would adiourne for some moneths, or to some other place: I tould my Lo: Keeper this day that if yᵉ P'liamᵗ should adiourne to a further day, (thoughe but for a moneth or two) before they passed yᵉ Bill of Tonnage & Poundage to yoʳ Maᵗⁱᵉ, (the same being granted only to yᵉ first of Decem: next,) it would put yoʳ Maᵗⁱᵉ to a great streight for want of monny to uphold yoʳ house, & for divers other occasions: and I humbly offer it to yoʳ Maᵗⁱᵉ considerac'on, whether it may not be fitt for you to let my Lo: Keeper, & some other of yoʳ Maᵗⁱᵉ best affected servaunts of either House of P'liamᵗ know, what you would have them to insist upon in case there should be any moc'on for a further adiournemᵗ, before yoʳ Maᵗⁱᵉ returne, by reason of yᵉ sicknes, wᵉ growes soe rife & dangerous, as will make such a moc'on willingly hearkened unto. My humble & earnest prayers shalbe still for a prosperous dispatch of yoʳ affaires there, & for yoʳ Maᵗⁱᵉ speedy & safe returne, there being noe man so much obliged to yoʳ Maᵗⁱᵉ for yoʳ gracious favour, as

Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please yo\textsuperscript{r} most excellent Ma\textsuperscript{tie},

I receaved yesterday yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} apostile of y\textsuperscript{e} 9th p\textsuperscript{s}ent by Mr. Barkley, & have (according to yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} com\text{\'}and) addressed this packet to y\textsuperscript{e} Duke of Richmond, & shall soe contynue my addresses, untill I shall understand of Mr. Th\text{\'}rers returne to Court. Yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} com\text{\'}aunds me to advise w\textsuperscript{th} some of yo\textsuperscript{r} best servaunts here, how to p\textsuperscript{vent} the intenc\text{\'}ons of some here to presse yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} at y\textsuperscript{e} next meeting in P\textsuperscript{l}liam\textsuperscript{t} for y\textsuperscript{e} like Act touching y\textsuperscript{e} elecc\text{\'}on of officers & councellors here, as you have graunted in Scotland. I (w\textsuperscript{th} all humility) assure yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} that I conceave it no lesse difficult for me (now in yo\textsuperscript{r} absence when y\textsuperscript{e} awe of the Parliam\textsuperscript{t} is upon all in generall) to discerne who are yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} best servaunts here, then it is almost impossible for such yo\textsuperscript{r} servaunts, to know what to doe or advise, to p\textsuperscript{vent} soe plausible a designe, w\textsuperscript{ch} in my poor opinion nothing can soe well divert, as yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} speedy returne : but of this intend forthw\textsuperscript{th} to speake w\textsuperscript{th} the Queene.

This inclosed is y\textsuperscript{e} let\textsuperscript{r} from y\textsuperscript{e} Lo\textsuperscript{dds} of yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} Privy Counsell, whereof in my last by Mr. Mungo Murrey * I sent a copy\textsuperscript{y} : their Lo\textsuperscript{p}ps, as soon as they rose from Councell, (& before y\textsuperscript{e} let\textsuperscript{r} was drawne) dispersed themselves to their severall homes in y\textsuperscript{e} country, w\textsuperscript{ch} is y\textsuperscript{e} cause (as I am tould), that it was

* Murrey (Mungo) was a confidential servant and gentleman of the bedchamber to the King, who often entrusted him with private correspondence. In February, 1646, whilst the King was in the power of the English Commissioners at Newcastle, Murrey, having obtained leave of absence on pretence of visiting Scotland, was admitted to his Majesty's presence before witnesses for the purpose of kissing his hand. The Commissioners, however, observed something put into his hand by the King; and having followed him, when out of the presence, they searched him, and found a letter in cypher directed to Montreuil the French agent. The letter was immediately sent up to the Parliament, and Murrey committed to prison, but admitted to bail after two days' confinement.
this day before it was brought signed to me for yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie}. The more secrecy and expedit\'on there is used in dispatch of yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} let\textsuperscript{r} to y\textsuperscript{e} Lo\textsuperscript{dds} Justices (if you shall appr\'ove of their Lo\textsuperscript{ps} advise) y\textsuperscript{e} better, & that made me p\textsuperscript{s}ume to hasten to yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} y\textsuperscript{c} coppy, before y\textsuperscript{e} let\textsuperscript{r} itself was signed. I finde that y\textsuperscript{e} Com\textsuperscript{t}tees of both Houses (by reason of y\textsuperscript{e} con\textsuperscript{t}nuance of y\textsuperscript{e} sicknes) incline to be very earnest, when y\textsuperscript{e} Parliam\textsuperscript{t} meets next, to perswade a further adiournem\textsuperscript{t} for a tyme, but Mr. Pym, & those of his party, will not heare that y\textsuperscript{e} P\textsuperscript{liam} shalbe held any where but in London or Westminster: I hope yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} (if you shall stay there past y\textsuperscript{e} 18th pres\textsuperscript{t}ent) will send some direc\textsuperscript{c}\textsuperscript{t}ions to yo\textsuperscript{r} servaunts here how to apply their endeavours in P\textsuperscript{liam}, in case there shalbe any debate touching an adiournem\textsuperscript{t}.

I have herew\textsuperscript{th} by y\textsuperscript{e} Queenes com\textsuperscript{\'and} sent yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} y\textsuperscript{d} draught of a warrant for yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} hand for y\textsuperscript{e} delivery of yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} Collar of Rubies to S\textsuperscript{r} W\textsuperscript{m} Boswell for yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} use: I tould S\textsuperscript{r} Job Harby, that S\textsuperscript{r} W\textsuperscript{m} was to kepe it till yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} should send for it. The Queene tould me yesterday, that she would write to yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} to be pleased w\textsuperscript{th} yo\textsuperscript{r} owne hand to give S\textsuperscript{r} W\textsuperscript{m} Boswell order what to doe w\textsuperscript{th} y\textsuperscript{e} said Collar, for it is apparent, that these mer\textsuperscript{c}\textsuperscript{h}ants dare not have a hand in the engaging of it, but they say they will take order that, upon receipt of yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} warraunt, it shalbe safely delivered accordingly.

If yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} shall stay long from hence,† I humbly pray yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} wilbe pleased to let me understand w\textsuperscript{h}ome you would have me to advise concerning yo'

He was also in the confidence of the Palatine Princes about the same time. Bromley, p. 79. He was at this period the British Resident at the Hague, but afterwards fell into disgrace, as we find by a subsequent letter of the Queen of Bohemia.

"For yo' sacred Matie?" By the King: "Yours apostyled."

Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please yo' most excellent Matie,
Yo' Maties sent by Sr Wm Ballatine* were delivered here ye 18th of this moneth by 4 in ye afternoone.
Upon let by ye Englishe Co'mittees now in Scotl: to ye Com'ittee here, relating ye newes of Mar: Hamiltons, the Ea. of Arguiles, and Ea: of Lanne-ricks abandoning ye Court & Parliam there;† our Com'ittee here was yesterday in a great fright, &

* Afterwards Lord Ballenden, the first Peer of that name. In 1640 he appears, by Bromley's Letters, pp. 115, 116, to have been attached as Minister at the Palatine Court. He was much in the confidence of all the branches of the Royal Family; and obtained his peerage from Charles the Second for his very useful and active services during the Usurpation.

† This is the affair which, in the history of that time, went by the name of "The Incident." See Pym's Report of the Committees on the re-opening of Parliament, which may be referred to in vol. x. of the Parliamentary History, p. 5. Lord Lanerick's (or Lanark's) relation of it may be seen in Hardwicke's State Papers, vol. ii. p. 299, wherein he asserts that there was a plan laid, by the opposite party, to cut the throats of himself and the two Lords mentioned in this letter; and he adds, that their "abandoning the Court and Parliament" was literally nothing more than quitting Edinburgh in order to save their lives. All that is absolutely known in the matter is, that Charles
I sent one of whose discretion & knowledge I was & am so confident, that I thought his discourse of the business as hauling beene an eyewitnesse would have satisfied more than ane written relation, therefore I desyre you to call on him in my name to satisfy well affected persons, of the truthe of that w'ch passed while he was here; & for what hath passed since, I have directed the D: of Rich: to give you such an account as there is.

It is now under examination, w'ch as soon as it (is) ended you shall be sure to have.

(declaring that they conceived the same to be a plot of ye Papists there, & of some Lo'ds & others here,) sent p'sent order to ye Lo: Mayor &c. to dubble ye gardes & watches of this Citty & Suborbs, & it is thought that this busines will this day in Parliament be declared to be a greater plot against the Kingdomes and Parliam'ts in Eng: & Scotl: then hath bene discovered at all. There have bene some well-affected parliam't-men here w'th me this morning to know whether I had any relac'ion of that busines, but finding I had none, but only a few words from Mr. Sec'r'ie Vane, w'ch I shewed to them, they seemed much troubled, as not knowing what to say to it: I hasten this of purpose to give yo' Ma'te notice hereof, & to pray yo' Ma'te, that there may be sent hither w'th all possible dillicence a full & p'fect relac'ion of ye present disturbance there, & the cause & grounds thereof, & what upon exa'pion it appears to that parliam't to be: all w'th, I humbly wishe may be certeifyed hither in as authentique a way,* & from as unsuspected a hand as may be.

If Mr. Sec'r'ie Vane had written to me, or any of his friends here, a true narrac'ion of that busines, it would have given much satifac'ion here, and stopped the causles alarms that are taken upon ye noyse of had summoned these three Lords to attend his Court; but that they not only absented themselves, but quitted the city, and placed their houses in a state of defence; and that on the King demanding an investigation to clear his honour, a secret committee of the Scotch Parliament made a report in exculpation of his Majesty, but justifying the three Lords in the course they had taken. Clarendon says that Montrose had advised and "frankly" undertaken the assassination of Hamilton, his brother Lanerick, and Argyle; and whatever reception may have been given to this proposal (which there is no ground for thinking that the King for a moment sanctioned), it is hardly to be doubted that schemes were now on foot between Montrose and Charles, embracing a simultaneous movement in the three kingdoms, and sufficiently explaining the alarm and excitement of the Parliamentary leaders, especially on the sudden breaking out of the Irish rebellion. It should be added that the friends of Montrose strenuously assert, in opposition to the statement of Clarendon, that his secret proposal to the King was not for the murder, but simply for the arrest, of Argyle and the Hamiltons.

* The Parliament met this day; the first time after the recess.
it, that busines being now by ye relac’on of diverse Scotsmen here made much worse, then I believe it will proove in ye end.

The Queene told me yesterday that she will wryte to yo’ Ma’tie this night or too morrow, but I thought it not fitt to deferre this packet now for her Ma’ties let’, which shalbe hastened away as soone as I shall receive it. The inclosed from Sr Art: Hopton,* I receaved from my Lo: Cottington w’th direcc’on to send it to yo’ Ma’tie.

* He was uncle to Sir Ralph Hopton, the famous Royalist General; and, when the latter was created Lord Hopton, Sir Arthur was named heir in remainder, in default of issue male; but, dying before his nephew, he never enjoyed those honours. He was of a Somersetshire family, the Hoptons of Wytham.
Of this I much wonder, for on my credit I acquainted nobodie with the contents thereof, & am verie confident that none here knew whether I writ to him or not: therefore I thinkke it fitt that you should try as much as may be how this is come, & whether it be an intelligence or conjectur.

Before this, that is satisfied.

I remember that I had some discourse with the Eng: Par: men about Prorogation, but I'm confident that it was after my Lett: was written, if it were serius, all others were in consequence of the Plague at randome.

Yo'r Maties le' to my Lo: Keeper was carefully delivered to his owne hands yesterday before ye sitting of ye Parliam', but his Lo'pp tells me, that ye effect of it was knowne here some daies before he receeved it: w'ch is an infinite p'sudence to yo'r Maties affaires here; such anticipation of yo'r Maties direc'tions in businesses of importance renders ye same impossible, or extreme difficult, to be efected: And I observe that ye perfect intelligence, that is here of all yo'r Maties resolu'cions & proceedings there, puts lief and spiritt into some here, who w'out that encouragem't & light, would (I beleev) pay more reverence to yo'r Maties counells and acc'ons.

When yo'r Matie hath made stay ye disbanding of 5 companies remaying in Barwick,* it is here thought fit not to make any order to ye contrary, but it is declared (as I heare) that from ye 15th of this moneth (w'ch was ye's tyme appoynted by ye Houses for disbanding all that garrison) those companies shall have no further pay from ye Comonwealth as it is called, and concerning this, there is to be speedily a conference w'th ye Lo'ds, w'th ye issue whereof I shall acquaint yo'r Matie by my next.

Sir Jo. Berkley was yesterday comitted to ye Tower, & Capt. O'Neale to ye Gatehouse by ye House of Co'mons vpon ye old business.† Yo'r Matie will herew'th receave a copy of ye lett sent hither by ye Com'ittees in Scotland, and of ye order made thereupon ye day before ye P'liam by ye Com'ittees here. I have p'sented yo'r Maties lett to ye B'pp of London, who hath promised to use all possible expedic'on in p'formaunce of yo'r Maties commaunds therein.

The Lo'ds Commissioners have given order for p'paring a Proclamac'on for p'sented dispersing & sending away of ye disbanded souldiers,‡ as yo'r Matie directed.

* The jealousy of the Parliament about Berwick was so very great, that when the Scottish army, upon their return in August, wished to march through that garrison, a wooden bridge was actually ordered to be built over the Tweed, at some distance from the town.

My Lo: of Bristol* told me this day, that he heares from severall hands, that there is an intenc'on to question his Lo, & his soune ye Lo: Digby, but he knowes not for what, & he tells me that nothing shall deterre him from p'formaunce of his duty. This day there was twice read in ye Com'ons House a Bill for taking away the Votes of Bpps in ye Upper House, and that Bill is commited, and it is said it will passe both Houses w'th in two days. The disobedience against ye order of ye House of Co'mons concerning innovac'ons, was this day questioned in that House, & after a long debate, there was no way found or resolved on, to punishe those that disobeyed ye same, for that that order was conceived by most in ye House not to be justifiable by lawe, & therefore not binding:†

I have herewth sent yo'r Ma'tie some notes of ye effect of ye conference this day betwixt ye 2 Houses. I beseech God amongst those great distracc'ons to p'serve yo'r Ma'tie in safety: & I beseech yo'r Ma'tie to give me leave once more to put you in minde to hasten hither a true relac'on of ye vnhappy interrup'con of yo'r affaires there, for I find, that yo'r servaunts here are much disheartened that they are

* The Earl of Bristol had mingled much in party politics previous to this date. He had been Ambassador to Spain in proposing Charles's marriage with the Infanta, and was afterwards impeached in Parliament respecting the treaty and its failure; but he had such influence with the House of Commons as to bring about a counter impeachment against the Duke of Buckingham. This may account for his hostility to Charles's friend, Lord Strafford, though the increasing probabilities of civil war now induced him to support the Royal Cause.

Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please yo' most excellent Matie,

I receaved Satterday night last yo' Maties of ye 18th p'sent, & have safely delivered yo' Maties to ye Queene & my Lo: Keeper: the messenger that was sent w'th yo' Maties said I'ter, (bruysing himself w'th a fall from his horse soe as he was not able to ride) sent yo' Maties to me single by ye ordinary post, w'ch made me suspect that it had bene intercepted, but it came very safe. I have alreddy made known to diverse Lo'dds & others yo' Maties pious resoluc'on to mainteyne constantly ye doctrine & disciplyne of ye Church of England, & have by their advise delivered extracts (of what yo' Matie hath written) to diverse of yo' Maties servaunts, that yo' piety therein may be vnderstood by yo' good people here.

The Queene sent Sr Wm Ballatine from hence on Friday last, & he going im'ediately from Oatlands without calling here, I lost ye opportunity of sending by him, but I p'spared my I'ter of ye 23th reddy for him, w'ch I have now sent by this gent. Mr. Tho. Elliot.

Wee here begin to app'hend that in ye great troubles there, some of yo' Maties packets may miscarry, & therefore I held it my duty to let yo' Matie vnderstand, that since myne of ye 12th (wch yo' Matie hath return'd) I have sent to yo' Matie letrs of ye 15th & 18th, both wch were addressed in packets to ye D. of Richmond, & afterwards 2 other packets of ye 20th & 21st directed to Mr. Th' rer.

As concerning ye adiournem't of ye P'liam't here, my Lo: Keeper tells me, that he hath, by his l'ter sent in myne of ye 21st fully acquainted yo' Matie how ye expectac'on was here frustrated. The Vpper House did Satterday last reade ye Bill transmitted to them by ye Comons, for taking away ye votes of B'ps, & intend (as I heare) to speede it as fast as may be, notwithstanding it is said to be against ye auntient order of P'liam't to bring in a Bill againe the same Sessions, that it was reiceted.* Yo' Maties best servaunts here remayne still in great payne, that in all this tyme they have not receaved any p'fect relac'on of ye late disorders at Edinb: concerning Mar: Hamilton & ye rest, & they are the more impatient, in regarde they heare that some of ye Com'ons house have copyes of ye examinac'ons taken in that busines, & other aduertisem'ts touching ye same. I beseech God to send yo' Matie forth of that laberinth of troubles there, & a safe & ho'ble returne for Engl: wch willbe a most welcome to all honnest men here, and to none more then to

May it please yo' most excellent Ma'tie,

I sent to yo' Ma'tie ye 25th of this p'sent 2. lett's by Mr. Elliot, * & ye same night I receaved yo' Ma'ties apostile of ye 20th, and p'sently sent away yo' Ma'ties to ye Queene, & delivered that to my Lo: Keeper. I shall forthw'h deliver yo' Ma'ties warr's to Sr Job Harby, & hasten ye dispatch of that busines.

I have herein sent yo' Ma'tie a coppy of an order made by the Peers concerning ye jurisdic'on of ye Archb'. of Cant. In this packet there is sent to yo' Ma'tie by my Lo'd. of London severall Bills for yo' Ma'ties signature for ye new B'ps, w'th a l'st from his Lo' touching that busines.

There is still kept here a strict garde & watch about ye Parliam't houses of 100. of ye trayned bands, besides diverse other watchmen: ye p'tence is an app'hension of some conspiracy of ye Papists against ye P'liam't here, answerable to that against some Lo'ds in Scotl: & ye alarme of posishe plots amuse and fright ye people here, more then any thing, & therefore that is ye drum that is soe frequently beaten uppon all occasions; & ye noyse of an intenc'on to of October. The King's memorandum, or apostyle, is dated the 30th. The return of the letter to Sir Edward, on the 4th of November, is a further proof of the rapidity with which, upon occasion, news might travel at that period. As for Ireland generally, and the King's notion of the value of a parliamentary mode of government there, it may be worth quoting an anecdote preserved in an old tract in the British Museum; where, in conversation with the Earl of Pembroke, in March 1641, his Majesty is reported to have said, "The businesse of Ireland will never be done in the way that you are in; four hundred will never do that work; it must be put in the hands of one. If I were trusted with it, I would pawn my head to end that work. And though I am a beggar myself, yet (speaking with a strong assevera-tion) I can find moneye for that."

Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please yo' most excellent Ma⁴tie,

My last to yo' Ma⁴tie was of yᵉ 27th pᵉsent, wᵉh I sent by packet addressed to Mr. Th'rer. Yo' Ma⁴ties long absence encourages some to talke in Parliamᵗ of highe matters. It was yesterday in debate in yᵉ Com'ons House, that yᵉ Parliamᵗ may have the approbac'on of all officers, counsellors, amb'dors, and ministers, and yo' Ma⁴tie yᵉ nominac'on.* The reasons alleaged for

"Bishops and other persons in holy orders." It was to shut them not only out of Parliament, but also from the Privy Council, the Commission of the Peace, or the execution of "any temporal authority, by virtue of any commission." A pamphlet strongly marking the direction of the public feeling was at this time industriously and widely circulated, under the title of, "Lord Bishops none of the Lord's Bishops."

* A highly figurative and elaborate speech was made on this occasion by "Master Smith, of the Inner Temple," which he has done posterity the favour to publish. In one part he observes: "Prerogative and Liberty are both necessary to this kingdom; and, like the sun and moon, give a lustre to this benighted nation, so long as they walk at equal distances; but when one of them shall venture into the other's orb, like those planets in conjunction, they then cause a it were, first that it had bene soe heretofore, & soe is conceaved to be an auntient right: 2ly that ye ill effects that have bene by ye councells & acc'ons of olde officers, counsellors, &c. & ye feares that there may be ye like by the new; will make all that hath bene hitherto donne nothing, if this may not be graunted to secure them, whereby the kingdome may be as well pserved as purged. 3dy that yo'r Ma'tie did heare partic'lar & privat mens advise in ye choyce of yo' offrs, counsellors, &c. & therefore it can be noe derogac'on for yo'r Ma'tie to take therein ye advise of ye P'liament. Some said that untill such things as these shalbe granted they cannot wth a good con-scenyce supply yo' Ma'ties necessities: after a long debate this busines was at length referred to a Select Com'ittee to p'pare forthwth heads for a pet'on to be p'sented to yo' Ma'tie to receave the P'liam'ts appro-bac'on of such officers, counsellors, &c. as yo'r Ma'tie shall choose, for better p'venc'on of ye great & many mischeifs that may befall ye Comonwealth by ye choyce of ill counsellors, officers, amb'dors & minis-ters of state, wch pet'on is to be ripened wth all speede & to be p'sented to ye House: there appeared soe many in ye Com'ons House against this busines, that some conceave that there wilbe noe further proceeding in it, but I doubt it: howsoever I may not forbeare to let yo'r Ma'tie know, that the Lo: ffalkland, Sr Jo. Strangwishe,* Mr. Waller, Mr. Ed. Hide, & Mr. Holborne, & diverse others stood as Champions in maynten'nce of yo' Prerogative, and shewed for it unaunswerable reason & undenyable p'sedents, whereof yo'r Ma'tie shall doe well to take some notice (as yo'r Ma'tie shall thinke best) for their encourag'mt.

The Com'ons House having gotten notice of ye deeper eclipse." He then concludes a string of uncouth metaphors by assuring the House that it was necessary "so to provide that the Maecenas's of the times may not, like great jacks in a pool, devour their inferiors, and make poverty a pavement for themselves to trample on."

* Sir John Strangeways, kn.t. of Melbury Sampford, Dorset-shire.
new B\textsuperscript{pps}\textsuperscript{*} that are now making, some did mervale that any man should move yo' Ma\textsuperscript{tie} for making of B\textsuperscript{ps} in these tymes, when it is well knowne how great complaints are against them in generall, & some would have had a pet\textsuperscript{on} or message to be sent to pray yo' Ma\textsuperscript{tie} to be pleased to stay y\textsuperscript{e} constituting of any more B\textsuperscript{ps} till y\textsuperscript{e} busines concerning Episcopacy shalbe determinyd: but this moc'\on was not resented in y\textsuperscript{e} House, & soe y\textsuperscript{e} discourse thereof fell.†

There was yesterday a great debate in y\textsuperscript{e} Upper House about y\textsuperscript{e} Bill for taking away y\textsuperscript{e} B\textsuperscript{ps} votes, & it was very doubfull, after a long dispute, w\textsuperscript{ch} side was likeliest to carry itt, but att length both sides agreed to put off y\textsuperscript{e} further debate thereof till y\textsuperscript{e} 10\textsuperscript{th} of Nov\textsuperscript{e} next, before w\textsuperscript{ch} tyme it wilbe tryed, of what vallidity y\textsuperscript{e} impeachm\textsuperscript{t} against y\textsuperscript{e} 13 B\textsuperscript{ps} will proove to be.

The considerac\textsuperscript{on} of these particul\textsuperscript{ar} passages may be sufficent to move yo' Ma\textsuperscript{tie} to hasten yo' returne, & I shall take y\textsuperscript{e} boldnes to ad to it one more, w\textsuperscript{ch} I observed at y\textsuperscript{e} Councell Borde, when Marq: Hertford\textsuperscript{‡} moved y\textsuperscript{e} Lo\textsuperscript{dds} (upon occasion of these words in Mr. Thi'\textsuperscript{ers} let\textsuperscript{r} to me, viz. that he did hope y\textsuperscript{e} P'liam\textsuperscript{e} of Engl. would interpose & hasten yo' Ma\textsuperscript{ties} returne) to consider whether it might not be fit to

* The superstitious feeling which entered largely into all the judgments of political events at this period is curiously exemplified by a contemporary writer, speaking of the occurrences immediately after Charles's return: "It happened one day, as some of the ruder sort of citizens came by Whitehall, one busie citizen must needs cry, 'No Bishops!' Some of the gentlemen issued out of Whitehall, either to correct the sauciness of the fool in words, if they would serve, else, it seems, with blowes; what passed on either side in words none but themselves knew; the citizen, being more tongue than soul'dier, was wounded, and I have heard dyed of his wounds receiveed at that tyme; it hath been affirmed by very many, that in or near unto that place where this fellow was hurt and wounded, the late King's head was cut off, the Scaffold standing just over that place."

† The Parliamentary History asserts that the motion for a conference with the Lords, for the purpose of drawing up a petition on this subject, was carried, on a division, by 71 to 53.

‡ Hertford, at this period, was Governor to the Prince of Wales. This branch of the Seymours became extinct in 1675.
move ye P'liam here to that purpose; most of ye rest of ye Lo.dds of ye Councele declyned it, in regarde ye le was not written to ye Boorde but to me, & that Mr. Th'rer left it to my choyce whether to acquaint them wth it or noe; whereby I observe that every one of yo' Ma'ies Pr. Councele is not fond of yo' speedy returne hither. Yo' Ma'ie can best make iudgm't by there carriages how much it imports you to hasten hither.

I have delivered yo' Ma'ies warrasnt concerning yo' Collar of Rubies, and am promised that this weeke order shalbe sent into ye Low Countries for delivery of ye same accordingly wth all dilligence possible. The Queene toulde me on Wensday last, that she would send an expresse to yo' Ma'tie wth in a few dayes, wth I beleve she hath donne by this tyme. This from my Lo. Keeper was delivered to me for yo' Ma'tie this afternoone.

I assure yo' Ma'tie I have bene warm'd by some of my best friends to be wary what I wryte to yo' Ma'tie, for that there are many eyes upon me both here & in Scotl. & that I'rs that come to yo' Royall hands doe after oft miscarry & come to others view: albeit this shall not deterre me from p'formaunce of my duty in advertising yo' Ma'tie of all things that shall occurre to my knowledge of certeynty, importing yo' Ma'ties service, yet I humbly beseech yo' Ma'tie to vouchsafe to keepe to yo'self what I take ye' freedome to imparte, least, in these tymes, that may be rendred to be treason in me, wth I humbly conceave to be ye' duty of,

May it please yo' most excell' Ma'tie,

The 29th of ye last moneth I sent yo' Ma'tie a lt' in a packet adressed to Mr. Th'rer, & on Satterday last about 7 at night I receauned by Capt. Smith * yo' Ma'ties co'maunds apostiled 24° 8bris, & according to yo' Ma'ties co'maunds I gave him yo' Ma'ties lt' to p'sent it to ye Queene. The relac'ons w'h are here made by any that come from thence, are (for ye most p'te) varied & reported afterward by others according to ye sence and affec'ion of each several audito're, & soe become very uncertaine, & some are apt to credit & report ye worst of businesses, & to silence what they like not, wherefore I humbly conceive, that a relac'on written' by a good & unsuspected hand, would not only gayne best beliefe, but be lesse subject to mistakes & misreports: & I hope when ye examinac'ons of ye late disturbances there shalbe published, ye same will cleere all doubts, & giue honnest men full satisfac'ion. I have shewn ye Queene & some Lo'dds the copy of Marq: Hamiltons 2. & 3d lt'to yo' Ma'tie, whereby he begs yo' Ma'ties pardon, w'ch argues he is not soe faultlesse, & innocent, as we would here render him. attendant upon Charles the Second during his exile. Some allusions are made to him in subsequent letters; particularly where the Queen of Bohemia solicits a commission for him. His family was also, in some degree, connected with the Royal family, by the marriage of Mary, daughter of Sir William Killegrew, with Frederic of Zulestein, an illegitimate son of Henry Prince of Orange.

* This Captain Smith displayed great courage, as well as loyalty, in the King's service. In the battle of Edgehill, on the 22nd of October, 1642, when Sir Edward Verney, the Royal Standard Bearer, was killed, and the standard taken, Smith rushed amidst the enemy and retook it, for which he was instantly made a knight banneret, and received soon after a large gold medal, "with the King's picture on the one side, and the banner on the other, which he always wore to his dying day, in a large green watered ribband, cross his shoulders." He fell, two years afterwards, at Cheriton fight, sometimes called the battle of Alresford.
thanke yo' Ma"te that you have bene soe carefull of yo' faithfull servaunt, as to burne all such of my lrs, as you returne not to me apostiled, w'ch soe much concerns my safety, as I assure your Ma"te, I have bene warned by some of my best freinds both there and here, to be wary in my advertisem'/ms, least being too good a servaunt (these are their very words) doe me hurt.

* A conference took place on this subject between the two Houses, wherein it was urged that the Prince had recently been often at the Queen's residence at Oatlands; and though the Commons did not doubt the motherly affection and care of her Majesty towards him, yet there were some dangerous persons at Oatlands, Jesuits and others, and therefore it was desired that the Marquis of Hertford should be enjoined to take the Prince into his custody and charge, attending upon him in person, and also that the Prince would make his ordinary abode and residence at his own house at Richmond. To this it was added, that Lord Hertford should place some person about the Prince to be answerable to both Houses; so that, in fact, the Prince would have been a complete prisoner. When the message was sent to the Queen, she made answer that the Prince was celebrating his Sister's birthday.

† Henry Rich, first Earl of Holland (and second son of the Earl of Warwick), so created by James the First, in 1624. He is recorded in the Loyal Martyrologie by Winstanley, as a special favourite of Charles in the early part of his reign, being then Governor of Windsor Castle; yet, after that date, says Winstanley, "when the Long Parliament began to sit, and religion became the bone of contention, he sided with them; but afterwards perceiving that they made religion only a cloak to cover their rebellion, he deserted them, and took up arms for the Royal interest." Being defeated and taken prisoner, he suffered on the same scaffold with the Duke of Hamilton and Lord Capel, on the 9th of March, 1648. In the charge of his siding with the Parliament, Winstanley goes further than Dugdale, and those writers who copy from him; the latter asserting only that the favours heaped on Holland by Charles made that Earl so fearful of the Parliament's enmity as to induce him not only to stand neutral himself, but also to persuade the Earl of Essex, his near kinsman, and Lord Chamberlain, to desert his Royal Master when forced to fly from Whitehall. The B\textsuperscript{p} of Chichester humbly desires yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} licence to be absent from P\textquoteright{liam}, for w\textsuperscript{ch} pu\textsuperscript{p}ose I have (at his Lo\textsuperscript{os} request) herein sent a warr\textsuperscript{t} for yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} signa-

It was ordered on Friday last by ye Com\'ons that there should be heads p\textsuperscript{p}ared for a conference concerning a pet\textsuperscript{on} to be sent to yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} to stay ye\textsuperscript{r} making of ye\textsuperscript{r} new B\textsuperscript{pps}, but this hath not hitherto beeene proceeded in any further, and some thinke it wilbe let fall.

There is newes come to my Lo. Lieuten\'nt of Ireland of a rebellion in ye\textsuperscript{r} north of that kingdome, rai\rsed (as it is said) by Papistes, whereof one Macguire * is one of ye\textsuperscript{r} chie\fes; I have not seene ye\textsuperscript{r} le\textsuperscript{ter} concerning it, but ye\textsuperscript{r} Lo\textsuperscript{ds} of yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} Privy Councell sate yesterday (when I was at Oatlands) in close Councell about it, & this day they were w\textsuperscript{th} ye\textsuperscript{r} House of Com\'ons to advise concerning it as I heare: I beleee\ve yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} hath before this receaved adver-tisem\'t of ye\textsuperscript{r} certeynty of this busines out of Ireland, & I doubt not but ye\textsuperscript{r} Lo\textsuperscript{ds} of yo\textsuperscript{r} Privy Councell here, or my Lo. Lieutenant, will forthw\textsuperscript{th} give yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} an account, what they have advised upon

Warwick, who was "a person of an agreeable wit, perhaps a little too much libertine, but knew very well how to dissemble, and imposed on the people by an affected devotion, and going regularly to sermons."

* He was brother to the Lord Macguire, who was afterwards tried by order of the Parliament, and hanged, drawn, and quartered, notwithstanding he pleaded his Irish Peerage.
herein: if their Lo\textsuperscript{sp}s do it not speedily, I shall write further of it, as soone as I may see ye letter or know some certeynty of it, being unwilling to trouble yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} in an affayre of that nature, but upon good grounds, & knowledge of p'tic'lers.

If yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{tie} could settle yo\textsuperscript{r} affaires well there, soe as yo\textsuperscript{r} might be here ye next next weeke, yo\textsuperscript{r} best servaunts here conceive it would then be in ye Ma\textsuperscript{ties} power, by yo\textsuperscript{r} presence, to bring this P\textsuperscript{liam} to a reasonable good conclusion, w\textsuperscript{ch} that it may be soe, is & shalbe ever ye earnest prayer of,

May it please yo\textsuperscript{r} most excell\textsuperscript{nt} Ma\textsuperscript{tie},

Since my lt\textsuperscript{c} sent yesterday by Mr. Barclay, I have receaved by Mr. W\textsuperscript{m} Murray yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} com'aunds by apostile of ye 28th of Octob\textsuperscript{r} & have delivered yo\textsuperscript{r} Ma\textsuperscript{ties} to my Lo. * In vol. vi. of Somers' Tracts, p. 378, is the Report of the Lord Keeper to the House of Commons on the 1st of November, 1641; drawn up from the dispatches of the Lords Justices to the Lord Deputy, who was then in England.

† Conally's (Conelles) discovery arose from some accidental conversation, in a tavern, with Hugh Macmahon, grandson to the "Great Earl of Tyrone," on the night before the intended seizure of Dublin Castle by the conspirators, and which was to have been followed by a general attempt upon all the fortresses in Ireland. Burton says that both the gift and the annuity were voted to him by the Parliament, on the recommendation of the Lords Justices. He was also recommended to prefferment. His master, Clotworthy, in 1640, was the seconder of Pym's first motion against the Earl of Strafford; he was also one of the great supporters of the self-denying Ordinance.

The Com’ons are p’paring a declarac’on of ye state

* On the preceding day several resolutions had passed the Commons respecting the Capuchin House in the Strand. Orders were also given that the Foreign Ambassadors should be sent to, to deliver up such priestes as were the King’s subjects, then in their houses. Phillips was brought before the House as an evidence upon the business of Benson, the member for Knaresborough, charged with selling protections; first refusing the oath on pretence that it was too general, and might criminate himself; and, when the Bible was brought, saying, “that the Bible used by them was not a true Bible, and therefore his oath would not bind him.” His committal, after repeating this, was on the principle that the words were used without any occasion given, to the scandal of the Protestant religion, and in the face of Parliament.

† The Parliament, soon after, removed the Earl of Portland from the government of the island, and appointed the Earl of Pembroke in his stead.
May it please yo' most excellent Matie,

By my let^ of y^ 2d of this moneth I advertised yo' Matie of y^ arrivall of Mr. Wm Murrey, & since he brings no certeyne news when yo' Matie intends to be here, but in generall that it wilbe shortly, I thought it my duty to put yo' Matie in minde, that y^ Lo. There came l'trs yesterday from Irland w^ confirme y^ newes of y^ Rebellion there, & say that the Rebells are come w^in 20 miles of Dublin, & are very cruel to y^ Englishe Protestants, and have donne much mischeif alreddy in y^ country:—There is order here for sending p'sently 2000 foote & 500 horse from hence into Irland: and S* Ja. May it please yo' most excellent Ma^tie,

I wrote to yo'r Ma^tie a few lynes yesterday by an expresse sent by ye Queene, & this morning I received yo' Ma^ties com'aunds by apostile of ye 30th of Sber. I have herew^th sent yo' Ma^tie a letr from my Lo. Keeper (& to Mr. Th'rer a Bill) for new Sheriffs for this next yeare, that yo' Ma^tie may be pleased to prick them there if you see thinke fitt; My Lo. Keeper desir'd me w'thall to send to yo' Ma^tie ye informac'on inclos'd, wch his Lo^ received (for sparing of some vpon that Bill) since ye same was made vp, that yo' Ma^tie may be pleased to take them into considerac'on.

The Lo^ds of your Ma^ties Privy Councell here have heard read all ye exa'iac'cons concerning Mar: Hamiltons, and ye Earles of Arguile & Lannerick absenting themselves, & since they receaved noe direcc'ons to com'unicate those exa'iac'cons to any other then to yo' Privy Councell, they thinke not fitt to pub-lishe ye same, otherwise then by declaring (to such as they shall have occasion to speake wth about that business), that they finde nothing in all those exa'iac'cons, that in any sorte reflects vpon yo' Ma^ties hono'. The exa'iac'cons, themselves are by their Lo^s left in my hands vnsealed, that any of ye Lo^ds of yo' Privy Counsell may see & reade them, but I am to give noe coppies of ye same, & ye Lo^ds of Commons were now as anxious for the King's coming back, as his friends could be; for on this day it was ordered by the House that a letter should be sent to the King, pressing his return.

I have com’unicated to y’e Lo’ds, & given them coppies of Mar: Hamiltons 3d letr to yo’ Ma’tie, wch doth give great satisfacc’on here to all men, that nothing in that vnhappy business doth in y’e least manner reflect on yo’ Ma’ties hono’.

The Parliam’ here takes to hart y’e Rebellion in Irland, & hath expressed a great affec’con to yo’ Ma’ties service in that partic’lar. They have resolved (as my Lo. Keeper desired me to signify to yo’ Ma’tie) to send thither 6000 foote & 2000 horse; whereof 2000 foote & 500 horse presently; & they are borrowing of y’e Citty 50m.1, wch they hope wilbe sent, & in confident, that they shall have y’e same to supply other paym’ts, they are now sending away 20m.1, wch they have reddy in cashe, & was designed for other affaires. My Lo. Keeper saith he hath sent yo’ Ma’tie l’trs touching y’e Irishe Rebellion to the Com’ittee of both Houses appointed to consider of & take care for all things that concerne that business, and will himself speedily give yo’ Ma’tie an accompt of yo’ Ma’ties comaunds, wch he receaved this day in y’e packet of y’e 30th of 8ber. I assure yo’ Ma’tie I find that it is noe easie matter in these mallevolent tymes, for an honnest man (that hath anything to doe in affaires) to p’serve himself & his reputac’on: but I hope yo’ Ma’tie will protect yo’ faithfull servaunts, that shall w th integrity & dilligence endeavour to serve you, as will ever after a long debate, they voted y'e same in y'e House, w'h was thereupon divided, & there were (as I heare)

110. votes against, & 151. for those instruct'ons, amongst w'h there is one head to y'e effect, (but a

May it please yo' most excellent Maᵗie,

By the Queenes com'and I sent yesterday one Smith expressly wᵗh her Maᵗies le⁰, wᶜ'h I hope he will p'sent safe, & wᵗh dilligence to your Royall hands. Wensday last there was a very greate debate in yᵉ Lᵒᵈᵉˢ House, touching instrucc'ons pᵉarded by yᵉ Com'ons to be sent to yᵉ Englishe Com'ittees att Edenburg; six of those instrucc'ons concerne yᵉ Rebellion in Irland, wᶜ'h yᵉ Lᵒᵈᵉˢ passed & approoved of, the 7ᵗʰ was concerning ill Councellors & Councells,* wᵗh held a very long debate, wherein I may not for-his sonne ye (Lo: Digby) did argue w^th soo much reason * & iudgem't, as they got ye 7th instrucc'on of both Houses, the Lo^des tould ye Com'ons, that they agreed to 6 of ye said instrucc'ons, but ye seventh leave it to a further tyme: Yo' Ma^tie may be pleased to take notice of ye singular good service that was in that busines donne by those 2 noblemen, & especially by the sonne, who (I heare) did beyond

My Lo: Keeper & Mr. Attor: Gen'rall have defered the issuing of ye Proclamac'on to require all

I have herew^th sent yo' Ma^tie a speech published here in the name of Mar: Hamilton, that yo' Ma^tie may see what artifice is here vsed by his friends to insinuate into ye people a good opinion of his Lo^s piety and integrity. The House of Com'ons was yesterday soe employed about Irishe affaires, as they meddled not w^th their Declarac'on, remonstrating ye

Ireland that ye rebels are 30. thousand strong, in several places of that kingdome, & that they approche

* Lord Digby had been an active enemy of Lord Strafford; but in a speech made to the House of Commons on the 21st of April, while still describing him as "a dangerous and insupportable minister to free subjects." His apparent objects were to preserve his own consistency, yet to save Lord Strafford's life; and an abler man would have found it difficult to reconcile them. His speech closed with a solemn protestation against any sentence of death: "and I do, with a clear conscience, wash my hands of this man's blood."

12° Novbris 1641. The Queene to me.

Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please yo' most excellent Ma'tie,
This is ye first day since my falling sick, that I have bene able to sit vp to write: & albeit I shall doe it w'th some difficulty, yet my duty will not suffer me to forbeare any longer to give yo' Ma'tie an accompt, that by Mr. Barkley I receaved on Sunday night last yo' Ma'ties comaunds in 3 apostiles dated ye 9th of this moneth: All w'ch I have alreddy p'form'd, excepting that concerning giving notice to my Lord Mayor of ye day of yo' Ma'ties entring into London, whereof (I beleeve) I shall this afternoone have certeynty from the Queene.

Herew'th yo' Ma'tie will receive a proclamac'on for ye attendance of ye Parliam't men, w'ch my Lo: Keeper & Mr. Attorney conceaved would have bene better to have bene forborne to be published till yo' Ma'ties returne, w'ch is now so neere in expectac'on. The House of Com'ons hastens by all meanes ye finishing of ye Declarac'on or Remonstrance, & for ye more speedy expediting of it, they have att ye Com'ittee passed by many p'ticlars to avoide ye delay of long debate.

The order of ye House of Com'ons for ye number of Scots to be sent into Irland, was altered from 1000. to 5000. vpon Saturday last in ye afternoone, & thoughge (wee heare) that ye imploym't of soe many Scots wilbe very acceptable to that nac'on, yet it is here apprehended by wise men, that ye same will exasperate ye Irishe, & make them buckle more resolutely to a warre of rebellion, then otherwise they would doe. Since ye'plot in delivering to
Mr. Pym* a letter with a plaster and a threatening in it, there was on Munday last in ye evening, another as desperate and dangerous a conspiracy against him, & diverse members of both Houses, discovered by a poore zealous taylor, who, being in ye fields mending ye notes he had taken of a sermon, there happened to come (as he relates it) 2. soouldier-like men, soe neere him, as he overheard them telling each other, how many of their acquaintance were to be forthwith employed to murther diverse members both of ye Upper and Lower House, & this taylor† had ye oportunity to take from those 2. mens mouthes ye names both of ye murtherers, & of ye p'sons to be murthered: the reward to him that kil'd a member of ye Lower House was to be 40s. & to him that murthered one of ye Upper House 10l. This discovery makes a great noyse in & about ye Parliam House, & (however many wise men give no creddit at all to it, yet) it hath produced several orders for securing of ye Parliam, & Parliament-men, the coppies of some of wch I have here inclosed sent yo' Ma'tie. The order of ye 16th p'sent,‡ wch requires that ye rigour of ye law be put in excuc'on against all Papists, that shalbe founde in London or Westminister after this night, is not (I heare) thought by some

* Plots against the life of Pym were rife at this time. Among the parliamentary chiefs he was the most prominent mark for such attempts, and many appear to have been undertaken. "He seemed to all men," says Clarendon, "to have the greatest influence upon the House of Commons of any man; and, in truth, I think he was the most popular man, and the most able to do hurt, that hath lived in any time." The first of the plots referred to by Nicholas was a strange one. The plague still lingered in various places in and near London; and it would seem that as the popular leader entered the House of Commons one day, the porter of the House delivered to him a letter (received from "a gentleman on horseback, in a grey coat, who gave him twelvepence for the speedy delivery of it"), from which, on his opening it, there dropped a covering which had come from a plague wound; the letter itself containing "many menaces and much railing against him."

† His name was Beale: but the House could procure no further intelligence of a satisfactory kind upon the subject; and whether the alleged conspiracy may not have been a piece of folly or of roguery on the part of the informer, is by no means clear.

‡ Not recorded in the Parliamentary History.
of ye Com'ons to be severe enough, soe as it is conceived there wilbe some more sharpnes added to that order this day: all ye' Papists Lo'des are alreadly removing out of this Towne uppon this order. Friday last (w'th was ye' first day of my falling into extremity) the Venetian Amb'dor complained att ye' Councell Boorde, that his l'rs had bene opened by ye' Com'ittces of Parliam', & he was soe much incensed at it, as he there made his protest, & declared, that he would take no further, & thereupon w'th drew himselfe (as I heare) to Greenew'ch, till such tyme as he shall advertise that Republique w'th that affront as he termed it. The agent of ye' D. of Florence is as highly distasted w'th some violence that hath been vsed in serching his house by some officers or warr'nt of Parliam': these distasts given to those Ministers will (it is thought) light very heavy on yo' Ma'ties su'bts trading [to] those partes, and will proove a very great p'rjudice & interrupc'on to ye' trade of this yo' Ma'ties kingdome.

I heare from a very good hand, that there are diverse principall gen't of Hertfordsh: who are desirous to tender their duty to yo' Ma'tie att Ware, & to wayte on you into that towne if yo' Ma'tie shall make any stop there, & they will bring w'th them diverse of their neighbours & friends, who are desirous to shew how welcome yo' Ma'ties returne is into that country, whereof I thought good to give yo' Ma'tie this tymely notice, for that I humbly conceaue it would not be amisse for yo' Ma'tie in these tymes to accept grac'ously ye' affecc'ons of yo' su'bts in that kinde, whereby you will have opportunity to shew yourself grac'ous to yo' people as yo' Ma'tie passeth, & to speake a few good words to them, w'th will gaine ye' aff'ons (especially of ye' vulgar) more then any thing that hath bene donne for them this Parliam'. This day ye' examinac'ons against O'Neale were read in ye' Com'ons House, wherein were menc'oned some l'rs & papers signed C. R., the effect of one of w'th (sent to Capt: Leg *) was (as I heare), that he should

* Captain Leg, otherwise Colonel; but better known as "honest Will Leg;" and ancestor of the Earls of Dartmouth.
speake with Sr Ja: Ashley according to instrucc'ons wth he had from yo' Ma'tie, & let none see that letr but only Sr Ja: Ashley, who, together wth Sr Jo. Conyers * (as I am toold, but I beseech yo' Ma'tie to take noe notice thereof from me) have bene very large & partic'lar in their examinac'ons, wth (I heare) reflect vpon yo' Ma'ties person: it is thought that ye Parliam' will condemne O'Neale, but they are not yet resolved where or how to trye him: they doubt ye testimony against him will not be soe full, as in a legall way to condemne him at the King's Bench barre, & they resolve not (as yet) whether it wilbe fit to doe it by a Bill, according to their legislative power.

I have (as yo' Ma'tie com'anded) given war to my Lo: Keeper to renew ye Com'ission of Lieutenn'cy for London, & to put in ye new Lo: Mayor, who is a very well affted servaunt of yo' Ma'ties.

There is a Com'ittee of both Houses appointed to prepare instrucc'ons for ye Lo: Lieutenant of Irland, wherewth they are now in hand. The 13 Bpps did demurre to ye busines agt them, but ye Com'ons have in their House overruled ye demurrer & voted that those Bpps shall answere in cheif. I dispatched ye Bills for ye new Bpps wth all expedic'on, & that busines is now in as good forwardnes as may be. I hope by that tyme yo' Ma'tie shall returne hither, to be able to goe abroade, in ye meane tyme, I will to ye best of my strength & abillity p'forme ye duty of Yo' sacred Ma'ties

Most humble & obedient servaunt,

Edw. Nicholas.

Sir Edward Nicholas to the King.

May it please yo' most excellent Ma'tie,

Yesterday I wrote to yo' Ma'tie, & addressed it by packet to ye D. of Richmond, as yo' Ma'tie co'manded me when you should be on yo' returne: since that, I have receaved from ye Queene 3 of my l'trs, all of them apostiled by yo' Ma'tie ye 13th of this moneth, & I humbly acknowledge myself infinitely obliged to yo' Ma'tie for yo' grac'ous goodnes in returning and burning my l'trs. I shall carefully obey all yo' Ma'ties com'ands in those l'trs. I have herew'h sent for yo' Ma'ties signature a draught for yo' Royall assent for ye Bpp of Lincolne* to be Archbp of Yorke: this was brought to me this day, & there is noe returne as yet made vpon ye Congé d'eslires for any of ye other Bpps. I have herew'h alsoe sent yo' Ma'tie a Bill coneyning a Com'ission to appoint ye Ea. of Holland to be Lo: G'rall of all yo' Ma'ties forces beyonde the Trent, wch com'ission yo' Ma'tie gave order for, before yo' iourney into Scotland, but it seemes by Mr. Attorney (who now brought me this by direcc'on from ye Parliam't to be sent wth speede to yo' Ma'tie) that vpon ye mistake of some name in ye former draught it passed not ye Greate Seale: I tood Mr. Attorney I did beleve yo' Ma'tie would not thinke fitt to signe it now before yo' returne; but howsoever he wished me to send it away to yo' Ma'tie wth ye first, because he had promised soe much to ye Lo'dds in P'liam': this is all I know of this busines, and yo' Ma'ties wisdome can best direct you what to doe in it.

The business against O'Neale is referred to a select Com'ittee to be p'pared reddy for ye House against Munday next, & some thinke it wilbe hardly heard then, for albeit ye Com'ons haue a very good minde to proceede roundly against him, yet (I heare) ye proofes are soe broken, as they will not make a full & cleere evidence: the worst in all that busines is, that it reflects on yo\' Ma\'tie, as if you had gien some instrucc\'ons concerning ye stirring up ye army to peton ye Parliam:\ I hope it will appeare that yo\' Ma\'ties intenc\'ons were only to reteyne ye army in their duty & dependance on yo\' Ma\'tie. The House of Com\'ons hath pressed ye Lo\des very earnestly for removall of ye Ea: of Portland from his gov\'ment of ye Isle of Weight, but ye Lo\des yesterday, upon his Lo\ns profession to liue & dye in ye Protestant religion, let fall that busines as by ye inclosed yo\' Ma\'tie will perceave. There hath bene nothing donne these 2 dayes by ye Com\'ons touching ye Declarac\'on remonstrating ye bad effects of ill councells, but it is thought that ye same wilbe finished this weeke: there are diverse well aff\'ed servants of yo\' Ma\ties in that House, that oppose that remonstrance w\'h vnanswer-able argum\'ts, but it is veryly thought that it will passe notw\'standing: & that it wilbe ordered to be printed w\'hout transmission to ye Lo\des. The Com-\'ons (I heare) haue intercepted some let\'s that passed betweene Mr. Crofts\† & ye\' Dutchess of Chevereux,\‡

† Mr. Crofts and Mr. William Murray, already mentioned, were two of those whom the Committee of Parliament, sitting at Grocers' Hall, declared to be persons of vile character, and enemies to liberty; passing at the same time a resolution that the King should be called on to dismiss them from his service. Crofts had married the aunt of the Earl of Warwick; and she had also been very active in Court intrigue previous to this, as appears by a reference to Bromley's Royal Letters, page 85.

an extract from a Copy of Verses made on the occasion by a Sir
J. M. (probably Sir John Mennes, author of the Musarum Delicia), of y^e Com'ons, & suspected, for that it hath bene informed, that he hath fortifyed that garrison to y^e land, & put forth some ould souldiers & put in new; whereby yo' Ma^te may see that every small matter ministers feare here amongst us. * Goring, in some subsequent transactions, underwent the imputation of having acted a double part with the King and the Parliament. When the war broke out, Goring, as Governor of Portsmouth, declared for the King; but that town, being unable to sustain a siege, was soon lost to the Royal Cause. Goring then went to France, as Bulstrode says, with the money he had received on both sides, "without making good his promises to either." That Author adds, that "if his conscience and integrity had equalled his wit and courage, he had been one of the most eminent men of the age he lived in; but he could not resist temptations, and was a man without scruple, and loved no man so well, but he would cozen him, and afterwards laugh at him." Goring's high command in the army, and subsequent court-favour, are supposed to have been occasioned in a great measure by the very active assistance he afforded to the Queen, whilst in France, in procuring both money and arms.

† It was a little after twelve when the "Great Remonstrance" was carried, by a majority of eleven. Hampden then moved that it should be printed, which Hyde met by a counter-motion, in which he claimed the right for the minority to be allowed to enter a formal protest against the decision of the House. It appears by the above letter that Nicholas had been informed of Hyde's intention to make this attempt. Hampden's motion was not carried till two o'clock, and after a scene of extraordinary excitement (in which bloodshed was only prevented, according to Sir Philip Warwick, "by the sagacity and great calmness of Mr. Hampden") the House adjourned at three o'clock. Sir Benjamin Rudyard compared the result to "the verdict of a starved jury."

Nicholas, I shall ad nothing to the seuerall good newes you will receaue by your fellow Secretairs letter, but the surpryse of Compton House by Sr W. Compton: † & to bid you tell your fellow Comissioners, ‡ that if there be any Treaty proposed the Correspondence. On the next day, the 26th of November, 1641, the loyal diligence of Mr. Secretary Nicholas was acknowledged and rewarded by the honour of Knighthood conferred on him at Whitehall, as appears from a MS. List of Knights of that reign in the Harleian Collection, No. 6832. In some old Tracts of that period we find also recorded "Five most noble Speeches" spoken to his Majesty by the mayors of several cities on his route homeward. The Mayor of York assured him: "Our well-tuned bells at this present time, to congratulat the welcome of so great a Prince, turne themselves, and doe willingly stand, as if Time commanded them soe to doe:" to which this ultra-loyal magistrate added: "our wives conceive with joye, our children's tongues are untyed with alacrity, and each one doth strive to cry welcome home to so indulgent a Soveraigne, our fields do seeme triumphing in their gay diapry to welcome home your Sacred Majesty, the woods doe seeme to contemne a falling Autumnne or a nipping Winter, and assume unto themselves their Spring liveries, and all to welcome home your most Sacred Majesty." The Mayor of Stamford, after describing himself as the King's "abject Lieutenant," enlarged upon the loyalty of his fellow citizens, and said that "each would have bin glad to have entertained the place of a speaker;" whilst Huntingdon's worshipful magistrate boasted, "that although Rome's Hens should daily hatch of its preposterous eggs, crocodilicall chickens, yet under the shield of Faith, by you our most Royal Soveraigne defended, and by the King of Heavens as I stand and your most medicable counsell, would we not be fearful to with-stand them."

* A long interval here occurs in the Correspondence, arising from the King's return. Nicholas appears to have been constantly attached to his Majesty's person, until his appointment as one of the Commissioners pending this well-known Treaty. The "good news" to which the King refers, may have been the entrance of the Scottish army into England, which took place on the 16th.

† Sir William Compton was third son of the Earl of Northampton. His two elder brothers were also active in the King's service.

* Montrose is represented by those who take the more favourable view of his character to have been secretly attached and faithful to the King's cause some time before he so declared himself, though the King had been kept ignorant of it by the artifices of the Marquis of Hamilton; for though in the beginning of the troubles in Scotland Montrose had joined the Presbyterian party, and was the first to sign the Covenant, yet seeing reason to change his views, and trusting to the weight of his family alliances, he is alleged to have come to England with the intention of rendering all the service in his power to the King. On his arrival, however, Hamilton, who had often been accused of deceiving Charles with respect to Scottish affairs, contrived so artfully to throw slights upon Montrose, that the latter returned to the Covenanters; with whom being again disgusted, he wrote shortly after to the King, expressing his loyalty and desire of serving him in the strongest terms; which letter, it is asserted, Hamilton took out of his Majesty's pocket in the night, and sent it secretly to the Covenanters.

Thus reinforced, these two Parliamentary Generals carried every thing before them. They had recently advanced into Oxfordshire, where they hovering about the King's head-quarters, and kept the Royal Army in constant alarm.

* This fast was appointed by the King, for a blessing on the Treaty then pending at Uxbridge. In the Mercurius Rusticus is a copy of the prayer ordered for the occasion; but as it spoke of the "unnatural War," and prayed the Almighty to "let the truth clearly appear, who those are, which under pretence of the public good do pursue their own private ends," it is not surprizing that obstacles were thrown in the way of its celebration.

† Waller was not a very fortunate General. Walker says of him, in the History of Independency, "that he lost two armies, yet was a gainer by the employment."
I shall not rely much upon it. God preserve your Majesty's person & prosper your designs, soe prayes your sacred Majesty.

Church, and sixpence for sweeping out that sacred edifice; making in all the grand total of two shillings and sixpence sterling.

In a very minute account of the King’s affairs at this period, written by Sir Edward Walker, Garter King at Arms, and preserved in the Harleian Collection, No. 4229, it is stated that the King arrived at Bewdley on the 12th; after having made that very arduous and judicious retreat from Oxfordshire, in which he evaded the pursuit of both Essex and Waller, by forced marches over the country between Witney and Worcester, along what was afterwards the Cheltenham road. The march upon Bewdley is said by Sir Edward to have been made with the intent of saving Worcester from a siege, of drawing Waller further from London, and also of enticing him into a difficult country, where the King’s army, then without artillery or heavy baggage, might obtain considerable advantage over him. Waller, however, avoided the western side of the Severn, and fixed his head-quarters at Bromsgrove, contenting himself with advancing a small body of horse to Kidderminster, the “Foreign” of which town, as it is called, reaches to the eastern end of Bewdley Bridge. The King’s foot were all in Bewdley on the 14th, and the horse quartered along the Severn towards Bridgenorth.

The King was so much aware of the delicacy of his situation at this moment, that on the day preceding the date of the letter in the text, he had formed a Council of War, directing them to meet every day and report their proceedings in respect to forming a plan of retreat, either into Wales or upon Shrewsbury; and on this day the Council and King determined to retreat back to Worcester, and so on to Evesham. He was closely followed by Waller; but, immediately after this date, eluded him so far as to reach Daventry before him, and finally he defeated Waller at Cropredy bridge on the 29th of June.

At the date of his letter the King had got intelligence that York was besieged by the Scottish army (just before the battle of Marston Moor), and that the Scots had been also joined by Fairfax and Lord Manchester. This fact explains the military orders given in it, which are perfectly in consonance with the existing accounts of Prince Rupert’s conduct previous to that battle. It may be remarked, however, that Bulstrode, as well as others, brings an accusation against Rupert for fighting the Parliamentary forces after raising the siege; but the express words of the King imply a desire not only for the relief of York, but also for a battle with the enemy; else why did he allude to “beating the Rebel armies” as a means of enabling him to spin out time? This is a most important fact in the history of the Civil Wars; for the Marquis of Newcastle, and other general officers, were so disgusted with the Prince for fighting against or without orders, as they supposed, that spare them from hence, I leave you to judge, having but 36 left: but what I can get from Bristoll (of wch there is not much certainty, it being threatened to be besieged) you shall haue.

But now I must giue you the trew state of my affaires, wch if their condic'on be such as enforces me to giue you more peremptory com'ands then I would willingly doe, you must not take it ill. If York be lost, I shall esteeme my Crowne little lesse, vnless supported by yo' suddain march to mee, & a miraculous conquest in the south, before the effects of the northern power can be found here: but if York be relieved, and you beat the Rebels armies of both kingdomes wch are before it; then, but otherwise not, I may possibly make a shift (vpon the defensive) to spin out time, vntill you come to assist me: Wherefore I command and coniure you by the duety & affecc'on wch I know you beare me, that (all new enterprises layd aside) you immediatly march (according to yo' first intention) with all yo' force to the reliefe of York: but if that be either lost, or haue freed themselves from the besiegers, or that for want of powder you cannot vndertake that work: that you immediately march with your whole strength to Worster, to assist me and my army, without wch, or yo' having releived York by beating the Scots, all the successes you can afterwards haue, most infallibly wilbe vselesse vnto me. You may beleive that nothing but an extreme necessity could make me write thus vnto you, wherefore, in this case, I can no wayes doubt of your punctuall compliance with

* It would seem to have been also the King's intention about this time to have done more for his secretary than mere thanks; for in a letter to the Queen, dated on the 27th of March, intercepted and published by the Parliament, he says, "As for Jack Barclay, I do not remember that I gave thee any hope of making him Master of the Wards; for Cottington had it long before thou went hence, and I intended it to Seer. Nich. if he then would have received it; and I am deceived if I did not tell thee of it."

† Evidently in reference to the sequestrations inflicted upon that nobleman.

‡ There are several places of this name; but it seems probable that the Wiston here meant is in Nottinghamshire.

* Goring at this time was engaged in the siege of Taunton, and had been ordered, as Bulstrode asserts, by letters from the King, to quit that place and join his Majesty, who was afraid, shortly before the battle of Naseby, that the enemy might prove too powerful for him. Bulstrode says that he wrote the General’s reply, in which Charles was urged to act upon the defensive until Taunton should be taken; but he hints some strong suspicions of Goring being actuated by sinister views. The whole passage is curious. See Bulstrode’s Memoirs, p. 124. Edit. 1721.

* The fact is, however, that Charles's general correspondence was, at this time, much interrupted; for the letter of Goring, already alluded to, was intercepted by Fairfax, and it was this which induced the parliamentary commanders to bring the King to action at Naseby, before he could be joined by the army from the West.

† A letter written by Charles, on this day, to the Queen, was intercepted by the Parliament. In it he assured her that the rebels had been forced to raise the siege of Oxford, in consequence of his march after the taking of Leicester; and that quarrels were then very frequent between Fairfax's and Cromwell's soldiers. written, that a Council was held in the King's tent, and a resolution taken to give battle; but it also appears, by this remarkable Letter, that when Charles went to supper on that memorable night he had no intention of adopting the course which, so recommended by his midnight Council, ended in his entire ruin. So little had he been conscious of the approach of the enemy, that on the previous day he had been hunting, and what he designed for the morrow (the fatal day of Naseby) we observe by the letter in the text.

* This letter is without date of place; but by means of it, and several of the subsequent ones, we mark the King's route between the battle of Naseby and his arrival at Newark; a space of time during which Bulstrode describes him as "flying from place to place, not well knowing which way to turn himself." It is evident, notwithstanding, that he had specific plans in view; on account of which he visited Wales, Shropshire, and afterwards Huntingdon and Yorkshire, before he proceeded to Newark.

* Goring had been defeated by Fairfax, on the 10th of this month, at Suttonfield, near Bridgewater, which town surrendered to the Parliament on the 23rd. Colonel Windham, the Governor, made a gallant defence. It was he who, some years afterwards, when he assisted Charles the Second in his escape, told the King that Sir Thomas his father, in the year 1636, a few days before his death, had called to him his five sons, and thus addressed them: "My children, we have seen hitherto serene and quiet times under our three last Sovereigns; but I must now warn you to prepare for clouds and storms. Factions arise on every side, and threaten the tranquillity of your native country. But whatever happen, do you faithfully honour and obey your Prince, and adhere to the Crown. I charge you never to forsake the Crown, though it should hang upon a bush."

† Charles (the Prince) had first been under the tuition of the Marquis of Newcastle, afterwards of the Marquis of Hertford; also of Dr. Duppa, Bishop of Salisbury. His education, latterly, was at Oxford, of which University the Marquis of Hertford was Chancellor.

‡ Berkeley was high in the Prince of Wales's confidence about the time of this "mystery:" for when Goring complained of the proceedings of the Prince's Council, Berkeley was sent, along with Sir Hugh Pollard and Colonel Ashburnham, to hold a private conference with him on the subject.

§ Sir Richard Grenville was soon after proposed to command the foot in the army of the West, when the insubordination of the troops, through the misconduct of Lord Wentworth, rendered new arrangements absolutely necessary. But Grenville, contrary to expectation, refused to act; and he was therefore sent prisoner to the Castle in Mount's Bay, where he remained until the successes of the Parliament army in that quarter induced the Prince, lest he

I did not justifie the treuth of your opinions concerning me, by my owen declaration, wch is this, that let my condition be neuer so low, my successes neuer so ill, I resolue (by the grace of God) neuer to yeald up this Church to the gouernement of Papists, Presbiterians, or Independants, nor to injure my successors, by lessning the Crowen of that ecclesias- ticall & military power wch my predecessors left me, nor forsake my friends, much lesse to lett them suffer when I doe not, for theire faithfulnesse to me, resoluing sooner to liue as miserable as the violent rage of successfull insulting Rebells can make me (wch I esteme far worse than death) rather then not to be exactly constant to thease grounds; from wch, whosoeuer, upon whatsoeuer occasion, shall persuade me to recede in the least title, I shall esteeme him ether a foole or a knaue; but you will aske me, Quorum hoc? Yes, for without this warning, the tender personall affection of some might giue me troblesome aduyce, & yet not blameable, considering the present condition of my affaires, & not knowing this my resolution, wch I comand you to publishe to all whom their quality or judgement makes fitt for such dicourses, & so I rest,

Nicholas, I receaued yesterday bothe of your letters (for I perceaeue by their markes, that you haue yet written no more) with the advertisments from London, wch as you say is worthy my notice, but without considering make this answer, that the just contrary, concerning the new discouery of my Com'ission in a letter to the two Queenes† about the Irishe Papists, is trew: for indeed that roag Hartogen made such a foolish proposition, but it was flatly denied by me, & (if my memory much faile me not) my Wyfe tooke occasion upon some clause in my answer, whery by it semed to her (in wch she was mistaken) as if I thought she had lyke the proposition, to disclaime any parte in it (so far from aprobation) but only the transmitting of it to me, wch certainly was not fitt for her to refuse: & this (with many other ansome expressions of her affection to me, euenuous to the ventring of being thought a Protestant in condemning the Irish proceedings) was, as I beliue, in that letter wch Tom Elliot deliuered me from her, as I was marching over Broadway Hills the 9 of May last; for I am sure the most of that letter was concerning the Irish business, & I know the reason why the Rebelles haue not printed it is, because it cleers that point more then any of those betweene vs, wth are published: That all this is trew, & that the Rebelles haue all this under my Wyfes hand & myne, I comand you to affirme positiuely in my name upon all occasions of this subject: but it is possible that all I mention to be, is not in the letter Tom Elliot brought me (though I am sure most is), but then it is in some other. But yet I shall tell you my opinion as farr forth as I can judge at this distance, w*ch is, that you should beginne with securing the person of Will: Legge, before any thing be declared concerninge my Nephew. But that once done, then the sooner you declare to the Lords both the revokinge of my Nephews commission, and my makinge Sr Thomas Glemham Gouernour of Oxford, the better. As for the deliuery of my letter to my Nepheu, if hee bee at Oxford, I take the proper time for that to be as soone as possiblye may bee after the securinge of Will: Legge. But if my Nepheu be not there, I would then haue you hasten my letter unto him, and in the meane time putt the rest in execution.

The warrant for my Nephews commitment is onely that you may haue the power to doe it, if in

* The King appears to have reposed great confidence in Sir Thomas Glemham, notwithstanding his surrender of Carlisle on the 28th of June preceding; which, however, had not taken place till after a long siege, and when he had reason finally to despair of succour. Indeed he had distinguished himself, from the first, in the Royal Cause; having been second in command in Yorkshire, under the Earl of Cumberland.

May it please yo' most excellent Ma\textsuperscript{tie},

Whereas in all humility wee came to present our selues this day unto your Ma\textsuperscript{tie}, to make our seuerall

\textsuperscript{*} The King's anger at the surrender of Bristol is not surprising, when it is recollected that Prince Rupert possessed at the time 140 pieces of mounted cannon, 100 barrels of powder, with 2500 foot, 1000 horse, and 1000 trained bands and auxiliaries; on the other hand, he had not more than sixteen days' provisions for such a force. But the King's feelings at this precise period must have been very bitter; since the immediate and consequent loss of Devizes, Winchester, Basing House, Berkeley Castle, and Chepstowe, had reduced his affairs to a situation almost desperate.

\textsuperscript{†} The affair that gave rise to this Petition deserves notice. The King having at this moment gone to Newark, as a place of the best greevances knowne, Wee find we haue drawne upon us some misconstruction by the manner of that, by reason your Ma" thought that appeared as a mutiny, Wee shall therefore with all humblenes and carefulnes present unto your Ma" that wee, the persons subscribed, whom from the beginning of this unhappy warre haue giuen such testimony to your Ma" and the world of our fidelity and zeale to your Ma"s person and cause, doe thinke our selves unhappy to lye under that censure; and as wee know in our consciences our selues innocent and free from that, wee doe in all humility therefore (least wee should hazard our selues upon a second misinterpretation) present these reasons of our humblest desires unto your sacred Ma", rather in writing than personnally, which are these:

That many of us trusted in high commands in your Ma"s service, haue not only our com"ssion taken away without any reason or cause expressed, whereby our honors are blemished to the world, our fortunes ruined, and wee rendred incapable of trust or command from any forraigne Prince; but many others (as we have cause to feare) designed to suffer in the same manner.

Our intention in our addressing our selues to your Ma" and our submissiue desires, now are: that yo"" Ma" wilbee graciously pleased that such of us as now labour under the opinion of unworthinesse and incasecurity, some differences of opinion arose among his confidential officers respecting the defeat of Lord Digby at Sherborne, which General Gerard asserted to be the result of treason. Digby's character, however, was supported by Bellasis, the Governor, and several others; but the Princes, Rupert and Maurice, sided with Gerard. At length swords were drawn, and the King rushed in to part them; but when it was found that his opinion was in favour of Digby, Prince Rupert, and 400 of that party, actually threw up their commissions, as Burton declares in his Civil Wars. This Petition now printed, however, seems to imply positively that their commissions were taken from them. There appears a strange inconsistency in the accounts given of these affairs by the various contemporary writers of the period. The curious reader will find much amusement in referring to Bulstrode's Memoirs, page 127, et seq.;

and to the notices by Clarendon.
pacity to serve your Ma^tie, may at a Councell of Warre, receive knowledge of the cause of your Ma^ties displeasure, and have the justice and libertie of our defence against what can be alleaged against us, and in particular concerning this Government; and if upon the severest examinac'on our integrity and loyaltie to your Ma^tie shall appeare, that then your Ma^tie be graciously pleased to grant us, either repARATION in honour, against the of our ennemys, or libertie to passe into other partes, which are the humblest desires of

Sr,

You cannot suppose the work is donn, though God should suffer you to destroy the King: the miseryes

* This and the letter which follows it are remarkable illustrations of the secret history of the time. The royal overtures to Vane came to the knowledge of Essex, who complained of them by letter to the House of Lords. On inquiry, however, it turned out that Vane had communicated them already to the Speaker, to a Committee of the House of Commons of which he was a member, and to the Scots Commissioners.
which will inevitably follow are soe plaine in view, that it is more then necessary some speedy expedient be found for their preuention. Is it not cleere to you (to me it is) that Spaine and ffrance will instantly conclude a peace: and that ffrance makes great preparations to ioyne with the Scotts (when the breach betwenee you and them shall happen) whilst Spaine labours to be Protector of Ireland, and will vndoubtedly carry itt. Consider well, whether the season is not proper for this designe, when the wealth of this nation is already so exhausted, and the sufferings of the people soe great, that they are no longer to be supported. This is reason, tis not to cast a bone amongst you: The only remedye is (and it is a safe and honourable one for you) that you sett your selfe, the gentleman that was quartered with you, and all his and your freinds to preuaile, that the King may come to London vpon the termes he hath offered; where, if Presbitery shall be soe strongly insisted vpon as that there can be noe peace without itt, you shall certainly haue all the power my master cann make to ioyne with you in rooting out of this king-dome that tyrannicall Gouernment; with this condition, that my master may not haue his conscience disturbed (yours being free) when that easy worke is finished. Loose not this faire opertunity, the like was never offered, nor euer will be; for itt brings all things of benifitt and advantage imagin-able, both to the generall and to your particular; to him that was quartered with you, and to his & you freinds: and shall be honestly made good. Trust to me for the performance of itt; waigh itt sadly, and againe relye upon me. Bee confident, that neither he that carryes this, nor he that deliuers it to you, knowes any thing of itt. Sr,

I shall only add this word to what was said in my last: that you hasten my business all that possibly you cann; the occasion lately giuen being fairer than euer, and donn on purpose. Be very confident that all things shall be performed according to my promise. By all that is good, I coniure you, to dispatch that curtoysye for me with all speed, or it will be too late, I shall perish before I receive the fruits of itt. I may not tell you my necessityes, but if it were necessary soe to doe, I am sure you would lay all other considerations aside, and fulfill my desires. This is all: trust me, I will repay your fauour to the full. I have donn. If I haue not an answeare within foure dayes after the receipt of this, I shall be necessitated to finde some other expedient. God direct you, I haue discharged my dutye. (Not signed.)

“This is a true Copie of what was sent by Jack Asheburnham & my comand to Sir Henry Vane the younger. C. R.”

The King's promise to Mons. de Montreuil concerning those that should come with him to the Scots Army.

I do promise to Mounsieur de Montreull, that none shall come with me to the Scots army, or meet me there, who are excepted by those att London, but only my two nepheues, and Jack Ashburnham.*

* The King's confidence in Ashburnham was very great at this crisis. But a very short time before, he was obliged, by the approach of Fairfax, to escape from Oxford in disguise; and this he did as the servant of Ashburnham: after which he joined the Scottish army before Newark. Yet Ashburnham is accused of having misled the King when he was taken prisoner in 1648, either through treachery.
Notwithstanding, the said Montreuill is to receaue this my protestation, that all my seruants, and all others who doe adheare to me, shalbe saued from ruine, or any publique dishonour; which is a condition that my wife writt to me that not only she, but likewise Cardinall Mazarine,* were absolutely of opinion that I was sooner to dye, than not to haue. As for Church Gouvemement, as I haue already, soe I now againe promise, that as-soone as I come into the Scotts army, I shall be very willing to be instructed concerning the presbiteriall gouernement: whereupon they shall see, that I shall strue to content them in any thing, that shall not be against my conscience.

or folly. Bulstrode (in his Memoirs) asserts that when Charles arrived in great privacy at the house of Lady Southampton, and Ashburnham went up stairs to the King's bed-chamber to announce to him that Colonel Hammond was below at supper, and had given assurance for his Majesty's safety, but not of liberty for his person, the King instantly, with much emotion, struck his hand upon his breast, exclaiming, "And is this all! Then I am betrayed!"

* Mazarine had recently become Prime Minister of France, in consequence of the death of Richelieu. The latter bore an implacable malice and hatred to England for her interference respecting the French Protestants, particularly in the affairs of the Isle du Rhe, and Rochelle. It is curious to compare this opinion of Mazarine with the well authenticated fact that, notwithstanding his outward appearance of friendship for the King, he was keeping up a good correspondence with the Parliament through the medium of Don Alonzo de Cardenas, the Spanish Ambassador.

† Montreuil, or Montreville, seems in this affair to have been the tool of Mazarine in deceiving the King; for all the contemporary writers, Warwick, Bulstrode, &c., assert that he had promised, in the name of the King of France, that Charles should be secure under the protection of the Scottish army.

* Oxford was at this moment nearly reduced; so that Sir Thomas Glemham, the Governor, in answer to a summons, asked permission to send a messenger to the King for orders. This, however, was refused by Fairfax, and the city was delivered up, but not until after a treaty of some weeks' continuance. The actual date of the surrender was the 24th of June. The facts contained in the indorsements possess considerable interest for the future historian. When this letter was written, the King was with the Scottish army, who had retreated thus far after the surrender of Newark to the Parliament. * This part of the correspondence is important, as it took place about the period when the Scottish army were engaged in the negotiations for the surrender of the King to the English Parliament. In a Glasgow publication of Original Letters (1766) there is one from a Scottish Commissioner, who observes, "many of the King's greatest friends think his obstinacy judicial, as if in God's justice he were destroying himself." There is noe meanes to raise any considerable forces for an army ag\textsuperscript{y} ye next Spring: for that all Wales was lost p'esently after ye losse of Bristol, and since that, Munmouth & Hereford.

Chester is in imminent danger to be likewise lost: Newark & Belvoir Castle* are besieged & in danger.

In ye west there are about 5 or 6000 horse & foote, but there are there soe great divisions amongst the cheif officers, and the Councell that attend ye Prince, as for want of condevt these forces are disunited, and ye country soe disaffectd to them by reason of the soldiors rapine and oppression, as ye country rises against them whesoever they come into any place not in a body, and the country is soe wasted, as it cannot feede them when they lye together in a body. been given up to the Parliament, and three months previous to his seizure by Cornet Joyce, on the part of Cromwell and the army. A very minute and interesting account of these transactions will be found in Sir Thomas Herbert's memoirs of the two last years of the unhappy monarch. There is a remarkable passage alluding to them in a letter from the Earl of Panmure to Lord Wariston, dated 23rd January, 1647; where he says, "His Majesty is so well resolved now for his going to Holmby as ever I saw him for anything. He thinks that the Scots have sold him at too cheap a rate. If our posterity find not the smart thereof, it is well."
A Memorandum in King Charles the First’s own handwriting:

CORRESPONDENCE OF

SIR EDWARD NICHOLAS

AND

VARIOUS MEMBERS OF THE ROYAL FAMILY;

DURING THE

COMMONWEALTH AND PROTECTORATE.
The subjoined letters, in continuation of the preceding correspondence, will be found to require little illustrative comment. They embrace the brief and unsuccessful royalist campaign which closed on the field of Worcester; they contain illustrations of Charles the Second’s distrust and dislike of his Presbyterian friends and supporters; but they derive perhaps their chief interest from the gossiping details in which the deceased King’s sister, Elizabeth of Bohemia, so largely indulges, and in which the fears and jealousies, the enjoyments and privations of the Exiles, the fluctuation of her nephew’s hopes, Cromwell’s assumption of power, the vagaries of the errant Queen of Sweden, the attempts of the Queen-mother Henrietta to make Roman Catholics of her children, and the childhood of that young Prince of Orange for whom those attempts were preparing a throne, are curiously and impartially mixed up. The letter of earnest remonstrance to the Duke of Gloucester, “concerning his being tempted to turne papist,” bearing the signature of his elder brother, is a somewhat strange comment on the faith in which Charles the Second died.

That what instructions & com'ands were giuen to his Sonne for his firmenesse to the Protestant religion, were giuen out of politique considerations meereely, and many other particulars, w^ch I hope will bring it to the hands of the common-hangman.

This Marsys is one who setting out the tryall of the late King, and ye manner of his murther, stiles himselfe "Interprete et Maistre pour la langue Francoise du Roy d'Angleterre regnant a present et de son Altesse Royale le Due d' Yorke son frere," in w^ch Booke he stiles Queene Elizabeth (of euer blessed memory) Jezabell. He setts downe a false and faigned speech of the King's at ye time of his being murthered; & being charged with it, he said he thought fitt to make that speech as spoken by him, since the speech he did make was poore and below a King. He hath sett forth divers other things, an extract whereof I shall shortly send you, the least of w^ch would deserve a whipping in England in good such a procedure would produce much alarm among the Protestant friends to his cause. He therefore went no farther than Jersey, where he was proclaimed King, a short time previous to the date of this Remonstrance. To what Courtier or Minister about Charles's person it was addressed, does not appear; but it was written by Sir Edward Nicholas during his retreat from England, after the death of his royal master. He appears at its date to have been resident with his relative, Sir Richard Browne, who still remained Charge d’Affaires at the French Court.

* The wish here expressed was not fulfilled specifically; though afterwards in some measure gratified by the publication of "Eikon Aklastos" in 1651, as a vindication of the original work against the attacks of "Eikonoklastes." The reader may find some interest in turning from this letter to the very copious essay on the subject by Mr. Nichols in Literary Anecdotes, vol. i., p. 522.
times to speake moderately. I presume you will giue this busines a thorough sifting there in counsell, and send some directions to Sr Rich: Browne how to proceede here; that it may appeare who sett him on worke here, and who giues him these exact coppies, w'ch he pretends to haue under ye King's owne hand, and those other peeces of the King's, w'ch he so braggs of, and promises he will bring them to light, so soone as he obtaines leave to publish them. I hope some course wilbe taken that he may be discharged of his titles of relation to the King, and that his Ma't will hereupon giue order, that a true coppy may be printed in french of his Father's Booke, declared by him to be authentique, waving both the editions either of Huguenot or Papist, and that this command be grounded upon the ill editions of both these persons and party's.

Sir Edward Nicholas to King Charles the Second.

May it please yo'r Ma't.*

I came to yo'r Ma'te out of duty to serve you if I could, not out of designe to gaine preferment, & though I understood well, that yo'r Ma'tes Privy Councell here was neither of number or weight equall to ye importaunce of yo'r Ma'tes affaires, yet yo'r Ma'te being then resolved to goe for Irland (where I conceaved there would be an addition of Councillors answearable to ye weight of yo'r aff'res) I did ye more willingly tender my humble services here.

But since its not now councellable for yo'r Ma'te upon ye change of yo'r busines in Irla: to goe thither, I held it my duty humbly to advise you, that I find ye aff'res of soe great importaunce, & of such a nature, as (in my poore iudgem') it will not be possible for you to man'age ye same without a steddy, setled, &

* Written by Sir Edward Nicholas, and alluded to in a note, ante, p. 184.
more full Councell of able, graue & experienced p'sons of unblemished integrity, whose honor, esteeme, fidelitty, & prudence may raise ye reputa-c'on of yo' Councell from that greate contempt it lyes under both at home and abroade; & whereby forraigne Pr'es may be encouraged to assist yo' Ma'tie, & yo' Royall party in Engl: to appeare more vigorously for you.

If for want of such a setled & ho'ly Privy Councell, yo' Ma'tie shalbe necessitated (as lately) to call (upon every important occasion) such to Councell who are not sworne, it will not much satisfy yo' party in Engla: nor advantage yo' aff'es. Besides yo' Privy Councell wilbe att a great disadvantage, when they are to give their advise upon oath, & are by ye same obliged to be secreat, & ye others shalbe att liberty & under noe tye att all.

My humble advise therefore is, that yo' Ma'tie forthw' th endeavour by all meanes possible to get a Councell composed of a convenient number of such ho'ly, experienced, & faithfull p'sons, as may be equall to ye great importaunce of yo' p'sent aff'es, & above ye contempt that yo' now Councell lyes under, aswell in yo' owne Court, as abroade, w'thout w'ch it will not be possible for you to goe throughge yo' greate businesses.

As for my owne particular,*

I humbly beseech yo' Ma'tie to give me leave to put you in minde, that att St. Germaims ye Ma'tie comaunded me to wayte on you in this place, where you were pleased to tell me you should have occasion to make use of my service as Secre'tie, & to that end

* De Larrey, a French contemporary writer formerly quoted, says of Sir Edward Nicholas, that he had much better qualities and more zeal for the late Monarch, than the preceding Secretary of State, Windebank. He adds, that he was truly devoted to the Church of England; and having, besides, as much integrity as ability, was as faithful to the son as to the father. "Charles II. recompensed his fidelity, and restored him, in 1658, to the post that his father had given him; if this employment was honourable to him, all the profit redounded to the King, who conferred it on him not till he left France, and when he was a wanderer from Court to Court, and from country to country."
Yo' Matie commaunded me to gett prepared a signet, and other provisions fitting, w'ch accordingly I p'vided att my owne cost. I was there further toould from yo' Matie, that when I came to Jersey, I should be sworne Sec'rie. And since I came hither, yo' Matie toould me I should be sworne, as soon as I came into Irla: Now since yo' Matie goes not for Irla: I humbly desire that I may be sworne before yo' Maties dep'ture from hence:

1. Because, I know ye busines belonging to a Sec'rie of State ought not to be p'formed by one that is not sworne in ye place.

2. For that ye busines I shall doe (not being sworne), will not have that creddit & esteeme, as is requisitt for ye advantage of affaires of that nature.

3. That it wilbe a great disrepute for me (who have had the honor to serve yo' Royale father 7 yeares in that office) to execute any considerable p'te thereof, & not be established in it by oath, w'ch only can make a man capable of p'formaunce of the duty of that place, as it ought to be.

Yo' Maties obiection, that if you sweare me, you must doe ye like for Mr. Long,* is rather a discouragement then a satisfac'con to me, who did hope my soe long faithfull service to yo' Royall father would have mov'd yo' Matie to make more difference betweene us, since I have hitherto (I thanke God) carried a cleere reputac'on in all my wayes.

Wherefore its my most humble suyte, that yo' Matie wilbe pleased either to give order that I may be sworne yo' Maties Sec'rie (whereby I may be enabled to doe you service), or else that I may have leave w'th yo' Maties gracious favour, to retire untill my faithfull & disinterested service may be of more use in yo' Maties affaires.

ST. JOHNSTONS: Sept. 3, 1650.*

Mr. Secr: Nicholas, I haue giuen this bearer his dispatch, and haue signed all the Commissions, with 53 blankes wth I desire you to fill up as you shall haue observe, that if the hand-writing of the rival Secretaries had been allowed any weight in the discussion of the question, Mr. Long must have proved successful against Sir Edward; his mode of writing being singularly precise and clear, whilst that of Nicholas is often scarcely intelligible.

It was on the day when the above letter was written, Cromwell's "fortunate day," that the Scots were defeated at Dunbar. § Repeatedly mentioned in letters from the Elector Palatine to his mother, preserved in Bromley's Collection. He appears to have been attached to the personal service of the Queen of Bohemia.
|| The far-famed Christina. It was in this year that she abdicated the throne. There were several personal squabbles between the Ex-Queen of Sweden and the Ex-Queen of Bohemia; and Christina was not a little jealous of Elizabeth's distinguished correspondents, among whom she at this time numbered Des Cartes and Admiral Penn. Christina, who had just treated and negotiated with Cromwell, even after her abdication still attempted to mingle in politics. She also offered occasionally personal slights to the Queen of Bohemia; which may account for the manner in which she is spoken of in passages of these letters.
¶ The writer's spleen against Christina seems here to extend itself even to her own relations: for Emilia, Princess of Tarente, was daughter of William, Landgrave of Hesse Cassel; and Charlotte, of our French gallants, who came all sneaking home againe, for her greefe was so great for the beating of the Spanish armie before Arras* as she would not goe to Breda. She sent another account than that to the Ambassadour as you may imagin, but the Landgrave writt the truth to his niecee the Princess of Tarente. We haue yet heere no particulars of this defeat, but in generall it is a verie great one. I long to heare what part my godsonne† had in it, for I still thinke of him, being my cheefest comfort next your excellent Master. I ame verie glad your daughter is so well, I doe not wonder at it, she is soe well vsed, and now she has her father with her she is the more content, and I take it verie well that all this makes her not forget her frends here. I assure you I long to haue her heere againe. I am verie sorie for poore Killegrew,‡ she was a verie good gentlewoman. You will heare by Mrs Howards letter howe great a scape my little Nephue§ escaped yesterday vpon the bridge at the Princess of Orange's house, but God be thanked there was no hurt onelie the coache broken: I tooke him into my coache and brought him home. I stayed but Sunday at Bruxelles, and returned to Anwerp vpon Munday, and heearing from Duart how the Queene of Sueden had desired to know when I came back thither, that she might meet with me in an indifferet place, I made the more hast away the next day because I had no minde to speak with her since I heard how unhandsomelie she had spoken of the King my deare Brother and of the King my deare Nephue, and indeed of all our nation, so I auoided it and went away as soone as I had dined. It's confidently averred, if the King had become absolute here in England, Aurange had been King, &c." PRIVATE CORRESPONDENCE

SIR EDWARD HYDE

AND

AMBASSADOR TO THE COURT OF FRANCE, IN THE TIME OF KING CHARLES I.
The letters now to be given, also from the papers of Sir Richard Browne, will be found to throw additional and valuable light on the condition of the various members of the royal family and their adherents during the interval between the death of Charles the First and the Restoration. Only the first two letters of the series are of earlier date. These were written (in 1646) from Jersey, whither Hyde had accompanied the Prince of Wales, afterwards Charles the Second; having been named of his Council in the preceding year. His object at this time was to counteract the intrigues of the Queen to get possession of the Prince; and the desponding tone in which these letters are written marks the failure of that design. The first is dated but a few days after the Prince had left Jersey to join his mother in Paris. Jersey was now under the government of Lord Jermyn, the Queen’s favourite; but his deputy, Sir George Carteret, was Hyde’s intimate friend; and with him he remained, solaced also by the friendly intercourse of Lords Hopton and Capel, and engaged in the composition of his History of the Rebellion, which he had begun at Scilly not many weeks before. He did not quit this retreat till 1648. During the same period Sir Edward Nicholas was at Caen in Normandy, and afterwards in Holland, where, on being obliged to fly from England, he had the King’s permission to reside. Lord Digby also, to whom frequent reference is made, had been in Ireland at the time of the Prince’s flight to Jersey, but joined him soon after with two frigates and two hundred soldiers, strenuously to advise an attempt upon Ireland, in which the Prince refused to engage. On quitting Jersey in 1648, Hyde joined Charles in Holland (his Life gives an interesting notice of his adventures on that occasion), and soon after the King’s death he was sent Ambassador to Spain, from which country he rejoined Charles in France, and was appointed Resident at Antwerp, where he remained during the unsuccessful Scotch campaign, and till he and his master again met after the escape from the field of Worcester. In the later passages of the Correspondence, to which these events bring us, so many allusions occur to the royal fleet that it may be desirable to describe its position at the time. When Charles I. perished on the scaffold, a portion of the navy revolted from the Parliament, and sailed to Holland in aid of the Royal exiles. These ships were put under the command of Prince Rupert, and were employed by him in a predatory warfare against the Commonwealth, besides making several attempts on the Eastern coast of England in aid of the small Royal party still existing there; after which they proceeded to the Irish coast, where they took some valuable prizes. The Parliament sent Blake after them; but in 1649, Rupert, having forced his way through Blake's fleet, continued to capture English ships, apparently on his own account, and indeed without either asking for, or receiving, any orders from the young exiled King. He then proceeded for Portugal, but was forced off by Blake, so that he was obliged to fly for the Mediterranean, where he commenced aggressions on the Spaniards, and having afterwards repaired and refitted at Toulon, from whence he found it necessary to retire, sailed, in 1650, for the West Indies. At this period Scilly and Jersey sent out swarms of privateers; but those islands being captured by the Parliamentary forces, the freebooters were obliged to bring their prizes into the ports of Britain; and, in return for the sanction of Royal Commissions, were called upon to pay certain droits into the King's Exchequer. To that arrangement many of the following Letters refer. In 1652, Rupert arrived at Nantes on his return from the West Indies, after suffering heavy losses from storms; so that, in fact, he only brought back one man of war, and three or four other vessels, being the sole remains of twenty-five ships of force of which his squadron originally consisted: and these he was compelled to sell to pay his seamen, under circumstances which will be found illustrated in the ensuing Correspondence.
Finally, it may be convenient to bring to the reader's recollection that the young King staid at Paris until 1654, when he proceeded through Flanders to Spa; thence to Aix-la-Chapelle, and ultimately to Cologne; and that in January 1658, he was at Bruges, where he appointed Sir Edward Hyde, his Chancellor of the Exchequer up to that period, to be Lord Chancellor of England. It is of course needless to add that the men among whom these high-sounding titles were thus exchanged continued still to be as powerless as they were poor; they found themselves destitute even of the ordinary comforts of existence; yet, as the letters now printed show, this little exiled Court had its intrigues, jealousies, fears, and hopes, in quite as great an abundance as when, after the lapse of a few years, it was "restored" to Whitehall and St. James's.

Deputy Governor of Jersey, was then, or soon after, a Rear Admiral in the French service, though still attached to the Royal cause. Sir Richard Browne, the King's resident at Paris, had been dispatched to arrane affairs at Brest.

* The Duke of York had much personal interest at this crisis at the French Court; having very recently distinguished himself in the French King's service, under the command of General Count Harcourt, and against the Prince de Conde's forces, especially on the preceding Christmas day, when, though Conde was finally victorious, the Duke had charged against him in person, being in command of the forlorn hope, consisting of the English cavalry. In this rencontre the Duke's horse was shot under him; but he himself received little hurt. See a printed pamphlet in the British Museum, A bloody fight in France, Lond. 1651-2.

† The hopes of Lord Clarendon from the promises of Castelnau were but indifferently founded; for the pamphlet quoted in the preceding note expressly states that at this period the return of the Cardinal Mazarin into France with a force of 7000 men had produced great jealousies at that Court, and that Castelnaa and Villeroy, having forwarded his return, with the express purpose to undo him, were suspected of that design, and had in consequence forsaken the Court. Castelnaa's deputy had pretended an order from his Court to detain the prizes, in the hope of being bribed by the captors.

‡ This little squadron had been recently very active, particularly in the chops of the Channel; but the republican newspapers of the day affected to treat them with great contempt. In one of these Intelligencers, of the 8th of the preceding month, preserved in the British Museum, it was roundly stated that Capt. Chapman, in the Recovery, convoying a small vessel for Ireland, had met with the Francis, the Patrick, and the Hunter, and maintained a gallant fight from eleven at noon till night parted them. Prince Rupert is also stated to be at this period at sea, "with six or seven lusty ships," and to have taken several Spanish vessels.

* It was at this time reported in the London papers that the King intended to set out for Rome, professing openly the Catholic religion, on which terms it had been promised to him that the Duke of Lorraine should make a diversion in his favour in Ireland, by the relief of Galway, and by a general interference in affairs in that quarter.
† Commander of one of the privateers attached to the Royal cause.
‡ The royal fleet and the privateers were now in great distress for a port to shelter them, in consequence of the Parliament having captured the Scilly islands, which had for some time been their principal harbour; Jersey also having fallen.
§ Though the fleet under Prince Rupert was, strictly speaking, an English one, yet it appears that in a recent attack upon the Spaniards he was avenging a private cause; for when, in the spring of 1652, he sailed from Toulon with four men-of-war and two fire-ships, and

I know not what to say to the complainte of your seru', because you will not giue me leaue to take notice of it to the partyes who are most concerned, but I believe ther may be some errour or malice in the reporte,† because I am told by a very true frende of yours, that it is the maydes owne fault that shee hath not her dyvett ther, and that because shee might not be trusted with the gouerm't of the kitchen and the buyinge the meate (in which shee was thought to lauish) shee absolutely with greate indignation refuses to take her dyvett, with which they say the lady is much troubled: but I tell you agayne, I haue this only from a frende, and not any of the house. I doubte your mayde is apt to be angry, and when shee is, shee may be as unreason- able, as such angry people vse to be. Upon my conscience you haue not the least reason to suspecte Geo. † Nothing can more whimsically mark the great change in the circumstances of the English courtiers than this rapid transition from national politics to kitchen gossip.

‡ Sir George Carteret, before this period, had been, as Deputy to Lord Jermy, Governor of Elizabeth Castle, in Jersey, besieged by the Parliamentary forces in 1651. His conduct in that post was so admirable as to exact the praise even of his enemies, one of whom said in a letter, preserved in the British Museum, "I hear he hath sent to the Scots King, to acquaint him with the state of affairs, as touching our approach, and condition of the Castle, from whom he

The scandal of the day asserted also that Charles was by no means a favourite with many of the highest rank in France; and it is recorded in a Gazette, or Mercurius Politicus, of the 1st July, 1652, in the British Museum, that “Charles Stuart hath secured himself by showing them a pair of heels” (after the victory obtained by the Prince of Condé close to Paris), “and retreating from the Louvre to Court, where the King harbours him, being highly distasted by the Duke of Orleans, Mademoiselle, the Princes, and all the people, so that they have made several books and songs of him.”

* Sir John Mennes was Rear-admiral of the Fleet in the reign of Charles the First; and distinguished as one of the most loyal of the officers, when Parliament took those steps which led to the defection of the greatest part of the naval force. He was removed from his station by the Earl of Warwick, in 1642, after the unsuccessful attempt of the King to regain the fleet in the Humber, which failed through some mismanagement on the part of Sir John Pennington.

† Dr. Earle, afterwards Bishop of Salisbury, author of the Microcosmography, was one of the Loyalists attached to the exiled Court, and Chaplain to the King. He was in habits of friendly intimacy with Hyde, two of whose letters to him may be found in
vol. ii. of the Clarendon State Papers, pp. 322, 329. In the latter, Sir Edward facetiously arranges employment for the Doctor's leisure, allowing him two hours to eat his dinner, and "two hours in the projecting where to get one."

Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

S r,

I haue not had an opportunity till now to acknowledge the receipte of yours of the 24. which came safe to me, and the contents therof were immediately by me imparted to his Ma^*‘, who had not before heard of many of the particulars, nor do wee yett heare from the Court of any such message † sent from the Duke of Orleans, which it seemes they thinke fitt to conceale, when they do not intende to satisfy.

I am very sorry for the good Deanes‡ indisposicon, though I am gladd it is nothinge but a fitt of

* Edgman was Secretary to Sir Edward Hyde, who once vindicated him from a charge of having violated a seal by declaring he knew him to be so honest that before he would be guilty of such a villainy he would starve.

† Comparing this letter with another of the same date to Sir Edward Nicholas, in the Clarendon State Papers, vol. iii. p. 85, it appears that the whole of the news, here alluded to, related to the negotiations carrying on between the Court and the Condéans.

‡ This was Dr. Stewart, Dean of the Chapel Royal, whom Clarendon, in another place, calls "a very honest and learned gentleman, and most conversant in the learning which vindicated the dignity and authority of the Church." He had been long about Charles's person; for, as early as 1646, in a letter preserved in the Clarendon State Papers, vol. ii. p. 253, and addressed to the Prince, the King calls him an honest trusty servant, and recommends him to his Royal Highness as Dean of his Chapel, telling him at the same time to take the Doctor's advice, "giving reverence to his opinion in all things concerning conscience and church affairs."

The wante of the title of the Duke of Bauaria keepes us from making a congratulatory dispatch to him, which is requisite in seuerall respectes, therfore I pray hasten it as sooue as you may: let me heare any particulars you receaue from Englande, especially how our frends at Detforde doe*. If it would be any comforte to you to haue companyons in misery, you will heare shortly that wee are in greate distresses,† for I cannot imagine which way the Kinge will be able to procure mony for his subsistance; nor indeed how the ffrench Courte will subsiste it selfe. Wee know nothinge heare of the Spanish army: what is become of it?

You will still commende the King to your neigbour: if the wayses were once open, I would make a journey ouer to visitt you, and to be merry 3 or 4 howres: I am very heartily,

I pray send me the copy of a warrant for Barronett, for I am not sure that myne is not defectiue.

* This inquiry refers to the Evelyn family at Says Court.
† The periodical prints of that day thus account for the King not wishing to remain at Paris. "The Scots King is still in Paris, but now upon his remove. What shall he do then? Trayl a pike under the young Lady of Orleans:" (this lady had recently raised a regiment for the French King's service against the Confederate Lords:) "an honour too large for the late Majesty of Scotland. His confidants have satt in Council, and it is allowed by his Mother, that during these tumults in France, it is neither honourable nor expedient for him to continue in Paris, the affections of the citizens for the most part being alienated from the King," &c.
Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

Sirs,

The messenger who brought me yours of the 27. is so positive in the justifyinge himselfe, that I cannot but desyre you to examine his allegations, which if not true, he shall be no more sent on his errande, at least not by me: he sweares, he was on Saturday at your house, by 11 of the clocke, and you not being at home, he left the letters, both the Kings and myne with your mayde: this is so contrary to what you say, of his not appearinge before 4 of the clocke, (which putts me in apprehension that our packetts went not by the last ordinary) that I have a greate minde to know the certainty, and whether the fellow hath any excuse or not: I told the Kinge of the expedient you proposed, which he lyked well, only it was sayd by a stander by, that one footeman would not be alwayes willinge to make that iourny, and hauinge so little encouragement, it is no wonder, that euery man is willinge to saue his labour: I am of your opinion that the breach is already too wyde, betweene the two Commonwealths, to be easily closed agayne. I pray God wee may make good use of it, which will most depende upon your neighbours aduice and derection: I pray hasten the Duke of Bauaria’s titles, &c. I wish I could tell you of a more plentifull condicon heare, because I am confi- dent you would haue a share of it: upon my worde, the Kinge hath not yett receaued a penny of supply since his comminge hither: he hath hope of 300 pistoles, for which he gott an order at his beinge at Grubysye, but payment is not yett made:* seriously I cannot be more troubled at any thinge, then at your distresses; which I had rather see relieued then my owne: I will not surpryse you at Paris, and would be glad that the communication should be with more freedome, before I venture thither.—I will by Saturday send you a letter for George Carterett,* from whome I wonder I heare not, but more, that he forgetts his promise to you: I thought your agent ther had taken the dutyes in spetie accordinge to former adviice. The defeate of Count Harcourté† I would haue bene gladd to haue receaued more particularly: wee hauinge heare heard nothinge of it: and the Court needes none of these humilliations. Soon after this he joined Van Tromp; and subsequently served as Vice-admiral of the French fleet under the Duke of Vendôme.

* Sir Richard Browne himself had many enemies at this moment among the English exiles; some of whom, in their wish to drive him from the King's service, were busy with suggestions at Court that "his Majesty being present, he could have no Resident." This is alluded to in a letter from Sir Edward Hyde to Secretary Nicholas, in the Clarendon State Papers, iii. 112.

† This Taylor, adverted to in former notes, was the King's agent with the Emperor of Germany and the Diet; as appears more particularly in a letter to him from Sir Edward Hyde (Clarendon State Papers, vol. iii. p. 112), in reference to an approaching meeting of that body. But in the same volume, p. 121, a very strong reason is given for Lord Wilmot's German Embassy, Hyde remarking, "I am sure a wise man is wanting there; for Taylor is the most absolute fool I ever heard of."—See further, in the same volume, pp. 113, 116.

* How well the King's motions were now watched by the Parliament, is evident from the fact that a journal of the 5th August, 1652, was enabled to state—"The late King of Scots is at St. German's, and expects daily to bee sent for by the Hollanders. The Lord Wilmot is designed to go Ambassador from him into Germany."† This extraordinary fact receives confirmation from another of Sir Edward's letters to Secretary Nicholas, published in the Clarendon State Papers, vol. iii. p. 86. Fortunately for the honour and credit of all concerned, the idea was finally abandoned. † This Elector Palatine abundantly justified this opinion; for, when the German Princes subsequently made up a sum of ten thousand pounds for Charles, the Elector, though under great obligations both

Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

Sr,
Since I writt last to you (though it was but on fryday night) I haue receaued 5 letters from you, two of the 2d, one of the 3. of the 4. and the 5. of this moneth, all which are now before me to be answered in order, after I have exceedingly thanked you for your diligent and very punctuall correspondence, which is so greate a virtue, that it is high injustice not to rewarde and gratify it, which I hope will one day be done.
I have informed the Kinge of the Venetian Ambas-dadors complainte against Mr. Killegrew, † with to his father and grandfather, did not contribute a single stiver.
* In tracing the conduct of the Earl of Bristol throughout these letters the reader will derive amusement from Walpole's account of him as a Noble Author.
† In his Life, p. 116, Hyde says that Charles had been at first unwilling to send Killigrew to Venice; but afterwards was prevailed upon simply to gratify him, that in the capacity of Envoy "he might borrow money of English merchants for his owne subsistence, which he did, and nothing to the honour of his master." The letter in the text contributes some interesting detail upon an incident but slightly noticed in history. Francis Erizzo was the Doge who acted thus cavalierly to the representative of the exiled monarch.
which his Ma\textsuperscript{y} is very much troubled, and resolues upon his returne hither, to examynge his miscarriage, and to proceed therin in such a manner as shall be worthy of him, and as may manifest his respecte to that Commonwealth, with which the Crowne of Eng\textsuperscript{lande} hath alwayes held a very stricte amity, and his Ma\textsuperscript{y} Ministers haue in all places præserved a very good correspondence with the Ministers of that State, and therefore his Ma\textsuperscript{y} is the more sensible of this misdemeanoour of his Resident: However his Ma\textsuperscript{y} wishes that the Republic had proceeded according to the usuall custome, and first acquainted him with ther iust exception against his Minister, that therupon his Ma\textsuperscript{y} might haue testifized his respecte to them by recallinge and punishinge him, and that they had not by a judgement of ther owne compelled him to retyre, which beinge so vnusuall a way, his Ma\textsuperscript{y} doubts will not be cleerely and generally understoode, but may be interpreted to the Kings disadvantage as a declininge in this tyme of tryall that auntient friendshipp with the Crowne of Eng\textsuperscript{lande}, which his Ma\textsuperscript{y} is gladd to finde by the Ambassadour is not in truth the purpose or intention of that Commonwealth, and you are to thanke the Ambassadour in the Kings name for his particular affection to his Ma\textsuperscript{y}, which he desyres him to continue.—After I had shewed the Kinge your letter, he appointed me to read it in councell 667 . 36 . 23 . 4 . 25 . 7 . 530 . 532 . 121 . and the resolucon was ther taken for the answer, so that the very wordes which I haue used upon this argument, were consider'd and perused by the Kinge.—I have bene very much troubled for poore Mr. Douglassse's beinge sicke, and am much comforted with your good newes of his amendment: If ther had not bene 3 or 4 persons of quality heare very sicke, as my Lo: Wentworth,\textsuperscript{*} . . . * Fraser was a Scotchman, and mingled much in the religious politics of that country; he also had some political besides his medical influence at the exiled Court. In another letter (State Papers, iii. 119) Clarendon says of him, "I am glad you have so good a correspondent as Dr. Frayser, who is grown (God knows why) an absolute stranger with me; he is great with Lord Gerard and Mr. Attorney, but he will speedily leave us and go for England, which truly I am sorry for, for the King's sake: for no doubt he is good at his business, otherwise the maddest fool alive." Elsewhere also he expresses himself very kindly as to Fraser; yet the doctor took great offence against him on account of this trip to England, actually asserting that it was Hyde's wish to have him murdered when there, or that he might languish in prison until he should die of grief and hunger.

* The King's supposed wishes at this period are recorded in one of the public journals (Several Proceedings, 28th October, 1652), in a letter from Paris. "Charles Stuart, the Titular Scots King, lives in the Palace Royall, and still in necessity; his Mother went to Challeau on Munday last; he impatiently expects this peace; he could wish to be now in Ireland, so he told some of his own Creatures of late; so would all about him: yet Ormond and Inchiquin tell him plainly that those who most oppose the Commonwealth, are but Ulster men, which doe not much care for him, and are only for their own ends, which if they could obtain, would never look upon a King, and that if they promise to be faithful to a Parliament they would be constant."

† Lord Taife was particularly active in the King's Councils, in so far as related to Ireland. A Gazette of that day, alluding to the King's Irish affairs, remarks, when speaking of the proposed operations of the Duke of Lorraine: "Lord Taife is the man that manageth the business with the King, which is much opposed by the Lord Wilmot, and some others, as a course very improbable: and this hath occasioned a quarrel, and afterwards a challenge, betwixt Taife and Wilmot, which with much ado was composed by the Scots King."

* It had been intended, at this period, that Lord Inchiquin, accompanied by Jermy'n, should go as Ambassador to Holland, to prepare for Charles's reception there.

† The public journals, in real or assumed letters from Paris, now asserted loudely that the "quondam" King, as they described him, had grown hateful to the people of that city "since Loraigne's treason, being afraid lest he might find such entertainment from them at the new bridge as others had experimented, and being reduced to nothing to subsist on, and having beggarred a multitude of bakers, brewers, butchers, and other tradesmen, on Saturday last departed out of this town with all his family (nullo velicto). The Prince of Condé and Beauford accompanied him about a league off the town; he is gone to St. Jermin's, and from thence to St. Dennis, intending for Holland, where keeping a correspondence with the

Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

That yours of the 10. of December (which came to my handes the same day that I dispatched my last to you) hath yett brought you no answer, is not my faulnte, for as I was takinge penn & paper to do it on Sunday last, your other of the 14. arryued, which directed me to change my cource of writinge, and to send no more to Nantz,* but to St. Malos: and indede I was very gladd to finde that you were bounde for Brest, wher I should haue wished you, notwithstanding any discouragements you receaued from thence, except you could bringe a recommendation from this Courte: for Mr. Holder‡ writes me worde, that a letter from Moun^r Castlenoe would signify

* Sir Richard Browne was at this moment very actively endeavouring to collect the King's dues on the prizes brought into the different ports of France.

very little. I am confident the letter you have from our Master, will preserve you from any affronts, and then sure your being there will be at least for your owne advantage, both to collecte what is due to his Ma\textsuperscript{v} upon accounts,* which must be worth somewhat, and will be easily discover'd by what Mr. Holder hath receaued from the Duke, and to receaue the dewes upon ther last pryzes, which will, they say, amounte to a rounde summ.—Though S\textsuperscript{r} Geo. Carterett was gone out of the towne, when I receaued yours of the 10. yet very contrary to my expectation he returned hither 3 or 4 days after, and stayed only one night, when I shewed him your letter; sure he will do all the good offices to you in all things he is able. My L\textsuperscript{d} . . . . will obserue the caution you giue him, and will be gladd you can discover any monyes to be dew to him, and he will gladly giue you authority to receaue it; indeed a supply will come as seasonable to him as to any body, for when I haue told you, that none of us haue receaued a penny since you went, you will believe our necessities to be importunate enough, which would be more insupportable, if wee did not see the King himselfe reduced to greater distresse then you can believe or imagyne. I perceau the arrest of farrande, is upon some pique betweene the Duke of Vandosme and the Marshall Melleray,† betweene whom the contests grew very high, and are like to breake out to such a degree that the Courte is not without apprehension, that it shall not conteyne them both to its service, and seems at present, to be vnsatisfied with the Marshall, and I heare some letters of reprehension are sent to him; therefore this arrest is not like to produce any advantage to his Ma\textsuperscript{v}, besides that it seems the shipp is out of the power of the Marshall. I haue giuen Choquex the papers, and will conferr with him what is to be done, for it is I perceau true that the shipp and all the furniture was really putt into his handes by Pr. Ruperte,* so that besides the restitution of the vessell, there will be a large accounte to be made: When any thinge is resolued, you shall haue an accounte of it.

I am very gladd you haue had so good successe in your suite, I hope it is but an instance of future good fortune at Brest, wher ther is much dew, if you haue receaued so little, as I haue formerly hearde you have mentioned:—I præsume you haue kept an exacte accounte of all you haue had upon those assignations, which I putt you only in minde of, because upon conference with S'r Geo. Carterett, he could not believe it had bene possible, that upon so many pryzes as he obserued to be brought in, you should touch so little, as I assured him had come to your handes. When you went from hence, and vpon occasyon of somewhat I writt lately in a letter to Mr. . . . . of the no profitt accrued to his Ma'te upon that receipte, he answered me that it was impossible much could come to his Ma'th's owne receipte, when he granted so large assignments out of it, and so mentioned in the first place, what was allotted to you, as if it had bene payde.—Wee know nothinge of Engelande more than that your ffrench Minister was landed at Dover. Wee shall shortly see what his reception hath bene, and shall then better guess at the effects: in the meane tyme, we are at no ease heare. My Lo: of Rochester (for that is my Ld Willmotts title)† is to sett out from hence

* Prince Rupert, just before this date, was in the West Indies, and had with him a fleet of fifteen sail, to which eight Dutch ships were joined in October. He is stated in the journals to have captured ten rich English vessels, whilst cruising off St. Kitts. It is a remarkable circumstance, however, that another journal, the Perfect Passages, places him off Cyprus, and describes him as capturing all vessels that pass him in the Levant.

† There was considerable difficulty in finding a proper title for Lord Wilmot, his first proposed one of Essex being claimed by Lord Capel, and that of Danby by the Attorney-General; upon which, as on Thursday morninge, he trauells with a small trayne, and hath it in his power to assume the title of Ambassadour,* which I suppose he will choose to declyne, and do his businesse in a priuate way, which will procure a speedyer dispatch.—God præserue you.

PALLAIS ROYALE, this

Commend me to Mr. Holder, and lett him know I have now receaued his of the 13.

Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

S'r,

I haue receaued yours of the 22th from Nantes, and am very gladd that you haue passed that parte of your iourny so well; I hope the rest will be as successfull, though I do not exspecte you should finde as good weather to bringe you home, as you stated in the Clarendon State Papers, iii., 121, "my Lord declined that title, and so his patent is drawn up for the Earl of Rochester."—See also iii. 57.

* It was hoped that he might succeed in inducing the German Princes to advance money for the King's private expenditure; and also might so manage with the Dutch as to render them disposed to undertake some decided step in his favour. The King must at this time have been in sore distress. A letter from Paris in the Several Proceedings, of 13th December, asserts that "the titular King of Scots is reduced to so low a condition that he is forced to eate his meals in taverns here at Paris, having not the commodity of dining at home." And not three months before this date, even Hyde had thus expressed himself in a letter to Sir Edward Nicholas: "It is no wonder you should desire to be eased, as much as may be, of all kinds of charges. I am sure I have as much reason as any man living to join with you in that thrift; yet I cannot avoid the constant expense of seven or eight livres the week for postage of letters, which I borrow scandalously out of my friends pockets, or else my letters must more scandalously remain still at the post-house; and I am sure all those which concern my own private affairs would be received for ten sous a week, so that all the rest are for the King, from whom I have not haue had to carry you out: The Spanyard* desyred me to give you my thankes for your care of him, which I do very heartily, and conceaue by this tyme he is gotten into his owne Country, and I do not thinke he will euer visitte ffance agayne, which he hath no reason to loue, but for the English which he founde heare. Ther hath beene yet no letter from the Mareschall de Melleray, which ther was no reason to exspects, if you had not mentioned it, as somewhat you thought intended; I am excedinge gladd that he proceeded so roundly with the English Rebells, as to arrest both the shipps and goods,† I wish they did so in all other partes of ffance, that they might proceeade a little more briskely towards ther greate worke, then yett they appeare to doe, but if I am not deceaued, the English will quicke them shortly, if they haue any spiritts left.

You must not suspecte your frends kindnesse and affection to you, when I tell you, that your arreets is not yett dispatched: you know how little service I can do in that kinde by any personall sollicitation of my owne, more then by callinge upon Sir Ri: Foster,‡ which I haue often done, and in truth I thinke him to be as carefull in all that concerns you, and in this particular, as a frende can be: But the truth is, he hath beene ill since you went, and your Adovcate hath bene neuer with him, not at received one penny since I came hither, and am put to all this charge; and yet it is to no purpose to complain, though I have not been master of a crown these many months, and cold for want of clothes and fire and ove for all the meate which I have eaten these three months, and to a poor woman who is not longer able to trust."

* A part of the private history of the time, to which no certain clue remains. Some plans had been put in agitation on the part of the Condeans to persuade both England and Spain to aid them with their arms; and as at this period there were two powerful political parties at Madrid, the man alluded to may have been a secret agent in the politics of the day.
† An event not elsewhere recorded; unless it refers to the seizures of some ships at Dunkirk, afterwards restored to Cromwell by the French Government.
‡ Sir Richard Foster was keeper of the King's privy purse, though he seldom was lucky enough to have anything to keep in it. See the Clarendon State Papers, vol. iii. p. 46.
home when he went to finde him, and the setlinge the kings businesse with the Surintend't (which is yett farr from being setled) hath so wore out the good old man, that he hath not bene yett able to settle yours, which he promises me to dispatch out of hande: I forgott likewise to tell you, that this man is gone from him, which leaues him so much the worse.

I receaued this weeke a letter from S'r Ger. Lucas,

* Melleray was at this moment a great object of jealousy to Cardinal Mazarin, who caused a letter to be sent to him from the King, inviting him to Court, and adding an offer of the command in Champagne; but the Marshal, knowing well that this was an intrigue to get him and his son, both of them suspected as friendly to the Condé party, into the power of the Court faction, excused himself on pretence of illness, &c. He was Governor of Nantes.

Sir Ri. Browne.

Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

S'r,
I haue yours of the 3d and the 6. of this moncht: and you had receaued an answer to the first before the last had come to my hands, if it had bene in my power to haue returned you such a one as could haue satisfyed my selfe. I was as full of the sense of the iniury and indignity that is offred to your Captaynes at Brest, and truly so is the Kinge, as they could wish, but you know iniuryes and acts of iniustice are not as soone remedied and repayred heare, as dicouered: The Kinge wished young L^d Jermin, Mr. Atturny and my selfe, to consider what was to be done, and wee were all of opinion, knowinge what Princes all Gouernors are at present in ffrance, that it would not be fit to mooue the Courte, which no doubte knows nothing of this arrest and up of those sad breaches between his Majesty and his people; which Christian office has gained him at Court the title of Magnae Britanniae et Hiberniae Rex, Fidei Defensor, Perici Dissipator Gallici, Pacisque Compositor Generalissimo. ’Tis rumoured that the King of Denmark should send him 100,000l. in gold for a present, with the promised assistance of him and his subjects in the disputing of his cause against all opposers. The Duke of Yorke is still in high favour, and is cryed up for the most accomplished gentleman, both in arms and courtesie, that graces the French Court. The English begin to be admitted dayly into places of high trust and command; and those shaded Cavaliers, whom the world thought worthy of nothing but exilement, begin to be looked upon according to their worth and known gallantry.' restrainte, nor it may be of the bargayne and connivance for the admissyon of our shipps (for you know wee haue bene longe without the benefitt of the printed Order you mention) before Mons. Castlenoe (from whome the orders were without question sent, for his owne benefitt) be first spoken with, and my Ld Jermin * promised to doe that presently, and he hoped effectually; but wee finde after longe en-qury that Mons. Castlenoe is gone out of this towne to the Cardinall, nor is it knowne when he will returne, and yet it is thought as necessary, that his minde and resolucon be first vnderstooode: Therefore my Ld Jermyn hath written to him, and inclosed the state of the case, made out of your letters, and Mr. Atturny hath sent the same to the Duke of Yorke, who wee presume is most like to gett a full dispatch in it, and wee must expecte the answer from thence, and then if there be any cause to complayne

* Jermyn's influence at the exiled Court had for some time been very great; and is thus described by a news-writer of the time, writing from Paris, in a volume of Tracts in the British Museum:
"The little Queen is retired to the nuninery at Chaliot, there to spend her time a while in devotion, for the advance of some designes that she hath on foot. She left her son the fugitive at the Louvre, given up to the bent of his Common Prayer Mongers, and of Jermyn, whose power is now greater with him than any; which is a sure sign that his Mother rules him again, and that he hath resigned his judgment, affection, and all to her; because heretofore there was a sore grudge between him and Jermyn, in regard at his former being here. Jermyn (who then commanded and still keeps the purse) was very streight handed over him in his expenses.——The old Court flies begin now again to flock about him" (30th Dec. 1651)
"from all parts. Crofts is returning from Poland, where he called himselfe a Lorde Ambassadour; and is to be made a Lord as soon as he comes (as they would have us believe), for his pains in that employment, and for the charitable contribution of our Polish cousins that (they say) he brings along with him. Some of them are come to the Louvre already out of Flanders, as Hide, a man of dignity too, that calls himself the Chequer Chancellor; here is also Bramhall, of London Derry, Dan O'Neill, Fraiser, a physitian, and one Lloid, a Chaplain. These bring newes, that Buckingham and Seer. Nicholas would have come along too, but that they wanted Ghelt; and the rest of his Majesties black guard and retinue that wander in the Low
at Courte, wee will take the best care wee can, that it be made as it ought to be.

For the other businesse concerninge the Marq: of . . . . . , of which I thinke I writ somewhat to you in my last, Mr. Atturny and I haue spoken with Choquy of it, who exspects every day an answer to what he hath formerly sent to the Marq: and when that comes, or that it appeares he desyres not to make any answer, the Kinge will conclude what he should doe as to the revocation.

For your Hamborough pryse, you cannot suppose that I will returne a priuate opinion of my owne, in a businesse of that nature, for many reasons, and the Kinge commanded me to advise with Mr Atturny, and upon both our consideringe the case, as Mr Holder sent it me, wee doe not see it so cleerely stated, as to be able to giue the King any judgement upon it, since it does not appeare that the goods do at all belonge to any English marchant or ffactor, but for ought appears may be the proper estate of the Hamberghers.

I did not suppose they had suffred you to giue any adiudications ther, and that the former arrest had bene made at Rhemes upon that quarrell: We hope the Duke will be heare within 2 or 3 dayes, and then it will be necessary to receaue his derection upon all this businesse. My Lt Inchiquin and I are upon some trouble with your Landlord, who yesterday was at your house, and expresses some purpose to seize upon the goods; which we all vnderstande would not only be very miscicuous to you, but very dishonorable to the Kinge, and therefore you may be confident that wee omit nothing that is in our power to doe, haunte not a penny to discharge the debte.*

* An extract from the Mercurius Politicus of the 8th July, 1652, may help to illustrate this letter: "Charles Stuart, who was said to be gone in our last [from Paris] went not till some few days after. He made the more haste, because a servant of his was fallen upon, pursued, and beaten, even in his master's place of abode at the Louvre. Hee also was besieged there by the bakers, butchers, and other tradesmen of all sorts, in whose books he is fain very deep; and they feared, if they lost him they should lose their money. But
This day S'r Ri: ffoster goes with my L'd Inchiquin to him, to see how farr good wordes and promises will prevayle with him, and all other courses shall be really taken for his satisfaction, that are in the Kinges power. Will ther be nothinge dew upon the Kinges owne share of the pryse brought in by the Patricke & Francis, that might be imployed to that purpose? any order should be procured from hence.

I pray convey this inclosed to Ge: Carterett, who I suppose is not still with you. God præserue you. I am heartily.

Sir,
Your most affectionate humble Servt,

Edw. Hyde.

Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

S'r,

I haue receaued yours of the 7th from the good Govern'r and yourselfe, and this must serue as answer to you both, for I am still in my old posture, not yet able to stirr from my bed. I have not heard these many weekes from Mr. Holder, but I suppose he giues the same informacon to the Duke and his officers, if not, what he sayes is likely to be belieued more then what I shall informe, therefore I must still renew my aduice to you, that you write very particularly to the Duke himselfe, or to some of his officers, of all the obstruccons you meete with, and very particularly of the misdemeanours of the Captaines, * and of any such proposicons and expedients to pacify them they were told his intent was but to go to Rosney upon the way to Roan. His mother marches with him. The small baggage they have is already gone. They give out that they will returne after the peace is made, and condemn this City of ingratitude; alledging that it had bin blockt up by the King before this time, had it not bin for their mediation with his Majesty."

* The Duke of York was actually at this period with the French which you thinke fitt to offer for the promoting his servuice, and I make noe doubt but his Royall Highnes will as soone hearken to you, and be aduiced by you, as by any persons. I can giue you no intell-igence from hence, whilst I continue thus a prysoner, but truely I thinke they who are abroad know little of moment, the Court here being wholy intent upon battels and matters of pleasure, and our owne affaires being in a dead calme, exspecting some gentle gale from some of our neighbours to give them motion, and really I doe believe ye good spiritt does improve, since no body can doubt, but ye the people in England are generally well prepared for it. This is all I can say to you, but ye I am to you both your most affectionate humble servant,

Edw. Hyde.

Paris 18 Feb. 1653.

The King hath lately bene aduartised by the Gouernment of Innisboffine, that if any Marchant-men will bring corne, armes, or ammunicon thither, they shall be sure to receiue ready money for it, and that such a supply would enable them for some time to exspect greater, and not to submitt to the rebells. If it were possible to procure any of your Men of War, or any Marchants to resort thither, it would be a wonderfull good seruice, therefore I pray deuice all wayes possible to compass it, and let me know how the seuerall letters I sent to you directed to ye place haue bene disposed off.*

army under Turenne; and though he would seem from this letter to have been personally interested in the affairs of the little squadron of privateers, yet there is no mention of it whatever in the Life published from his own Memoir.

* These plans and hopes were soon after put an end to by the capture of Innisboffin by the Parliamentary army, it being then the last place in Ireland that held out for the King.

I am sure it can be no newes to you that Pr. Rupert is safe at Nantes,* and therfore it is very probable this letter may not finde you at Brest, but that you may haue thought it fitt to attende his Highnesse, and offer him your service. The Kinge hath sent Mr. Holder some derection concerninge the Hamborough shipp. If George Carterett† be not with you, I pray send this letter to him by the first safe opportunity, and if he hath not a copy of your cypher, send it to him, I hauinge used it in this letter for 3 or 4 lynes, which it is necessary for him to understande. Excuse me, who hauinge no letter of yours to answer, for beinge at present so shorte, which you know is not my naturall faulte. Wee haue reason to hope the Kings affayres are upon a mendinge hande, with reference to Hollande.—God be with you. I am very heartily,

* This was the last of Prince Rupert's maritime expeditions during the Interregnum. On his return to Europe he captured a rich prize laden with tobacco, and having carried her into Nantz, in March, 1653, he was soon after seized with a violent illness, recovering from which he proceeded to Paris, and was well received by the French King. From Paris he went to the Imperial Court; but returned to England at the Restoration. The small fleet now under the command of Prince Rupert had been originally refitted at Toulon; but having met with losses of ships, particularly at the Azores (where his own flag-ship, the Reformation, had been sunk, and the whole crew of 360 men perished, with the exception of Rupert, his brother Maurice, and twelve others), it was found necessary to return to the northern parts of France; particularly as Admiral Penn, with his squadron, was waiting for them in the Straits of Gibraltar.

About three days since I receaued yours of the 24. of the last moneth, which makes me still wonder how it comes to passe, that yours are so longe upon the way, for it is not possible that the post can be 12 or 14 dayes upon the way from Brest, and so much tyme ther is still betweene your writinge and my readinge. I suppose the Governour is now gone to Nantes, or else he will not wayte on the Prince, which I should be sorry for. the Kinge sent his coach on Wensday to Orleans, supposinge it will meete his Highnesse * ther, or that he will be ther within a day or 2 after, so that wee exspects him heare on Tuesday or Wensday, and till his returne I do not conceaué that you neede putt your selfe to the troble of a iourny, and if ther be then any occasyon for it, I will aduer-tise you: If the evidence against the Captaynes be so pregnant as it seemes by you to be, of seueral theftes and cozinages, how would it be possible for the Judge to declare them innocent? and though it may, it would be difficulte to obteyne justice against them in that jurisdiction, yett the declininge to giue in the testimony and charge against them before the proper officer (though it is possible he will not haue power enough to cause reparacon to be made, if he had the will to do it) will be made a greate countenance to them, as if the allegations were not waighty; and I finde (though I am a stranger to all that is done on that syde of the house) that the Captaynes are upon all occasyons much magnifyed, as excellent vsefull ministers.—I am very gladd of that order you small squadron of the Royal ships, with which he cruised, principally upon the coast of Ireland, and greatly to the annoyance of the Republican party, if we may judge from their journals.

* Prince Rupert. This event is much noticed in the London journals of the time. Those journals also assert, upon the authority of some runaway seamen who had landed at Weymouth, "that all the plunder he hath brought is not worth 10,000$, and the Swallow is hallen up altogether unserviceable."
mention, against the transportinge the necessaryes for shippinge, which I wonder the more at, because wee conceaue the ffrench Minister at London every day getts grounde, but I hope they will deceaue each other.—Innisboffin was poorly giuen up aboute the middle of february, so that now I feare the poore Irish hauue only woods and boggs for shelter; I pray keepe all those dispatches safe by you, but you neede not send them backe, till you come your selue. Hath G Carterett a good opinion of Anthonio? I hope ther will be some parte of your house-rent payd out of hande, but I know not what to say to your assignements upon the Prince, who no doubte will haue occasyon to vse all and more then he can haue brought home, to repayre and fitt out his shippes.*—It is a good and conscientious thinge to pay off any old debts, and good husbandry to discharge those first, for which interest is to be payd; but if I were in your case, I should satisfy my selue, in keepinge mony enough in my purse to prseserue me a yeere from staruinge, before I thought of paying any debtes. Wee do flatter ourselves with an opinion that our affayres will mende, and that wee shall not stay long heare, indeede I believe our Master will putt himselfe into some action this summer, and that wee shall not spende it in ffrance.† God prseserue you and,

Sir Richard Browne to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

21 April 1653.

Right Honble,

Two dayes since I receiued your Hon's of 12th, by which it appeares that it made better speede hither, then it seemes mine commonly doe to Paris, the cause whereoff is, that betweene this place and Morlaix there is noe settled convoyance, only the opportunity of such carriers who come uncertainly from thence hither once or twice a weeke to fetch linnen cloth. I haue not yett heard one word from the Gouernour since his goinge hence: butt Mr. Holder (who yesterday returned from Nantes) assures mee that hee had beene with the Prince some dayes before his Highnesses goinge for Paris; and that His H. did also acknowledge to him to haue receiued my Pre by Sir G: Carterett.*

I perceive the French minister is nott returned (as wee were made beleiue) out of England, which I am sorry for, butt hope God in his due time will doe our worke by puttinge his Ma'y into some successfull action worthy his Royall undertakinge: and shall with impatience expect to heare how in case our Maister leaue the kingdome, I shall bee inabled to returne to Paris (one handsome stepp to which the

* How very little chance the Privy Purse had of assistance from the assets of the squadron, may be judged from a letter of Hyde's to Nicholas, where he says: "You must never expect information from me of any of the business of the prize, or anything that is managed by Prince Rupert, who consults only with the Lord Keeper; and I much doubt very little of that money will come to the King. I shall be satisfied if what is raised on the guns and ship (for all is to be sold) come justly to his hands." See the Clarendon State Papers, vol. iii. p. 200.—And again, in p. 222, he speaks more feelingly: "The truth is, Prince Rupert is so totally governed by the Lord Keeper [Sir Edward Herbert], that the King knows him not. You talk of money the King should have upon the prizes at Nantz; alas! he hath not only not had one penny from thence, but Prince Rupert pretends the King owes him more money than ever I was worth."
discharge of my house-rent will prove), or be otherwise disposed off in order to his service. If wee had faire play the Kinges dues here would rise to somethinge, but with this most abominably shockinge Gouvernour there is such an unpreventable tyranny in the upper and corruption of the under officers in this place where we are but precario, that it is a shame to see it.

Captain Antonio hath vpon that score quite left this port, and will yf hee may be beleiued be shortly with you at Paris, where he hath a proces. Sr G. Carteret will giue y' Hon an account of him; for since the receipt of your last I haue written to him soe to doc. He knowes what I thinke of him, and yf his owne opinion bee not better then mine, I doe assure your Hon it is nott admirably good: and I doe wish the Kinge would be very sparinge how hee conferre any fauour on him until he deserue better then hithertoo I can say hee hath. I percieue you have new counsellors sworne & a grand new officer with whom I am oleeged to congratulate. God direct all for the best: soe that the generall of our affaires goe well, it matters not much what becomes of him, who is unfaignedly and æternally Yo' Hon*

Right Honble,

My last to your Hon were of the 28th Aprill, Munday last; the day followinge in the eueninge came priuatly to this towne the Marquis de Neubourg, youngest brother to the Marq: de Sourdiae, with another gentleman in his company; who immediatly went to the Castle, and after a longe consultation with Mon de Camper concealed themselues as much as they could. Yesterday, in a small fregat* which was goinge to sea with his Maies commission, this Marquis, with a Captain, an officer of the Castle, & 150 men, amongst which our turbulent Captain Smyth, imbarqued as priuatly as they could with intention to goe and reduce the Isle of Ushant, for which enterprise I heare this Marquis hath brought the French Kings orders and Monr de Castlenau’s recommendations. And I presume the island yf taken, will as formerly bee re-annexed† to this gouvernment of Brest. Wee are in hourly expectation what the successe will bee, wheroff your Honr may expect account in my next, and accordingly I shall gouverne myselfe in the demand of his Maies dues out of the tobacco that shall be there found, which is nott vppon this occasion to bee ne-eglected. Nott yett one line from my deare Sr George Carteret: wee lined together like brothers; and I hope he hath nott soe soone forgotten mee.

The Hollanders bringe more prizes dayly into the ports vppon this coast. Captain Swart, who commanded The Patricke hath this weeke lanched a small man of warre under the Holland colours; Agent Rameng Coale hauinge undertaken to procure for him a sea-commission from the States of Holland.

* The Parliamentary news-writers of the day, alluding to those parts of the navy which still remained loyal to Charles, inform us: “The King of Scots Pickroones play their cards cunningly upon the coast of Jersey; no less then two delicate prizes have they taken and carried to Shawsey Island,” (Isle du Choisi), “amountinge to a great value; besides Captain Chamberlin playes his pranks notably, and trusses up our pore fishermen, even as a falcon doth wild ducks, forcing them to pay tribute to his young master Charles, and exacts a pistol upon all such boats that fetcheth urack [sea wrack] from the said island of Shawsey, belonging to the French King.”

† This affair is rather unintelligible, unless we suppose that Ushant had declared for the Condéan party. The tobacco alluded to may possibly have formed the cargoes of prizes carried in there by the Royal cruisers.
Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

Sr,

I haue receaued yours of the 21. of the last, and had one little letter from the Gouernour* since his departure from you, after he had wayted on the Prince: I believe he is now busy at Burdeaux, yett sure he will sometime write to his frends, who haue the lesse reason to be angry with his silence, since his wife knowes so little of him, that shee askes me wher he is. Our reportes of the proceedings of the ffrench minister in Englande are so different, that I know not what to thinke of it, many of our frends at London conceauinge him even ready to come away full of dissatisfaction, & on the contrary the Courte heare believe, or seeme to believe, that they haue almost finished a treaty with them to their content: if the newes which came to the towne 2 dayes since, be true, that Burdeaux hath declared it selfe a common wealth, and is promised protection fro’ Englanede, ther will be a quicke end of that negotiacon: I wish wee were ready to be gone from hence, though you were not so amply prouyded for, as I wish, yett I doubte not somewhat would be done towards it: in the meane tyme, I am confident Sr Ric: ffoster hath payd at least halfe a yeeres rent, but I thinke more: I know no new councellours made but the Keeper:† and wee haue now another new greate officer, Pr. Ruperte, Master of the Horse:‡

* Sir George Carteret, who had been Deputy Governor of Jersey.
† Sir Edward Herbert, Lord Keeper since 1652, of whom Clarendon elsewhere says, that he “thought himself the wisest man that followed the King’s fortune; and was always angry that he had not more to do.” His intrigues are humorously depicted in Clarendon’s autobiography.
‡ A letter from Paris, in the journals of the day, says: “Prince Rupert is in some measure recovered of his bloody flux, but goes little abroad out of the Palace Royal, because he wants a princely retinue, which I see no probability for him to have in France yet a while. Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

Sir,

I receaued yours of the 28. of the last, and of the 2d of this, togethder 3 dayes since: I thought all the dutyes of the Marq's pryzes had bene already in Mr. Bullins hande, and I told him that he should, and he told me he would retayne in his owne hands the 15th for you: I will not so much as enqyryre into what concernes or may relate to the 10th. nor a worde more concerninge the commissyons, for which I am sure Edgman neuer exspected a penny, but Maffonett did, and had reason to doe, which I suppose Mr. Bennett* had not: but no more of that: nor I pray take any more notice of it.

I receaued a letter from the good Gouernour within these 2 days from Brouages, which was the first I had from him since his beinge at Nantes, though he sayes he hath writt others. It is no easy matter in that hurry he is in of businesse and remooues to write frequent letters, nor is he good answer his expectations: his designes faile him." Another observes: "Prince Rupert flourishes with his blackmoors and new liveries, and so doth his cousin Charles, they having shared the moneys made of the prize goods at Nantz; and in recompence Rupert is made Master of the Horse."

* This is that Bennet of whom Clarendon remarks, that he was a man bred from his cradle in the Court, and had no other business in the world than to be a good courtier, in the arts wherof he succeeded so well, that he might well be reckoned in the number of the finest gentlemen of the time; and, though his parts of nature were very mean, and never improved by industry, yet, passing his time always in good company, and well acquainted with what was done in all businesses, he would speak well and reasonably to any purpose.
at itt at any tyme, and therfore you and I shall be very vnkinde and vniust to him, if wee suspecte his frendshipp to us, for those omissyons, which all men, but those of the penn, are always guilty of: he is sure a very worthy person, and loues wher he professes soe to do: you heare what a noble confusion Cromwell hath made, by dissoluinge ther Parliam* with all the contempt and scorne imaginable, and now those adored members, and of the Councell of State, are looked upon by all, as they deserue to be: what be ther next acte, is our great expectacon, and what influence that which is done, must haue upon forraigne nations, who were treatinge with them: sure some notable crisis is at hande, worse I hope wee cannot be. All things are heare as they were, S' Ric. ffoster hath payed 500l. for your rent, and hath acquittance only for so much, but no information, what the contracte is, or how much is still in arreare. God send us a good meetinge in England, which is not despayred of by,

A few days afterward a bill was stuck upon the door—"This House to be let unfurnished." One of the Intelligencers of the same day published an alleged letter from Paris, stating: "Charles Stuart pretends to be as glad at the dissolution of the Parliament of England, as at the coming of his brother Henry to him, but I think they are both but frolics. He hath received intelligence from Rome, that the Pope will have nothing to do with him, and in no case have dealing with him, as being not only inconstant and unsettled what to do, but unable to do anything."

* Captain Sadlington was retained in the royal service after the Restoration, and fell gallantly fighting in the year 1673, on the 4th of June, in the action with Van Tromp. He then commanded the Crown, under the orders of Prince Rupert.

† O'Sullivan Beirne was a gentleman of some landed property in Ireland, living near Beerhaven, and was of such consequence in that part of the country, where the clans of O'Sullivan were numerous, that he was chosen general of the forces raised in aid of the Royal cause. The reason of this visit to France seems to be accounted for by the following extract from the Several Proceedings of the 30th June, 1653: "From Ireland it is certified, that a party of Irish, of General Bear's men, had a design to have surprised some garrisons; but, having notice, a party fell upon them in their march, routed them, and killed many; and Bear himself, with some other officers, got into a boat, and fled over into France."
Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

I receaued yours of the 7. 3 dayes since and yesterday your other of the 10. and returne this by the same hande which brought me yours, which seemes to be very sollicitous and confident to returne it safely and speedily to you: I haue sent you such a letter from his Ma^v to the Marshall, as in my understandinge is necessary, and I hope if any thinge would, will præuayle with him. To have inserted the memoire it selfe would not haue bene so proper, since it cannot be supposed to be within his Ma^w proper cognisance. Your letters concerninge O'Sullivan Beare are not come to my hands.

Upon the receipt of your former I did send the inclosed to Mr. Bennett, who hath notwithstandinge not vouchsafed to conferr with me a worde about the businesse, and when I sent to him to know whether he would send any thinge to you, and lett him know what his Ma^v had directed, he returned me answer that I might haue spared his Ma^v that labour, for the Duke had done the same, but I hope actes of supererogation in this kinde will do no harme: it may be he will send his letters under this cover.

Ther is no questyon that I know concerninge your accounte, it is fitt you should always haue it ready, and produce it when it is called for, and I doubt not you will receaue all iust allowance, and truly I am heartily glad that it hath brought so seasonable a reliefe to you:* our Master thinkes of remouinge,

* It was made matter of remark in the public journals that a seasonable supply had arrived for the Royal family at this moment. The Faithful Post, of the same date as this letter, says, in a communication from Amsterdam: "Here is arrived the adventurer called the Spanish Bark; coming from Rochelle: he hath taken three prizes about the West, which he hath sold in France, amounting to a great value, which is distributed by the Commander in Chief, Capt. * The action did take place, and the Dutch were defeated. The consequences, if we are to believe a letter from Paris in one of the weekly Intelligencers, were very hostile to Charles's interests at the Court of France. "The news of the defeat given by the English to the Dutch," says the writer, "much startled the Court, and indeed all France; those of Charles Stuart's followers gave out reports at first that the Dutch had beaten the English, and that he was to go to Holland, and that they would do great things for him, and the English went vapouring of it up and down the streets, and some of them were soundly fowt; but the next day came news to several merchants of this city, besides letters to the Courts (which were kept more private), that the Dutch were beaten, and had sustained a very great losse: upon this there was a great meeting of the Council with the King, and their countenances very sad all about the French Court, and divers of the English going through the streets of Paris were so mocked and jeered that they have been ashamed almost to
taken any excepeons to your person, only when I asked, why it was desyred that the busynesse might be referred to Pr. Rupert, since being not upon the place, his Highnesse could not so easily giue direction upon it, answer was made to me, that it might be, that the Marshall desyred not to treate with S' Ri. Browne: and truly in those cases, when men aske unreasonable thinges, it is no wonder that they haue no minde to be pressed by publique Ministers.*

I doubt I shall not be able to finde a copy of your peticon and order from the Kinge, if I can I will, nor will I do any thinge upon that businesse, till upon your view of the whole accounte you can see in what state you are, and then I will procure such orders as are necessary; till then it is to no purpose to discourse of it: nor is it proper for me to send to Mr. Windham † (with whome I haue no correspond-ence) to know what you haue receaued from him, you will state all that upon your accounte. The course I propose to my selfe to observer is, that the Kinge signe a warrant to you, to deducete out of your receipts satisfaction for all such warrants which he hath formerly signed upon others, and which haue proued ineffectuall to you; and if that satisfies for the time past, advise what will bee best, to order for the future.

Wee are full of exspectation what will be the issue of the treaty in Englande ‡ betweene the Dutch and

* An allusion to the rapacious conduct of the Marshal with regard to the prizes, and the stores of the ships that were sold.

† Mr. Windham, as early as 1652, had been appointed the receiver of the King's fifth in all prizes; and this by the King's special appointment, in opposition to the Duke of York's recommendation of the Bishop of Derry. The situation was one which Sir Edward Hyde had been very anxious to obtain for his godson, son to Sir Edward Nicholas. See the Clarendon State Papers, vol. iii. pp. 112, 118.

‡ The London Intelligencers were at this time giving a very different view of the feelings of Charles's little exiled Court, asserting that they were constantly engaged "in forms of Common Prayer" for the success of the Dutch fleet over that of England! Nor were the Puritan party at home particularly anxious for peace, protesting that the "work of the Lord is not yet done; that the sword must not be sheathed untill they had brought down the tyranny of Rome, and restored poor ignorant captives to a gospel enjoyment of the universal freedom."

Paris this 30th of July (1653).

Sr,
I haue receaued yours of the 23. of July, as I had before your other of the 16. I deliuered your other to Pr: Ruperte, and he hath promised mee to write to the Marshall, who he sayes he knowes will make no scruple to deliuer those parcells to you and the Dukes officers, which concerntes the 10th & 15ths, which beinge done, you are not to make any instances in the Kings name, for the rest, till his Mat'y shall be better informed, and you receaue other orders: so that you are only to looke for the 15. and 10ths.† I desyred the Prince to send his letter for the Marshall inclosed to you, but he was not willinge to do that, because ther is an agent heare of the Marshalls with whome he transactes all, and by whome he promises such directions shall be giuen, that upon your repayringe to the . . . . Gouernour (which is all you neede to do) that shall be done which wee exspecte:

* The Prince of Condé was mistaken.
† This necessity of temporising with the avaricious detainer of their captured property, to which the exiled Court was obliged to submit, is not only a convincing proof of the inhospitable conduct of the French Government, but also (if they did not participate in the plunder) of their want of authority over their own officers.
it is now the tyme that the businesse of the pryze is transactinge, and therfore the Prince desyres that all complance be vsed towards the Marshall, and that wee do nothinge to anger him:—I finde the Mar: pretends the stoppinge the other goods upon pretence of much money dewe to him as Admirall of Britany, upon many pryzes brought into those portes by the owners of those goods. I yett heare nothing of Anthonio.

I know not what to say to your mayd, nor the information shee hath receaued, but I assure you, the King takes all possible care that the house receaues no affronte, and to that purpose hath had a consideracon of it in Councell within these 3 dayes, in which, particular order is taken, that his former directions to you, and to Dr. Cozens, be reuiued and renewed, for the keepinge up the service* carefully when he shall leue this place: and I had order to sende for your landlord, and together with S'r Ri: ffoster, to renew to him his Ma'tys gracious promises that he shall not be any looser: I intende this day to send to him to come hither: ther are yet only 500lis, payde of the rent by S'r Ri: ffoster: when mony can be gotten, more shall: in the meane tyme, the Kinge himselfe commanded me to write to you; that you should if possible returne some mony to the landlorde, in parte of the rent, out of your receipts ther, with such a letter for his encouragement that he may understande it to be his Ma'tys mony, and sent by his order, and I think e you will be no looser by it, for heareby I shall be able to keepe off all prætences and importunities for other orders, w'ch his Ma'tys hath promised to me. I have no more to say, but that I am,

* Dr. Cosins (afterwards Bishop of Durham) was one of the King's Chaplains. He is often mentioned by Evelyn in his diary and letters; and the allusion in the text is to his having the service of the Church of England regularly performed at Sir Richard Browne's house, which Evelyn tells us was always done.
Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

Sr,

I haue receaued yours of the 26. of the last moneth, and by this tyme I suppose Pr: Ruperte* is with you at Nantes, so that you can iudge what is like to become of your businesse better then I, but his Highnesse seemes to me to be confident that the Marshall will make no question of deliueringe the 10th and the 15th. but it seemes he claymes accounts for the rights of his Admiralty at Britany,† upon which he thinkes ther is a greate arrearage dew to him from all those who haue carryed pryzes into Brest: And to this pointe you shall do well to instructe your selfe as well as may be, and whether his Officers at Brest ever demanded any thinge before he made this seizure at Nantes, for in truth I know not how to answer this; if he hath the rights of Admirall due to him in all the portes of Britany, and none of our shipps haue euer payd him any, by virtue of ther deere-bought protection at Brest, I do not wonder he

* The Prince had nearly lost his life a few days before this date, as a journal of the period records: "Paris.—We have not much of newes here; but the river Seine had like to have made an end of your black Prince Rupert; for some nights since hee woulde needes coole himselfe in the river, where he was in danger of drowning, but by the help of one of his blackmores escaped. His Higlenesse (it seems) has learnt some magic amongst the remote islands; since his coming hither he hath cured the Lord Jermin of a feaver, with a charme; but I am confident England is without the jurisdiction of his conjuring faculty."

† There were also other difficulties respecting the prizes: the French Court at this period, or at least Mazarin, being so anxious to conciliate the favour of Cromwell, that an arrest was even permitted to be made upon them. Indeed all the affairs connected with these prizes were very badly managed, as Sir Edward Hyde observes in another place, by Sir Edward Herbert, whom he describes as despising all men, and looked upon by Prince Rupert as an oracle. See the Clarendon State Papers, vol. iii. p. 177. The shabby conduct of Mazarin—surpassed even by that of Marshal Melleray at Nantes—in these matters, may be further seen by reference to Clarendon's History, vol. iii. pp. 405-6, where Melleray is also spoken of with justly merited severity.
Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

Sr,

Yours of the 31. of the last (which is the last I haue receaued from you) gaue me so much ioy, that as soon as I receaued it, I thought it my duty to imparte the good newes to the Kinge, who upon reading that clause, made not the least scruple that Mr. Morrice*

* From this mention of Mr. Morrice's escape, it would seem as if some report now prevailed that a Royalist of that name, who was supposed to have been (and in fact was) put to death in 1649, had made his escape, and remained in Ireland. This Morrice had in the latter year got possession of Pomfret Castle, and held it some time for the King, till it was besieged and taken by Lambert. Morrice, who was excepted from the terms of surrender, managed to make his escape at the time; but he was afterwards seized and executed at Lancaster, as Whitelock tells us. His story, as given by Lord Clarendon, is a curious episode of the civil war, and sufficiently brief to be worth repeating here:

A young man, in the beginning of the war, had been an officer in the King's army, but engaged in the Parliament army with some circumstances not very commendable. By his courage and pleasant humour he made himself very acceptable, and obtained a commission as Colonel; but being a free speaker, and living licentiously, he was left out in new modelling the army, but not without was in safety, of which since we see no evidence, I pray send me worde, how it was possible for you to be deceaued, and how the reporte came to you: I told you in my last, that it is too manifest, that Innisboffin is deliuered up, so that there is nothinge to be compliments. He had a competent estate in Yorkshire, to which he went, and resided there. As he grew older, he repented of having left the King's service, and meant to take an opportunity of returning to it. His humour was so cheerful and pleasant, and he mixed so much with men of all parties, that he had great weight with all of them. The Governor of Pomfret Castle was his most intimate and particular friend, and was so fond of him that he was never easy without him; he was continually at the Castle, and the same bed served him. He now concerted with the King's party to surprise the Castle, and he so artfully managed with the Governor, telling him that there was such a design, that he mixed with those concerned, in order to communicate everything to the Governor, that he completely lulled that gentleman to sleep, and made him inattentive to notices which he received from other quarters. He also ingratiated himself with many of the soldiers, and at length effected his purpose. Cromwell was then gone for Scotland, so that they had time to repair the fortifications, and collect a good garrison. Cromwell ordered Rainsborough to go with a few troops to keep them in check; and whilst he lay at Doncaster, 10 miles from Pomfret, they sent 20 picked men, who by the most dexterous management actually surprized Rainsborough in his bed, and mounted him on a horse; but when he found how few there were who had surprized him, he called to his soldiers, and then the captors, finding they could not carry him off, actually killed him, and then all made their way back to the Castle.

At length Lambert was sent to besiege the Castle; the garrison made a most gallant defence, but finding no hopes of relief, they at length offered to surrender, if they might have honourable conditions. Lambert said, they were gallant men, and he would do all he could to preserve them; but Col. Morrice and five more of those who had destroyed Rainsborough, must be given up, and he could not save their lives. The garrison said they never would deliver up any of their companions, and desired six days, that these six might deliver themselves as well as they could, the rest being at liberty to assist them. Lambert generously consented. The garrison made several sallies to effect the desired escape, in one of which Morrice and another escaped; in another sally two more got away; and when the six days were expired, and the other two remained in the castle, their friends concealed them so effectually, with a stock of provisions for a month, that rendering the castle, and assuring Lambert that the six were all gone, and he was unable to find them after the most diligent search, and had dismantled the castle, they at length got off also.

The subjoined notices are from Whitelocke's Memorials:

April, 1649. Col. Morrise, late Governor of Pomfret Castle, and one Cornet Blackburn, who had a hand in the death of Col. Rainsborough, and who were excepted persons on the surrender of the Castle, were taken at Lancaster in disguise.*

Aug., 1649. They were arraigned at York before Baron Thorp and Judge Puleston, for levying war against the kingdom. They made a stout defence on points of law, all of which were over-ruled, were found guilty, and Morrice being manacled with irons, complained of a soldier being so treated, but got no relief;†

done with those dispatches, but to keepe them. I can add little of newes, only that the Court hath new argument of tryumph, upon a late victory of some considerable party of the Pr: of Condé: when they tooke many prisoners and some officers of eminent quality: The Dutch yett proceede very slowly, as well in order to ther allyance with this Crowne, as in any declaraacon for our Master, notwithstandinge which my hopes are not abated, nor do I thinke a peace almost possible to be made betweene the two Commonwealths, and all this addresse which is so much spoken of, is only a letter from a priuate man, without any knowledge of the Pro: of Hollande, much lesse of the States Generall, who resent the præsumption. Lett me know, whether Mr. Bennett did euer requyre the ffees from you upon any of the Commissyons which I deliuered to you, or how he comes to prætende to them: howeuer you shall by no meanes take the least notice of this question, nor declyne the course you intended, for I am sure I neuer intended to receaue penny fro’ them, but would gladly know how he claymes such ffees. * The conduct of the Condéan army at this period was of a most discreditable kind, if we are to believe the following statement in a letter from Paris of the 8th of August, 1653, in the Faithful Scout. "The Prince of Condé is become very considerable and exceeds the K. in number of forces, being 7000 foot and 1000 horse, besides the Spanish auxiliary army under the command of Gen. Fuensaldague, which makes 13,000 horse and foot. His Highness hath sent several challenges to Marshall Turein to fight; but he declines; so that he hath given Condé an opportunity to get within eight leagues of Paris, plundering all, his Germans ravishing the nuns, and ransacking all religious houses, firing suburbs of towns, and enforcing contributions from others. He made way so far as to come and dine at his own house, where he and his commanders were as merry as so many Princes."

I have receaued yours of the 15. of Octo: but nether know nor can imagine* the reason of your longe silence, but conceaue it procedes from some such cause as made you wish that it might not be interrupted by any provocation from me: and yet it was not possible for me to do you any seruice without beinge instructed by you in the way, the businesse standinge as it did. I heare nothinge of Choquez, and what his undertakinge is I know not. I asked the Kinge whether he knew any thing of the businesse, and I haue reason to believe that he nether hath nor will giue any order in that affaire without askinge me how the case standes; but if you give me no cause to move publiquely in it, it is no wonder if I say nothinge of it, and if you do write upon the argument, you will write so that the letter may be reade at Counceil, any other advertisements you will put in a paper aparte. I hear nothinge of the wyne, nor know not any thinge of Nantes, when they come away, who are ther, or what they do ther.

The Kinge hath spent the last fortnight in the country at Chantilly, and returned hither on Wensday last: and proposes to goe backe thither agayne tomorrow, and I suppose will spende his tyme ther, till the fayre weather be done: I can tell you little of newes, the distractions I thinke are so high in Englande, that ther must be some suddayne alteration: and I depende more on that, then any thinge that can happen abroade, wher ther is little care of

* Though Hyde was too sanguine in the hopes expressed in this letter, yet the plain good sense it shows, and indeed his general conduct in exile, where we have neither to mark the listless apathy which deadens enterprise, nor the hasty enthusiasm which mars it, admirably justify that place in Charles's councils which his talents and services continued to secure to him, notwithstanding many counter intrigues.
honour, or any thinge but ther owne present conveniences. It may be, all the pause in your business is in contemplation of the greate pryze, and I would not interrupt that, by any meddlinge in a matter so particular and inferior as the other; but if that were at an end, or I knew what were like to come of it, I would be very importunate to knowe what the grounde of the proceedinge is. If ther be no reason to the contrary, I shall be gladd to heare from you, and as particularly as you please; but if you thinke it in any consideration inconvenient, I referr it wholly to you, and am very heartily,

Right Hon^ble,
With humble acknowledgments of your last favour of 26. Octobr I can now give your Hon'r this brief account of my businesse here on which I haue soe longe and with much charge and trouble attended. Captain Anthonio hath without any consent of mine, nor doe I know with what power from the rest of the witnesses, payed the Mar^d fifteen thousand livres, and by this means obtained mainlevee [removal of the arrest] of all the goods arrested, and consequently gotten them all into his hands.* By H. H. Prince Rupert's order I haue now commenced a sute in law for recoverie of the fifteenths, and the Duke of Yorkes interest (both which the Mar^d allways intended to restore without diminution) and his highnesse doth soe nobly support and countenance me therin, that I hope eyther by decree of justice, or by the Captains voluntary rendition, to have a speedy end, & therby be soon able to remit to Paris that money his Ma^y hath ordered towards satisfaction of my Landlord
I haue (together with money for the charges of the carriage) committed to Mr. Killigrews care, a butt of Canary wine divided into three barrells. The one wheroff I humbly present to his Ma'ty, the other to his R. H. and the third to the Lords at Court.*

Soe praysinge God for his Maties happy recovery of health, and dayly prayinge for the same.

Nantes first Nov 1653.
Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

S',

I haue yesterday receaued yours of the 1. and the 4. of this month together, & this day gave the Bill of Exchange to Mr. Deane, who will be very glad that he is provyded to comply with some parte of your landlordes importunity, and we shall all have the more ease by it. I heare the Canary wyne is come to Paris, but no men'con of the delivery of it, being conceaved to be Mr Killigrews owne wyne, so that I expecte a very small share of it, but have acquainted his Ma'ty and my LL'ds with that parte of your letter, and my L'd Chamberlyne will enquyre after it: You cannot imagyne I can misinterpret any acte of yours, which I know can not want kindness to me; your silence was very fitt, and I guessed so much at the reason of it, that I complyed with it, and yet (as you say) all is little enough, and iealous natures will always finde somewhat to worke upon, to disquyett themselves and others, and I know no cure to apply to those, who are not pleased with fayre and open dealinge.†

* The politic attention of Sir Richard in this instance shows how fit he was for a courtier, even upon the smallest scale; though his worldly prudence in trusting Killigrew with the wine may be open to some doubt. It will be observed in the next letter, that suspicions of Killigrew, by no means surprising, appear to have occurred to Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer.
† It has already been hinted that Sir Richard Browne had many
I hope you have not suffered your selfe to be too much a loser by Capt: Anthonio, with whom you know how to deale well enough: at least if he intends to have any more to do with us: I hope ther is care taken to giue Geo: Carterett satisfaction, who over apprehends discourtesy from hence, and that he was putt out of the Kings protection, when God knowes the Kinge resolved to do all he could for him and the other adventurers, as soon as the case should be so stated that he knew what to presse, but it seems all is now composed, and it is a notable fayne you have payd to the Marshall, if the commodities were not of a huge value: God preserve me from such governours.—Wee are yet in the country, which the Kinge is better pleased with then with Paris, and truly he hath recovered his health most miraculously: But if the weather changes, as it is like to doe, I suppose we shall looke backe to Paris: and then any good newes will carry us away. I wish you all happynesse, and am very heartily,

CHANTILLY this 10: of Novemb: (1653.)

Right Honble,
I have here received your Honrs of the 10th Nov. for which I sende humble thankes, as bringinge with it the assurance of my standinge upright in your opinion: your friendship being one of the greatest consolations I have in the midst of all my sufferinges. I humbly submitt the adjoyned for your managemet: yf you approve not theroff, and had rather enemies at the exiled Court. Hyde had many also: and no doubt all this caution in the correspondence of the two friends was for the purpose of guarding against the Court sycophants opposed to them. See Hyde's preceding letter of the 26th October.

convert the summ mentioned to your own use, order it how you please and to whom you would have the bill made: perhaps you may think Mr. Edgman a fitt person to be trusted with the secret, that see little notice may be taken. The three barrells of Sacke are yett here; in company with them goes a fourth vnder Sir Gervais Lucas* his name, which is a present I make to y' Hon' wherewith to rejoice yourselfe and friends: Only I intreat you that the good Lady Lucas may have her physicall proportion out of it. . . . . . warmed keepes her alive as shee herselfe sayth. That you will not give Dr. Earles half a dozen of bottles I cannot doubt. The person I last mentioned in cipher will tell you notable stories when he comes to you. To him I refer all. You may beleev e him, for hee is much a man of honour. Being ready to goe from hence I expect to find your answer hereto in Mr. Richards his hands at St. Malo's. This is all at present from,
humble servant,
R. Br.

The following is the Paper adjoined:
I have formerly acquainted you that I cannot make up my accounts untill I returne to Brest, which I am now hastening: In the interim, finding that some monyes of his Ma'zs will remaine with me, I humbly submitt it to your Hon'zs consideration whether a hundred Lewises in gold will not be acceptable to his Ma'z to be by your Hon'r privately delivered into his owne Royall hands, towards his merry playing,t wherwith to passe his time at cards

* The whole of this is confirmation of the remark made in the foregoing note. Sir Gervais Lucas had been a cavalayr officer in the Royal cause during the Civil Wars.

† See post, p. 295. Of Lord Jermyn's conduct generally as cashier for the Royal expenses, Clarendon roundly asserts in his History that while Jermyn kept a coach of his own, and an excellent table for those who courted him, yet the King, even when under the most urgent want of twenty pistoles, could not find credit to borrow them.

with encouragement. This is all at present from,

Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

Sr,

I haue receaued yours of the 18. and since you are so well provyded, I cannot but commende your designe, and as I believe the Kinge does not expecte such a present, so I am sure it will be most welcomme to him, and I will promise you to present it to him, in so secret a manner, as nobody shall know it but himselfe; and be confident I will never converte one penny that belongs to him, to my owne use, in what straights soever I should be.

I like very well your distribution of the sacke, and I will not bragge of my share, nor sayle of delivering the proportion you assigne, and if the good lady comes hither, (as by yours I guesse she intendes to do, though Paris at present is a place of prodigious expense, every thinge double the pryse of what it was when you left it) the vessell shall stay with her; and I there shall be sure of iustice, and I will fetch my allowance in bottles: Lett me only giue you this warninge, that the carriage be payd for, as I thinke you told me in your former that it was, and I am sure I cannot do it, and then, the sooner it comes the better.* Wee are full of exspectac'on of good newes from all quarters, and I hope some of it will be of such a nature that will call us from hence,

* The whole of this letter is a curious illustration of the distresses of a man who was afterwards Lord Chancellor of England, and father-which I will be sure to giue you an accounte of as soone as I can: I wish you all happynesse, and am very heartily,

Sir Richard Browne to the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Mons' de Varennes, Intendant of Marqu. de Castlenau's affairs at Brest, havinge beene from that towne deputed to the States of Bretany, Mars'l de Milleray did there declare unto him that he pretended nott to abate any part of what belonged unto him in the loading of the fleete which hee had seased, and for mainlevée wheroff hee had receaved 15000 livres. Wherupon this gentleman came hither to demand his right, & after a weekes digladiation at law with Captain Antonio, the Captain yeelded up the cudgells and gave him satisfaction. My desire to see the issue of this suite in law causinge my stay here longer then I intended, hath brought me hither your Honours favour of 15 Nov. which containinge an intimation of something of complaint against (as they call it) the King of Englands Admiralty at Brest, I considered my selfe whether it will be fitt for mee to goe now into Low Bretany before I haue once again shewed myself to the Mar and received his commands (who they say will bee here shortly) least he againe come uppon us with a second costly after-reckoninge, grounded upon pretence of not beinge sufficiently applied unto, or of being neglected in his government; at least not untill I have your Hon'sence herupon, which I humbly beseech you to vouchsafe me, sending y'r letters as you please, eyther directly hither, or by the way of Mr Richards, thorough whose hands I expect answers of my last of 18th currant.
I render humble thankes to your Hon' for the sanguine part of your letter, resultinge out of the good newes from Germany and England. God of his mercy improve these comforts to us; and pre-serve his Maties sacred person, and vouchsaef him a speedy establishment uppon the throne of his Royal progenitors. Soe prayes dayly and heartily, y′ Hon′s, &c.

Nantes 29 Nov′ 1653.

The same to the same, accompanying the preceding letter.

Right Honble

I am told that the Prince [Rupert] hath now totally settled his businesse with the merchant, and stayes only to see performance. Meane time Sr Gervais Lucas hopes to be goinge with his lady some time the next weeke for Paris, and takes along with him that commodity for your Hon′ w′th I thought would have accompanied the other 3 which are now upon their way. Mr. de Varennes carries a letter recommendatory from mee to y′ Hon′. Yf hee uppon his maisters the Marqu. de Castlenau′s recommendation hath thus enjoyed the benefit of favour and protection in his part, how much more might wee (had not an unhandsome eclipse happened) his Maties subjects and servants uppon our Royal Maisters gracious owning of us? beleve me the Captain doth now sufficiently repent his unprofitable, unadvised, nay precipitate performance of Mons′ Choquere his bargaine.

Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

Sr,

I haue receaued both yours of the 29. of the last, & cannot imagine, how any thinge I sayd to you in my former letter could make you deferr your iourney, nor can I add any thinge to what I then sayd, havinge not heard since of the complaintes, and you must indeed know the temper of those places much better than I can doe: I perceave by what you say of Monsr Varrennes that wee are nothing beholdinge to the Marshall, who it may be without our frends helpe would not have beene able to have done us so much prejudice. Lett me know when you goe from thence, and wher my letters may finde you. The Capt. doth well to quitt his old frends, and betake himselfe to new who know better how to use him. Wee heare not yett of Pr: Rupertes comminge hither, but mee-thinkes he hath bene longe absent. Hath Sr Ge: Lucas absolutely quitt his ffarme in Britany, or doth he only repayre hither for health. Meethinkes the comodity you mencon should not be worth the charge of so longe a voyage by lande. The Duke of Yorke is returned hither, full of reputac'on & honour,* and the ffrench Courte is expected on Sunday or Munday. I can tell you little newes: our frends in Hollande do not believe the treaty will produce a peace, and for an instance that the States do not so much depende upon it, they have given a licence this last weeke to . . . . Ge: Middleton,† to transporte armes and ammunicon for Scotlande, which is a good signe: I suppose you heare frequently from Englannde, where sure the confusion is very high, and it is exspected that they will declare Crumwell Protector of the 3 kingedomes, that his single influence may compose those distractions, which the multitude cannot doe, for Mr. Peters himselfe now professes that Monarchy is the best government. God send us well under it. I am,

The Same to the Same.

Right Hon'ble,

My last unto your Hon' were of 10. Dec. with an inclosed bill, which Mr. Richards assures me will be punctually payed this very day (20 Dec.') at Paris. My desire now is (in case you approve theroff and will at my humble request vouchsafe to accept this poore tender of my servcie) to transmitt to your Hon' a supply of money for your owne occasions in that now extraordinary deare place, which I am the more apt to beleive in regard that the price of all things here raysia a third since my cumminge into this province. I doe nott designde lesse than a thousand livres, and am very sorry I cannot performe it untill I draw a somme from Brest, in which I find great difficulty at present, noe man being willinge to meddle with money, in regard of the approachinge fall at the end of this month. By this abatment in the species I am like to sustaine not an inconsiderable losse, for I heare they have this good while payed the Kings dues at Brest according to the rate the money went many monthes since, when the commoditis were sold (viz.) Lewises of gold at 12 livres and of silver at 3l. 9s. And I am told the Duke of Yorkes receivers can gett noe better quarter. I know not why active in Scottish affairs, as Charles's agent with the Highlander and other Royalist adherents in that country.
I should not make the just reparation of this losse as an article in my account, as well as the Treasurer of the States of Bretany, who hath on this consideration lately had seven thousand crownes indemnification adjudged him by Act of the States. By way of St Malos your Hon’s next commands will find mee, and you may well imagine your presence, tho not possible, will be most heartily wished, and your health noe lesse cordially celebrated.

I am now to acknowledge your Hon’s favour of the 24. Nov. & 6 Dec’. The three first vessels of sacke are doubtlesse long since arrived by water at Orleans, there expectinge Mr. Killigrew’s order, who is desirous to present them himselfe. I have alreadly furnished him with some money towards the charges, and have taken care to defray at Paris the whole port of them and of the 4th which went hence in boate the begininge of this weeke with noble Sir G. L. [Gerv. Lucas] and his lady, who have quite abandoned this province, the Ladies intention being to goe ’ere longe into the greater Bretany. I desire your Hon to give credit to him in many thinges with which hee will acquaint you, for hee is much a man of honour and integrity. Hee will tell you to what degree wee have (as you well call it) had our freinds healp and furtherance in the payment of the 15 thousand livres fine, &c. I did not till very lately know that my Lord Percy now Lord Chamberlin was come to the Kinge, and I am likewise told that he is much in your intimacy, of which, if true, I am very glad, for hee hath beene my noble freind of a date little lesse than 30 yeares old. I pray if your Hon thine it fitt be pleased to present my humble service and congratulations to his L’pp.

Prince Rupert hath now quite finished his businesse with the marchant that lost the sugar prize, and speakes of goinge hence for Paris within few dayes.
Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

I have yours of the 20. as I had before your former with the bill, which was punctually payd,* and delivered to the Kinge, for which you shall have his acquaintance, and I must tell you, it came very seasonably to him, and most acceptably, of which you shall heare more hereafter. For your new noble offer, I am not in a condic'on so plentifull to refuse, for I must tell you that I have not had a Lewes of my owne these moneths; therfore when you send the bill, lett me know whether you lend me so much out of your owne little stocke, or whether it be the Kings money, for in that case, his Ma shall be the disposer,—since my office hath never yell nor shall intitle me to take his mony without his derection.† Ther is no question any fall of moneys is a just

† The charges to which Hyde alludes in this letter were those brought against him by intriguers of the Queen-mother's party, who were unwilling that he should execute the office which Lord Jermyn had formerly discharged, the disposal of the King's private funds. Mr. Long, the Ex-Secretary, was therefore brought forward to concoct this story of the conference with Cromwell on the evidence of one Massonet, or rather on his second-hand hearsay evidence from a maid-servant in London, who assured him that she had seen Sir Edward go into Cromwell's chamber at Whitehall. Charles of course had the sense to laugh at it, being himself in fact a competent witness to prove an alibi. See Clarendon's History, vol. iii. p. 402. When Charles the First appointed a Council for the Prince of Wales in 1644, Mr. Long was their Secretary; but after this was suspected of holding a correspondence with the Earl of Essex, on which he went into France, and made great complaint to the Queen-Mother, who always strongly supported his interests. After the death of Charles the First he became Secretary to the young King in his exile, was created a Baronet shortly after the Restoration, was Auditor of the Exchequer, and a Privy Councillor. Suspicion attached to him of having been secretly a Roman Catholic, and this is partly borne out by a legacy in his will. See Manning and Bray's History of Surrey, vol. ii. p. 606.†

* So certain were the politicians of that time of a treaty between the French King and the Protector, that in a letter from Paris, of the 20th January, in one of the public Intelligencers, it was expressly stated, “Here is much talk, as if the Peace were concluded between France and England.” It did not take place so rapidly, however; for, notwithstanding Mazarin's overtures to Cromwell, the Protector showed no extraordinary eagerness to meet them. In writing to Cromwell, about this time, Mazarin concluded with, “Votre tres humble serviteur,” which obtained nothing more from Oliver than “Your affectionate friend to do you service.”

I can make no other conclusyon by the discourses of peace or warr betweene Crumwell and that Crowne, but that the Cardinall † will do all that is in his power to prevent a warr, which very many believe he will not be able longe to doe, and the Spanyard is very much abused, if he be not sure of a firme conjunction with him. S'r,

I haue receaued yours of the 10. of the last moneth, and shewed it to the Kinge, who hath sent direction to S'r Geo. Ratcliffe ‡ to returne the 2000\(^{th}\) to him

* Sir Patrick Garland, who was long in confidence with Sir Edward Hyde.

† Mazarin personally admired Cromwell, and was therefore the more likely to be averse to a war between France and England.

‡ Ratcliffe, instead of Lord Byron, had once been thought of by Charles the First as Governor to the Duke of York in his infancy. He was a Privy Counsellor, and lived at Oxford during the siege, before which the Queen had desired him either to bring the Duke to her at Paris, or carry him to Ireland; but this Ratcliffe refused, on the plea that he dared not to convey any of the King's sons out of the kingdom without an express order from the King. In the "Life of James the Second," evidently written with authority from that Prince, speaking of this affair it is remarked, "which nicety, or I may rather call it indiscretion of his, might have cost his Highness dear, as being the occasion of his being put into the Rebells' hands." When the Duke of York was taken prisoner at Oxford by the Parliamentary army, Fairfax ordered Ratcliffe to continue with him, until the pleasure of the Parliament should be known; and he was as soone as he receaues it, and I assure you it will come very seasonably hither, wher ther is as much pouerty as you have knowne at Paris. I doubte Mr. Crumwell hath putt a periodd to your receipts, but it is not impossible that Dunkirke* and Ostende may proue as hospitable to our shippinge as Brest hath bene, for they say, upon closinge with france, the Rebells will have a briske warr with the Spanyard, and looke every day to heare that they are possessed of some considerable place in the Indyes, which is at last believed at Bruxells; wher they finde how they haue beene fooled. I am newly returned hither, hauinge beene kept in my way hither at the Hague by a greate sicknesse, for above a moneth, but God be thanked I am now well recovered, beyonde the hope of many of my frends, and contrary to the wishes of those who are not so: I hope I may live to see better dayes: I haue not heard from George Cartererett these very many monthes, though I am sure he hath many letters of myne upon his handes, so that you may tell him, I thinke he despayres, and hath given me ouer: God send us a good meetinge, wher you shall receaue all servuice from only discharged from his attendance on the Earl of Northumberland being appointed Parliamentary Governor to the Duke. In consequence of this early acquaintance, Ratcliffe retained much influence over James, to the great dislike of the Queen, and also in opposition to Lord Byron. He was at Jersey with Charles, and afterwards joined him in Flanders. He was also very active in caring for the Duke's interests, when it was reported that the King was dead in Scotland, three years before this period. See Clarendon's Life p. 124.

* Many prizes had already been carried into Dunkirk by the Jersey privateers; and in 1650 the Duke of York had been supported solely by the tenths which the captors paid him. See further a letter on this subject to the Spanish minister, in the Clarendon State Papers, vol. iii. p. 276.
Sir Edward Hyde to Sir Richard Browne.

Though it be now many moneths since I heard from you, I had not at this tyme troubled you, if by letters which I receaved the last weeke, I had not cause to believe that one which I writt above a moneth since to you, is miscarried: I then told you how seasonable your 200 pistolls would come to the Kinge, who hath bene and is still in straight enough, since which tyme it is receaued, but not till within these 3 dayes, it being returned very unskilfully to be payd at Amsterdam upon double usance.

I told you likewise in that, that his Ma\textsuperscript{y} would haue you giue a deputac\textsuperscript{on} to Mons\textsuperscript{e} Marces* to collecte and receaue the dutyes dew to him in 2 or 3 of the lesser and more obscure portes in Britanny, untill he should haue receaued the summ of 200 pistolls which are owinge to him, and he was well content to receaue them this way: I thought it more proper that the deputac\textsuperscript{on} should be given by you, then an immediate grante of it from his Ma\textsuperscript{y} to him, therfore I pray (if my former letter miscarryed) lett him know that you haue receaued such derections, and lett him have a proper instrument accordingly. I doubtte it will be very longe before he will out of those portes receaue that summ, but the request is the more modest, and could not well be denyed, his Ma\textsuperscript{y} lookinge upon the man as one who hath done him many services. You can exspecte little newes from us, who have only courage enough to looke for better tyme; the apprehensions the whole Empyre hath that it shall not longe inioy ther peace, and the terrour the Kinge of Sweade\† gives them by his inroade into Polande, wher he carrieys all before him, proove of no small pra\textsuperscript{e}iudice to our master,

I write now to you rather to lett you know that yours of the 16. of the last moneth is come to my hands, then to returne a full answer to it, which I cannot do till the next, and then I shall not fayle to do it, except by our intelligence out of ffранce I

* This journey to Frankfort has been already noticed. It excited some attention both in England and upon the Continent: for, in one of the papers of the day, a letter from Paris observes, after alluding to the newly-signed treaty with Cromwell, "In the mean time, it seems, the Princess Royall of Orange is expected here in January, she intending to bestow a visit upon the little Queen, her mother, and bring her all news from Frankfort fair; what further end there may be in the voyage is not known."
conclude that it is for the present to no purpose to do it in the way you propose; as I suppose it will not be, if the peace betwixt Crumwell and France be published, which I doubt it is, and then all your armado at Brest will be quickly discharged those harbours, and I heartily wish they may get off safely, without any prejudice or even violence offered to them to oblige Mr. Crumwell. If this falls out to be the case, and that you see ther is no more work to be done ther, you will not be the lesse intent, solicitous, and dextrous, to oblige the seamen to continue ther affection to his Majesty's service, and to continue ther commissions, since ther is no greater doubt we shall prepare a better reception for them at Dunkirk and Ostende, then they have found at Brest,* and your owne particular will not be neglected: I hope to be speedily able to say more to you upon this subject, and to tell you that we shall not be long confined to Cullen, and I pray dispatch such advises to me as soone as may be, as may be necessary to be considered in that traffique we are like to have with seamen, how we may give them encouragements enough and yet retain a competency for our Masters supporte.

I have not time to add more, having very much to doe, upon those greater alterac'ons which fall out, which truly I believe will carry us all wher we desire to be:† God send it, and you shall then have cause to believe me to be,

S'r,

Since my last to you, which was of the 9. of thie moneth, I have receaued yours of the 23. of the last moneth, and yesterday another of the 8th, which it may be ought to be of this moneth: you will not wonder that I make no hast in sendinge these dispatches which concerne your Admiralty, which no doubte is now at an end by virtue of this peace, so that if you parte fayre, and they suffer all the vessells to get out of ther portes, it is as much as I looke for: and if ther had been any more to be done ther, I should not haue moued the Kinge for such a letter to the Duke of York as you advise, till wee had knowne his Highn* pleasure, for for the Kinge to declare that he would abate as much of his fifteenths as the Duke would abate of his tenths, before wee know that he thinkes fitt to abate any thinge, were to putt him upon some disaduantage, and ther wante not those who would be gladd upon any occasyon to infuse an opinion of the disrespectes of many heare towards his Highn*. Therfore you should adjust all those thinges with his ministers, before any thinge be moued to come from hence: But at present all that designe is at an end, and wee must consider what conclusyons wee are to make to aduance our marityme affayres in fflanders, wher I hope wee shall finde all encouragement. Whateuer concessyons are to be granted, they must be to all alike, and not with distinction betweene rich and poore, which will interrupt all payment of dewes. I writt to you to send us any advise that upon your obseruance of those people, you thinke necessary to be obserued.

That which wee are sollicitous for is, to gett into fflanders,* which I hope wee shall do shortly, and not

S'r,

I haue yours of the 31. of January which came not to my handes till the last weeke, and I forbore to answer it till now, supposinge you would not be sooner come to Paris. For your men of warr, I know not what to say, they are so fantasticall and humorous, that till wee can exercize such a iurisdiction ouer them as to compell them to keepe good order, I care not how little we haue to do with them. In Spayne I heare they haue sent up an agent to Madrid, to offer to engage in that Kings seruice, and Capt. Martin at Dunkirke hath desyred a commissyon from that Admiralty: But I doubt not, when the Kinge himselfe shall be in Flanders, which I hope will be very speedily, and that by the next post I may send you newes to that purpose: those fryrgates which are manned with his owne subiects, will choose to come into his Ma'tys seruice, & take commissysons from him, and for the rest lett them do as they see cause: you shall do well to encourage Capt: Smith * and Capt: Beart to gett up as many seamen English as they can, and to come to Dunkirke or Ostende, wher they will be wellcome.

For your owne condicon, I am very sorry it is no better, yett in one respecte I did not thinke it so good, for I neuer imagined your receipte would have inabled you vpon the assignements the Kinge had given you to haue discharged all your debts at Paris, and thought it would haue proued well if you were inabled to pay those which were most crying and importunate, which God knowes the poore Resident

* Captain Smith was taken prisoner about a year afterwards, as related in the weekly journals. "Letters come from Plymouth which give an account of a good prize newly taken, and brought in thither by the Sapphire frigat. It bears the name of a Brest man-of-warr, new built, of 30 guns. He was met with about the Land's End, and had aboard two captains, the one named Meldrum, a famous pirate; the other named Smith, who sailed by virtue of a commission from Charles Stuart."

I am sure you doe not believe I envy you any advantage you haue reaped: I wish it greater with all my heart, and shall always contribute towards it with all my creditt; but trust me I am often putt to answers & replies that I know not how to go through with, when they who know the Duke of Yorke’s receipts as Admirall, confidently averr that the King’s haue not bene so little as 5000 pistolls, and enqyure how much hath bene payd to his vse. Therefore as soone as you can, send me such an accounte (which neede not be volumnious) as I may vpon occasyon satisfy his Ma’ in that affayre, that I may the more confidently propose any thinge on your behalfe, which I shall doe very heartily as,

‡ The Cardinal seems to have been reckoned a conjuror or prophet by some folks at this period. One of the London newspapers called the French Intelligencer says, "There hath been lately a prophesie found in the Priory of Cardinal Richelieu at Paris, written by his own hand, wherein he foretells the wofull calamities of the family of Stuarts, descending from the Lyon, that is, King James, for so he was called, by reason that he brought the rampant Lyon figured upon his breast, in the world with him. This ignorance of mine not onely deprivued me the contentment of being assured that I had soe worthy a friend soe neere my Royal Maister, butt also made me guilty of an omission of nott sooner giuing notice according to my duty of my returne unto this my former station: for which I humbly crave your Hon\textsuperscript{rs} pardon.

The French Court parted hence a weeke since, and remains yeett at Compeigne. Yesterday came newes that the Marl\textsuperscript{l} de Turene had defeated 4 Regiments of horse, and taken a small place: yf true, a good beginninge of this Campaigne.

Mr Locker, Mr Crumwells Envoye, followes the Court: before his going hence he declared to a person of quality, that he had by him, and would ere long produce, a Commission to be Ambassador; notwithstanding that I haue publiquely (since my returne hither) appeared in the French Court in presence both of this K. & Queene, and twice beene with the Count of Brienne, yet I find nothinge at all of any the least intimation to retire: * And the other day in conference with my Lord Jermyn, his opinion was that this State would permitt me to remaine here as long as his Ma\textsuperscript{ty} thought good: soe that I expect to heare what his Ma\textsuperscript{tes} pleasure will bee, in this particular: forbeareinge in the meane time to engage for the continuance of my house, or to make a new family: humbly intreating your Hon\textsuperscript{i}, that yf his Ma\textsuperscript{ty} thinke fitt to continue mee here, you will please to move for a settlement of my subsistence uppon some good and well assured funds, without which I shall soone lapse into a very sad condition.

In the conversacion I have had abroad in my travauil, as well as here in Paris since my returne had with the French Protestants, I find them generally much involved in Crumwells interests, he hauinge

Sr,

It is very true, I haue besydes your last of the 4: of this moneth, your other of the 21. and 28. of the last upon my hands, the subiecte of both which beinge such, as I could not discourse upon, before my L^d of Bristolls arriuall,† to whom you referred me, I forbore to say any thinge till I could speake to the purpose, and he arrived not till Sunday last:

† The hopes and designs of the Royal partisans, now carrying on a rapid intercourse with their friends in England, and seeing happy omens for themselves in the distrust manifested by Cromwell in regard to his own personal security, account for the tone and manner of this letter. Soon after its date Lord Bristol was left as the King's Agent at Brussels, whilst the King and his Court went to Bruges, &c. See the Clarendon State Papers, vol. iii. pp. 308—10.
and you will easily believe that in this little tyme we have not bene able to conferr of halfe the matters of importance which are necessary for present consultac'on: yet we have spoken of your businesse, wherein I perceive he is farr from hauinge any positive opinion, nor have either of us yett spoken with the Kinge of it: Wee haue many thinges under debate, which must be præliminary to any determinac'on in that pointe, therfore you must haue a little patience, and be confident if you are designed to continue that imployment, provisyon must be made for your reasonable supporte, and it cannot be most [more] secure then upon that pension, but whether you are to be continued ther I cannot yett tell; shortly wee may. I do not finde that the Queene or my Ld Jermin haue writ or sent any opinion upon it: I am of your opinion in the matter of Mon' Lyon, nor can I discover the least footestepps of a treaty betweene the 2 Crownes, nor is Madrid a place of that secrecy, but the Venetian Ambassadour in that Courte would discover it. I pray informe your selfe as particularly as you can of Mo' Orleanes, whose visitt in this season is not merely upon complement. It is not possible to give such an accounte of our affayres heare, as may satisfy the curiosity of our frends, since if what is intended be not kept secrett, wee shall have little frui'tes of it: trust me, so farr, as to be confident, our condic'on is very hopefull, and I am as confident that I shall lyue to see you at Whitehall, and serve you ther as,

Hauinge replyed as particularly as I can in my last to what concerns your owne particular, I should not at this tyme (when I have very much to do)

I receaved a letter from Mr. Bourdon, whom I well knew at my beinge at S' Sebastians, and I am gladd that ther is such a distinction made ther, for he writes me worde, that since the Edicte for the turninge out of towne all the English, Irish, and Scotts, ther is a seconde order, that excepts all those that can make it evident that they are good subiectes to his Ma'ty, and therefore he hath desyred such a certificate, havinge as he sayes hitherto preserved himselfe by producinge some letters which I writt to him at my beinge at Madrid: I have in the inclosed sent him what I conceave may do him good, and have derected it as he aduised, to Bourdeaux.*

We exspecte the Duke of Yorke here very speedily, and then wee shall come the sooner to a resolution in that pointe which concerns you. I pray lett us know more of Don Michel de Castile, and of Mr. Locker: I would be gladd you would send me (if you have it by you) the life of the Connessable De Desguynes, which they say is well written. satisfaction in it, as they wish; wee shall shortly I hope see the Duke of Yorke heare, and then that matter will be most properly and seasonably consulted; besydes, the case is now very different from what it was understoode to be, when you returned to Paris, for the Romance of Don Miguell will prove authentique History, and it may be Mr. Lockier may retyre with lesse glory then he entred, and S' Ri: Browne stay ther with more respecte: ther is one thinge no doubte you may depend upon, which is, if you are continued ther, some fitt assignac'on will be made for your supporte, and if you are called away, no doubte your Master will thinke of some other prouisyon and imployment for you. Our businesse does not goe so ill, but that wee may reasonably hope that wee shall all have somewhat to doe. The Declarac'on of the freedome of the Portes is now published accordinge to our heartes desyre, and many other evidences given us, of a full affection from Spayne, and if they do not do all for us that wee desyre, it is only because they are not able: nor are they so weake, and unable to helpe us, nor Mr. Cru'wel at so much ease or so confident of his new parliam* that wee have reason to dispayre of better dayes, or that we may not eate cherries at Deptforde agayne.

* An allusion to his own appointment as Lord High Chancellor of England, shortly after the Great Seal had been surrendered by Lord Keeper Sir Edward Herbert. Curious anecdotes respecting its surrender may be found in Clarendon's History, vol. iii. pp. 411, 412. It was not very long after this that the Duke of York was privately married to the Chancellor's daughter. A serious misunderstanding had for some time existed between Charles and the Duke, and a separation between them had actually taken place whilst the former, during great part of 1657, resided at Bruges.

SELECTION FROM THE CORRESPONDENCE

SIR RICHARD BROWNE,

AMBASSADOR AT PARIS

SIR RICHARD BROWNE.

The subjoined extracts are taken exclusively from the letters and papers of Sir Richard Browne, Evelyn's father-in-law, of whom such frequent mention is made in the Diary and Correspondence now brought to a close. They will be found to refer chiefly to matters strictly historical, having been selected for the occasional new facts they contribute to that series of remarkable events which form the subjects of the various correspondences contained in this volume. They require little illustration, beyond what has incidentally been supplied in notes already given. The first paper contains instructions for Browne's special embassy to Holland; but, with this exception, all the extracts given relate to his official residence in Paris, in the interval between 1642 and 1651. What followed the latter year has been the subject of the correspondence just given between himself and Clarendon. If the reader refers to the Diary, vol. i., p. 276, he will observe that it was shortly after the date when the last of these letters was written, the result of the fight of Worcester having put a decided close to all further Royalist effort for the time, that Sir Richard Browne sent his son-in-law Evelyn over to "compound with the soldiers," and take possession of Sir Richard's seat at Sayes Court, Deptford, with a view to permanent residence, "there being now so little appearance of any change for the better, all being entirely in the rebels' hands." Shortly after Evelyn had so left Paris, at which his young wife was to remain, with her father, till Sayes Court should be prepared for her reception, Sir Richard Browne had to communicate a piece of news of much domestic interest to his son-in-law, and his notes on the occasion may be given here not inappropriately, whether as specimens of Sir Richard's more intimate and friendly manner of writing, or as connected very closely with the family story of the Evelyns. The first is dated from Paris, on the 11th of May, 1652. "Dear Son,—Dick Hoare hath formerly given you notice of the safety of your lost half, or half lost Ben: Johnson, and will also tell you by what good fortune I have (paying the half-pistole) got possession of your letter post. I am now to acquaint you, that your wife will (God blessing her with safety) bring you a depositum you left behind you here, of far greater value, viz. a Hans in Kelde, a young cavalier, who hath within these few days unexpectedly discovered his vivacity, and plainly manifests his intention within few months to come forth, and be a citizen of this world. This (though yet a secret here) is so real a certainty, that I exceedingly joy to give you this first notice thereof. And if grandfathers love more tenderly their remote offspring, you will not I hope envy me my share in the great contentment, who so passionately wish you and yours all happiness, under God's eternal, and the temporary blessing of your ever dearly loving father, to serve you, Rl. Browne.”—The second is dated three days later, and addressed “My son Evelyne.” Thus it runs: “Dear Son,—Lest what I sent you by the last post should by accident have gone astray, I now repeat what much concerns you to know, that you may, as soon as may be, participate our joy, the nature whereof is to be diffusive. Your wife, by being since your departure so free from nausea's and other ordinary indications of child-bearing, hath so deceived us that, until very lately, we scarce other ways than in wishes thought of so great a blessing; of the certainty whereof there is now no doubt to be made, though as yet it be here so much a secret, that none but my wife and I and your maid do know it. God accomplish prosperously this his mercy, to his glory, your comfort, and the singular contentment of your dearly loving father to serve you, Richard Browne.”

Instructions for our trusty & well-beloved Servant, Richard Browne, Clerke of our Privy Counsell &c. (in 1640).

Charles R.

Hauing occasion to send a person of trust into Holland, unto our deare Sister the Queene of Bohemia, and our Nephew the Prince Elector Palatin, Wee are pleased to make choise of you for the imployment, and for your better direction therein, to provide you w'th the Instructions following:

You shall represent unto our Sister, and Nephew,*

* The Elector Palatine had been in England before this date, and was then elected Knight of the Garter. In consequence of the present negotiation, he did not proceed to England until 1643, two years afterwards. Charles the First may already have suspected the young Prince of the design which he afterwards did not scruple to carry into effect by joining the party arrayed against his uncle.
(wee beeing informed he hath a desire to passe over into these partes) how inconvenient it would be for our service if att present he should undertake the journey, and that with all, it can noe ways advantage his owne affaires, since we shall still haue the same care and affection for them, in his absence, as if he were present, and now especially in this Treaty between us and the States of the United Provinces, and the Prince of Orange, wherein his interests shall not be forgotten.

That for the paper with Sir Richard Cave* hath given us, Wee find it soe directly contrary to the interests of the States, and in itselfe impracticable, that from that ground, Wee cannot hope any effects conducible to the good of our Nephewes affaires, yet in the present Treaty we are resolued to endeavour ye interest of him, and the House Palatene, soe farre as the present conjuncture of affaires will permit, it being one of the principall motiues that induced us to harcken to this Alliance with the States, and the Prince of Orange.

You are further to giue our Sister and Nephew, all reall assurances of our loue and affection to them, and particularly of our desires, that all misunderstands (if such there chaunce to haue bin) that haue happened either in circumstance or otherwayes, concerning the ouvertures of this Marriage† intended betweene our eldest daughter and the Prince of Oranges son, may be taken away: Wee foreseing that nothing can be of more advantage to them in their present condition, then that there be a cleare understanding, and all reall friendship betweene them, and the Prince and Princesse of Orange: with

* This Sir Richard Cave appears to have been much engaged in the affairs of Holland and the Palatinate. In Bromley's Collection of Royal Letters he is mentioned by the Count Palatine in a letter to the Queen of Bohemia, as Captain Cave; he was then serving in the army, and occasionally employed in diplomatic affairs.

† The marriage took place on the 2nd of May, 1641, when the Princess was only twelve years of age; and it is a curious fact in Charles's private history, that it was celebrated with great magnificence in the interval between the sentence and the execution of the Earl of Strafford.
you are effectually to represent vnto them by all the arguments and reasons you can frame, and of what dangerous consequence the contrary may be to their interests and restitution.

You shall likewise give unto our Sister and Nephew, a true and particular knowledge of the state of the Treatyes betwene us and the States Ambassad"rs (as our principal Secretary shall informe you) as well of that of the Marriage, as of y"e Confederation, in the latter of which, we are resolved (as aforesaid) to take a special care of their interests.

You are to acquaint them, that although the two Treatyes are not come as yett to a conclusion, nevertheless having been pressed by the Prince of Orange, that his son might passe into England before his going to the Field, Wee haue so farre giuen our assent thereunto as that wee haue left it to him, to doe therein as he shall thinke fitt.

You are to impart these our Instructions vnto S"r William Boswell our Resident, and to take his advise in all things that may concern our service, and you are w"th him to addresse yourself in our name to the Prince & Princesse of Orange, & to passe like offices w"th them for the endeavouring & setting of a good understanding betwene our deare Sister, our Nephew, and them, according as wee soe earnestly desire, and their interest requires: Giuen under our Signe-manuall att our Court at Whitehall y"e 23"th of Febru: 1640.

Instructions for our trusty and welbeloved Richard Browne, Esq. one of the Clerkes of our Privy Councell, and our Agent w"th our good brother the most Christian King: (in 1641).

CHARLES R.

* Robert Sidney, nephew of the gallant Sir Philip.
our extraord'ry Ambassad' with our good brother the French King, in the government of our Realme of Ireland, as our Lieutenant generall there, and to that end being now to recall him from his employment in France: Wee haue that confidence of your fidelity, and abilities, and particularly of your experience in those parts, that wee haue thought fitt to make choice of you for to be our Agent there, and that you may the better acquitt your selfe in that charge, you shalbe provided w'th the Instructions following:

First vpon your arriuall in that kingdome, you shall addresse yo'reselfe vnto our said Ambassad' extraord'ry for to be by him presented vnto that King, to whom you shall deliuer yo' Tres of Credence, and impart your charge:

And when you shalbe thus admitted to his presence, you shall in due, and the best manner, lett him know the great affection wee beare to his person, and the good advancement and prosperity of him and his affaires, and how much wee doe desire, according to the antient friendshipp and strait obligations betweene us, to maintaine all good intelligence and correspondence. To w'ch end, that there may be nothing wanting on our part, We haue now, vpon the comming away of our Ambassad', sent you to reside there: And soe you are accordingly to make this your principall aime, as it is indeed the proper charge of all Amb'res, Legats, and Agents, to nourrishe and maintayne a good correspondence betwixt the two Crownes.

And therefore you are to informe yo'reselfe of all former Treatyes, and more especially of the last and most freshe in practice, betweene these Crownes, being the rule by w'ch the proceedings of the subjects of both sides are to be regulated.

And that you may better know wherein Wee, or our subjects, are any wayes concerned in those parts, whether in suites, processes, or otherwayes, you are to take all fitting and necessary informations from our said Ambassad', and what businesses shalbe left in agitation by him for ore service, you are in our name to continue the prosecution thereof, and to giue account of yo[r] proceedings therein.

Another part of your charge is, that you watch carefully over the motions of that State where you are, what treaties, alliances, assistances, or ennemities shalbe moued w'th other States openly, or vnder-hand, wherein our affaires may be any ways concerned; and for yo[r] better light and information herein, you are to keepe intelligence w'th our Ambassad'rs and Agents w'th other Princes, and States, to whom wee will giue orders to correspond w'th you.

And as there shall further occasion arise for you to negotiate in, for our service, you shall receive directions, either immediately from our selues, or from our principall Secretaries in our name, w'ch you are to obsereue & follow, as if it came vnder our owne hand, and from time to time to aduertise them (or vs as the importance of the occasion may require) of all yo[r] proceedings, and what soeuer else may come to yo[r] knowledge, w'ch may be usefull and necessary for the good of our affaires. —Whitehall the 23th of July 1641.

The extracts which now follow are from letters written by Sir Richard Browne whilst Ambassador at Paris. They generally, but not always, indicate to whom they were addressed; but the topics sufficiently explain themselves. In a few instances, a general abstract of the subject of the letter precedes the particular extract given.

Richd Browne, Esq; Ambass' at Paris writes to Sr Edwd Nicholas, Secretary of State—That by his Maj's late speech at . . . . Shrewsbury & by other advices, he hears the possibility of a thing which he hopes will never come to pass, that his Maj will be constrained to sell or engage his fairest parks or lands: that there is at Deptford certain pastures called Sayes Court, reserved in his Maj's hand for the special service of his household, for which being so near London, there may in these intruding times, be persons ready to deale: he beseeches S'r Edw. to move his Ma^y that they may not be sold, but if (w^ch God defend) his Ma^y sho^d have just cause to part from them, that he wo^d let some sufficient persons (whom he shall find out) to deale for them, have the first offer, not above 260 acres; no man shall give a clearer light than he will, for they have been long in the custody of his ancestors, by whom the dwelling house thereon was built at their own charge, & it is the only seat he has, & is the place wherein he was borne.

To Sir Edward Nicholas. 7 Nov. 1642.

That [in cypher] doth continue his assistance to the Irish, furnishing money to buy arms, w^ch they send away for Ireland; that he has made reiterated complaints by his Ma^ys express order, & in his name, with so little success that it is useless to endeavour any more. The Irish priests as well as the soldiers flock very fast into their country & pretend bishopricks and other benefices by donation from Rome. Col. what a miserable condition I am for want of some present supply of money, my friends haveing plainly signified unto mee that I must expect no more from them, or from my estate in England already engaged to its utmost extent.

By the same opportunity I likewise give y'r Hon'r notice of S'r Balt. Gerbiers manner of proceedinge here at his first arrival, since which he continues his frequent visits to the Queene, Princes, and Ministers, taking much uppon him, and using his Ma'ties name how hee pleases uppon all occasions, not onely givinge out here, but also writing into other parts (as I have received notice by letters from good hands) that he is sent hither by his Ma'ty to condole about other business of great consequence.—I shall be glad to know what y'r Hon'r thinkes of this kinde of carriage of his, and whether it bee his Ma'ties pleasure to have a pretended Ambassad' where he hath allready an avowed Resident.

The Elector Palatine to Mr. Browne.

Sir,

Y'rs of the 10/9 past, brought along w'h it soe good effects of y' endeavours in my affaires, as that besides y' owne assurances & my Resid't Pawls constant testimonie of y' assiduity, the contents of what it hath procured in my favour, doth clearely confirme me in confidence, & augment my obligation towards you.

My constant ill fortune hath taught me not to stand att this time much upon formalities w'th those whose helpe I need, therefore I must rest satisfied w'th what the mentioned letter wants thereof, in hopes it will be supplied w'th reallity when it comes to the push.

I thanke you also for y' good advertisements to Pawel, & am very glad to find by y' last concerning Mad' du Rohan,* the care w'th the King my gracious

* This lady was only daughter of the Duke de Rohan, one of the great leaders of the Huguenot party in France; and who signalised Vncle hath of those that doe him acceptable service. And soe desiring the continuance of yo' good offices in w' still further concerne the good of my interests, I assure you that I shall euer remaine Yr most affectionate frend, Charles.

Haghe the 7th of Sept: 1643.
"For Mr. Browne,* Resid' to the King of Gr: Britt: att Paris." Indorsed,
From Pr: El: Palatine 7: Sept. 1643.

Sir Richard Browne to Sir Edward Nicholas.
3 Sept. 1643.

[Cypher] concerning which moneys as I treated with 335. 420 (who hath very much contributed to the finding out and sending this summe) hee knowinge my case, of himselle offered mee to move 335. 501. to reserve here what part I would towards payment of my entertainement until they received his Mat'ies order to put it into my hands, but I replied himself in the affairs at Rochelle and the Isle du Rhé. In Hardwicke's State Papers there is a letter from Sir Henry de Vic to Lord Conway, dated from the Coast of France in 1627, in which she is said to be on the point of marriage with the Count de Soissons; a match which the Duke of Buckingham also describes as most desirable for the Protestant Cause. See Hardwicke's State Papers, pp. 34—38. It was at one time intended by Charles the First that Prince Rupert should marry Mademoiselle de Rohan: and in the Harleian Collection there is a letter from the King to Prince Maurice in favour of the match. The Elector Palatine, Charles Louis, the writer of the letter in the text, returned soon after its date into England, where he had long been a pensioner. His brothers were constant to the Royal cause; but he took part with the Parliament, and sat in the Assembly of Divines. The truth was, that, being the next heir to the English Crown in case the family of Charles the First were set aside, a section of the popular leaders had undoubtedly cast their thoughts towards him as a means by which some settlement might be effected similar to that which was made with the Prince of Orange between forty and fifty years later; and there can be as little doubt that the young Elector, who had nothing amiable or generous in his disposition, and who felt bitterly his dependence on his royal uncle's generosity and charity, caught greedily at the bait held out.

* Afterwards Sir Richard.
that though my necessities did much press me, yet I would not presume to stop or divert any supply whatsoever sent to his Maj. Here is a very consider-and ammunition*
able quantity of 259. 82. 91. 83. sent and sending from hence, the particulars wherof are I assure myselfe well knowne to his Maj and to y' Hon. —— prays for money & to be preserved from perishing.

To the same. 3 Sept. 1643.

—— the welcome newes of 20,000l. sterling which this good Queene sends to their Majes by her Ambass'.—They offered to put part into his hands, but he refused it, tho' his necessities were great, as he wold not intercept any supply sent to his Maj.

Much arms & ammunition sent—lord V. Mountague had 50,000 livres Tournois to purchase arms—35,000 only expended—prays the other part may be ordered for him.

To the same. 10-20 Nov. 1643.

The Queene is in a manner wholly governed by Card' Mazarine, who is secretly leagued with the Prince of Condé, but governed by Mons' de Chavigny; this last being by this means though in a close way more powerfull than ever. The whole triplicitly I feare will league noe very favourable influence on England.——Mr. Croft is gone to Rouen joyntly with my Ld V. Mountague & others to treat with som merchants for furnishinge his Maj with armes & ammunition, &c.

* The words "and ammunition" are struck through with a pen in the original.
To Lord Digby.

6 Jan. 1644.

Delivers the Kings passe for 100 barrells of powder, 12,000 weight of match, 2000 swords & 500 case of pistols to be by a merch' put aboard his Ma^r 2 men of war at Havre. The passe was drawn according to my memoire, for the king of Gr. Br. service, but the Secretary of State caused it to be new written, and those words left out; w'ch among many other things I have observed, makes me think those here very far from declaring for either side in England.

To the same.

25 March, 1644.

I have received your L'ps letter of 21. Feb. that some supplies of money will speedily be sent to me, & intimating his Ma^r gracious pleasure to conferre upon mee (not lesse unexpected than undeserved) the dignity of Baronett; as y' Lo^r has happily joyned these two together, se I humbly beseech . . . . they may not be separate butt for mutual support and ornament march hand in hand. To attend y' Lo^rs commands in both I have desired the bearer hereoff Mr. William Prettyman (a younger brother of my wife's) to make a journey to Oxford——within few dayes I shall have better opportunity to express my thankfulnesse more at large.

I humbly beseech yo' L^r to represent my most abundant gratitude to his Ma^r.

To Lord Jermyn.

3-13 June, 1644.

Y' Lo^r hath obtained from his Ma^r a grant of the perpetuity here in France of 2822 livres tournois p' an'. If yo' Lo^r should not already have made sure thereoff, I know not how Mr. Aubert's pretensions may interfere with this of yo' Lo; for three days since his Agent here signified his Ma's order to mee for payment to him of 25m livres and returning from him the diamond; which some not being to bee had out of the arrears, it is probable hee will now make a demand of the rents themselves, which if he doe obtain, and that they bee made over to him in that lowe and underhand rate hee expects, he will make up his summe, sweep away not only the rents themselves, but alsoe the remaininge part of the arrears.

To Lord Digby.

June, 1644.

The inclosed arret will lett yo' Lp see that I have at last finished the longe depending suite for recovery of a remainder of His Ma's portion-money longe since deposited here for the payment of certaine creditors & servants of His Ma. The rents or perpetuity tenn yeares since bought with this money, with the arrears of the sayd rents, I have been forced to wrest out of violent hands uppon the best terms I could; for to say the truth, they were in a manner swallowed up by some greedy cormorants in too great place and power here, who never thought to have thus regorged them to their true owner his Ma. Of the tenn yeares arreares of 2822 livres p' an. there are little above seaven at present to bee found in ready money (the rest being nott yet payed), which present money will all be disposed off partly by the arret itselfe, and partly for necessary compositions, charges, and gratuities (as shall appeare by my just and good account), so that to his Ma's profitt there will come cleare only the perpetuity or rents themselves, and betwene two or three yeares arreares. These rents stand his Ma in twelve yeares purchase, but by reason of the seasures the late French King and this have since these warres made uppon rents of this nature, and of the uncertaine condition of these times, they will not now bee sold at so good a rate as they may improve to after a general peace.

To Lord Digby.

7-17 June, 1644.

Writes earnestly for money—inevitable ruin must befall him—has not wherewithall to provide himself out of mourning, a new Coat and Liveries, wch will much tend to his Majesty's disreputation—"I appeall to all the world whether I have not in this absolutely dearest part of Christendom for these three yeares maintained his Majesty's honour beyond what could be expected from my quality in these distracted times, my estate lying all in Kent and Essex yielding little or nothing, the moneys I take upp comeing uppon much disadvantage, and a constant great interest paid."

To Lord Jermyn.

According to yr Lo's command to send you the Inglish newes, I now begin by this opportunity of Mr. Besse's departure: What London affords this inclosed printed will acquaint yr Lo. Besides which the letters containe little or nothinge, onely some hopes of misunderstandinge and diuisions amonge the Parliamentary Generalls.

Yesterday the Pr: Elector Pal. his Agent came to acquaint mee that His Elec: High: hee thought was by this time in London: and to declare the cause of his iourney thither to bee, partly to see what advantages he might reape to himselfe from his Ma by and Parl: according to both their promises, in case they treated an accommodac'ion; & partly to sollicit some supplies of money for yr Queene his mother and himselfe, without which they can neyther of them subsist any longer. And this hee desired mee to write to their Majesties. And I thinke the same excusatory account will bee brought within fewe dayes to yr Court by Pr. Edward, who was also yesterday with mee to consult where he might most speedily and most conueniently find His Ma^r.

The Duke of Orleáns is on his way hither, and yf what I heare be true, will visit his Ma^r ere long at Bourbon. Of the Duke d'Anguien's action at Fribourg, I will nott give an account till the lame Post bee come, and then I shall send it by a speedier conueyance. It shall suffice that by this sure hand I present my humble seruice to y'^ Lo^, and giue assurance of my diligent endeavours to obey y'^ commands. Beseeching y'^ Lo^ to take some speedy care for the subsistance of a creature of yours whose sole ambition it is to bee vsefull to you: Many haue alreadly passed by and pitied his condition; butt y'^ Lo^ is the Samaritan from whom alone his vrgent necessities expect that balme must cure them. In which happy omen I take the boldnesse to kisse y'^ Lo^ hands in quality off,

\[ Yr^ Lo^s, \]

RICHARD BROWNE.

PARIS 19 Aug. 1644.

Sr^,

After seuerall negotiations betweenee the Palais Cardinal and the Court of Parlament, the Queene Regent vppon Tewsday last signified to the Parlam^ that being well informed of their good intenc'ons and sincerity, she approued of their proceedings, willinge them to meet frequently and to continew dilligently their consultations for the publique good; w^th all acquaintinge them, that the Ennemy was vppon the ffrontier, and that the King wanted mony, wherefore they might doe well to bring theire resolutions to maturity w^thin the space of 8 dayes: since w^th satisfactory answere the Parlament is very busy in finding meane how to reforme the abuses in the gouvernement chiefly in that of the Kings reueneus, in which worke the rest of the Parlamets of ffrance will doubtlesse comply w^th this of Paris. And some great Ministers may perhaps be sacrificed to the people, who have already confessed their feares by dis-furnishinge their houses of their choicest moueables.

Heere is all possible care taken to furnish the Prince of Condé with mony, and heere is also much seeking after horses to sende to him, wherewith to remount his Causaliers; the Prince is with his army neere Guize, where he hath lately arrested a gent’ of Piccardy (whose name is Ragny) for hauing giuen intelligence to the Spaniard, and hauing drawne great pensions from them any time this 6 or 7 yeares.

The ffrench fleet consistinge of 13 shipps and 19 gallies hath presented it seflfe vppon the coast of Naples, but as yet without any success at all.

This weeke hath safely brought hither Mr. Langton, with all your noble tokens, for all which (particularly for the rare booke to mee) I render you my hearty acknowledgements, as also your two letters of 15. & 19. June, containinge (as allways of late) feares and hopes. God in his mercy direct thinges to some tolerable end or other. I wrote to Mr. Spencer this day seavenight, as to you also; and hope it went safe, though I find some of the former Post (none of mine, for I wrote not) were intercepted. Our Prince being disappointed of the somme of money hee expected from the French for his iourney, goes the beginninge of the next weeke to Callice, butt with lesse traine than hee intended, which is all I can say to you of that matter, onely that all his Ma’tes Priuie Councillors in France haue orders to attend his High’se at Callice: my Lord Treasurer, Lord Bristoll, Sir Ed. Nicholas, are on their way thither.

Our best respects to the good company with you in the Country; where I hope you injoy yourselves, and amongst other diuertisments with that of hay-makinge, the season for which now approaches; and ought (yf you haue there had soe wett a growinge time as here) to afford you store of exercise. Farewell, D. S.

Yours for euer.

From Sir Ric: Browne.
S'r,
I know not yet what judgment to make, or what the euent will bee of the affaires now in agitation betweene our Royall and our pleadinge Pallace heere. For notw^thstandinge that the exiled members of the Parlament be restored; that the reuocation of the Intendants out of the Provinces bee resolved (three onely excepted) namely, in the Lyonnois, in Champaigne, and in Piccardy, where theire employment is restraned onely to the affaires of the armies and that y^ Queene hath condescended to y^ erection of a Chamber of Justice, as they terme it, w^th is to consist of a selected number of Parlament men, whereof the Kinge (to saue the reputac^on of his authority) is to haue the nomination, and is established to inquire, and informe against financiers, partisans, and others that haue misbehauc'd themselves: yet it will be a difficult matter to reconcile other differences, for there is much dispute about the remittinge y^ arrears of the Tailles of y^ yeares 44, 45, and 46, and about abatinge of the 8^th part of the Tailles of the yeare 47, and the fourth part of 48 and 49; about the regulating the impositions upon the entry of merchandises, about the reuokinge those Edicts by which the rents vpon the Towne house and the wages of Officers are diuerted to the Kings vse, and generally whatsoeuer almost hath passed w^thout the verificac^on of the Parlament, is subject to question. Nor is the Counsell altsgeather complyant w^th the Court of Parlament, haung lately by their arrest cashiered an arrest of Parlament against the Dutchesse of Aiguillon. Nor is the Parlament vndivuided in itselse, the Kinge haunge a party there amongst whome the S' Boulanger, Conc'. in the first Chamber, two daies since pleadinge very earnestly on the Kings side, in behalf of the Partisans in whose handes he is sayd to haue great sum'es of money, fell downe dead in the House, wherevpon the Duke of Orleans retired, the meeting dissolued, and the people conclude this blow to bee a judgment of God vpon him for defendinge soe bad a cause.

Mars" de Gramont is come hither, whose privat businesse being not yet knowne, what appears is that he hath addressed himselfe to the Parlament to acquainte them wth the necessityes of the army, and to demand supplyes of them, seeing all other meanes of raysinge monyes are now, by their stirringle, soe disordered, that the new sur-intendant can neither by intreatyes or threats dispose the partizans to aduance one penny till they see farther what settle-ment these disputes will produce.

The ffrench fleete is returned from the coast of Naples (not hauinge made any impression at all vpon that people) to Piombino & Portolongone. Nor doe I heare that Prince Thomas is yet embarqued.

My Lord Jermin went hence towards Callice Munday last. The Queene is returned to St. Ger- mains. My Lord Marq$ of Ormond prepares for Irland. And my L$ Marq$ of Newcastle goes next weeke towards Holand by the way of Flanders, with his Lady, &c. God blesse you and vs. And send vs a happy meetinge.

Yours ever to loue and serue you.

From Sir Ri. Browne.

The businesse of the Parlament this weeke hath been to deliberate vpon, and examine the declaration wch the King brought them, hauinge appointed fower of theire members to make report thereof vpon the 16th of this moneth; in the mean tyme they make great difficulty to obey that part thereof, wherein the King com'andes them not to assemble any more in the Chambre St. Lewis; and this notw$ standing that the Duke of Orleans hath severall tymes beene wth them to maintaine the King's authority, and to vrge the conueniency, yf not the necessity, of theire obedience; so that, by what yet appeares, the Parlam$ yf they meeete not in the Chambre St. Lewis yet they will doe theire businesse in some other place, and perhaps at last make a foule house; for that is certaine, that some other Parliaments of France doe manifestly declare and followe theire example.

The Prince of Condé findinge great difficulties in the reliefe of Tourné* is encamped at Bethune, there expectinge the succors y' Erlack, Vaubecour, and others are to bring to him.

At Naples the affaires betwene the King and people (ill satisfied wth the Spaniards non-performance of treaty, and murmoringe by reason of the scarcity of bread) are againe fallen into great dis-order; insomuch as it is thought the French fleet may therevpon make yet an other journey to attempte some new impression in that Kingdome. The newes of the seidge of Cremona is confirmed, not without hopes of the speedy takinge thereof.

The Marquis of Ormond is vpon his departure for Irland, Wee are here, God be prayed, in good health. Butt when will our deare Brother William come? I am glad to heare our cottage hath beene dignified with such good company as your brother, to whom I longe to present my seruice. Our honest cousin Stefens (who will well deserue your acquaintance, and whom I recommend vnto your affections) will perhaps by that time these come to you, bee arrived. Which yf hee bee, I pray present my seruice to him, and soe with our relatius cordiall affections, I rest

Yours euer.

PARIS, 3 Augt 1648.

Our Court wants money, and liues very quietly at St. Germains: where no peere appeares but my Lord Jermin. The Lord Marq. of Worster, the Lords Digby & Hatton, though yett in France, yet liue for the most part in Paris.

From Sir Ri. Browne.

* Note appended: "Which is lost."
Since ye Com’ittinge of the King’s declaration to fower Members of the Parlament, to bee by them examined wth order to make reporte thereof on Munday next, the Parlament hath followed their ordinary course of businesse, and this interim seemes to bee a kind of truce betweene the Royall and ye pleasing Pallece.

The losse of Tourné hath not yet exasperated ye Prince of Condé into any newe vndertakinge against the Spaniard, wch now vppon ye joyninge of Erlack’s troops vnto him, it is expected hee shoulde, soo that probably wee shall soone heare of his remoue from Bethune. In this stationary, or rather retrograde, condition of the ffrench affaires in flanders, the certaine expectation of the taking Cremona, and the weaknesse of the Spaniard in Catalonia, are very considerable supports; but aboue all, the relaps of Naples into (as they heere thinke) a more desperate state than euuer, doth raise their mindes, and giues here great hopes of the losse of that Kingdome to the Spaniard. In order to wch the ffrench fleete hath set saile for L’Abruzzo, there to joyne wth the Conte de Conuersano, who hath reuieued ye rebellion and is at the head of a considerable army.

The Com’andeur de Souuray prepares for his journey into Holland, in quallity of Ambassador from the Religion of Malta, there to demande restitution of the Com’andaries, wch the States of Holland doe possesse.

The Duke of Beaufort (who ’tis thought hath not beene out of ffance) attended wth 40 or 50 horse, hath lately (as is saide) appeared in Brittany, whereupon there are some troopes sent thither, and into Normandy, to secure those Provinces. And to Cardu Mazarin they speake of giuinge a guard of 100 horse, for the safety of his person.

The Marquiss of Ormond two daies since begane his journey towards Ireland.

Thankes for yours of 28 & 31. most wellcome.
All your relations here salute you most cordially. To my brother yf nott com away, & to my cousin S\textsuperscript{r}. yf arriued, present my loue and service, the like to all the good company with you. Farewell, my deare S.

Yours for euer louinge.

Paris. 15 Aug. 1648.
From Sir Ri. Browne.

Yf thorough the difficult and hazardous passage, these lines come safe to you, they will conuey my serious and hearty congratulations of that condition you are now in neere his Ma\textsuperscript{t}, wherein his gracious favoure and your owne merit haue concurrently placed you. Though I haue receiued noe letter from you since your arrivall in Schotland, yett I injoy the fruits of your care and kindnesse towards mee, witnesse the two warrants of his Ma\textsuperscript{t}, dated ye 4 Aprill 3\textsuperscript{o} Car. 1651, directed to Prince Rupert and to Mr. Windam in my behalfe, for which, as I render all humble acknowledgements to my most Gracious and Royall Maister, soe, I giue you also my hearty thankes for beinge soe happily instrumentall in a concernment of mine, though hithertoo neyther of them haue proueed any way aduantageous unto mee, for I can giue noe account where Pr. Rupert is since his comminge into the Ocean, and takinge some rich shipps belonginge to the Kinge of Spaine, and to the Genoese: And when I addresse any demands to Mr. Windham, hee makes mee noe returne butt these kind of warrants, such as the inclosed, of which he hath many. Soe that unlesse his Ma\textsuperscript{t} be pleased eyther to thinke of some other way of supply for mee, or direct some more effectuall commands to Mr. Windam, your kindsman and his family must (for ought I see) begge bread (or starue) in the streetes of Paris. In March last Mr. Windam assigned mee a thousand guilders of Dunkirke money, which makes little aboue fourescore pistolls here. Butt the man (one John Arden) in whose hands he had deposited the prize goods, out of which this summ was to bee raysed, is soe insoluent that he lyes in prison eyther nott able or not willinge to gine any satisfaction. The truth of this will bee confirmed to you by word of mouth by Mr. Edgman, of whose safe arriuall with you, and returne into these parts, I should be gladd to heare.

The affaires of this kingdome are in a dubious condition, occasioned chiefly by reason of some jealosies betweene the Queene Regent and the Princes; to which the neere approachinge majority (the 6th. 7th.) will, in probability gie a period, one way or other, by a more firme settlement of the authority, ministery, and direction of affaires. As for the aspect towards vs, all I can say to you is, it will bee answerable to the successe of his Majies affaires in schottland, vpon which they here looke as the North Pole-starre by which they intend to steere. Our good Queene spends much of her time of late in a new monastery at the end of Queene Mother’s Cours (formerly the faire and pleasant house of Mar1 Basompeere at Challiot) of which shee is the titular foundresse; and the sweete Duke of Yorke doth here subsist vpon the allowance of one thousand crownes a month payd him from this state, beinge greatly esteemed by all for his comeliness and personall dexterity, in his behauiour and exercises.

Amongst all the publique and priuat calamities wherwith it hath pleased God to visit my poore family, wee yet (by His gracious blessinge and mercy) injoy our healths, and the hopes of a better condition, when eyther our humiliations, or our enemies sinnes shall moue the Divine power to looke more faavourably vpon vs; in order to the obtaininge wheroff I yet make shifte to keep vp a chappell and the Inglish Liturgie in my house, where, by ordinary and extraordinary devotions wee implore Gods blessinges vpon his Majies person and just cause. To that diuine Omnipotency recom mend ing you (with all our cordiall and kind salutes) I rest,

Dear cousin,

Y' most affectionate kindsman and faithfull humble servant,

R. Br.

I pray present my service to all such worthy friends of mine of our owne nation, in whom you find any memory of, or kindnes for, mee. Butt, faile nott to render mee most louinge and most respectfull to my noble friend to me still (for I know nott his new titles) Mr. William Murray.

Postscript. Extract of a letter from Nantes. 15th Aug't. Prince Rupert is arrived with his prizes in Portugall, 15 leagues from Lisbone, and there hee fits his shipps with some others that belonge to the Kinge of Portugall, to goe against the Kinge of Spaines gallions. This is written by a good hand from Lisbone.

Wee heere hope the newes of Schottland, and the defeat in Fife, is nott soe bad as the London prints would make vs beleue. I pray God send us some comfortable tidinges, and bless his Ma'ty. with victory and successe in all his undertakinges.
